SPORTING NEWS

ON THE GRIDIRON.

Word has been received here that the Elizabeth Y. M. C. A. football team has disbanded for the season owing to the fact that a number of their best players are disabled.

The football game between the C. A. C., of Westfield, and the A. A. C., of Plainfield, will be played on the Orange Field Club grounds, tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock.

Orange Field Club will play Company C on the Y. M. C. A. grounds Saturday afternoon. The Alis team was to have played the Company C team on that day but owing to the number of players who are nursing bruises Manager Chandor decided to cancel the game for this Saturday. A practice game will be played tomorrow night at the accustomed place on Westervelt avenue. It is desired that the entire team and "subs" be present. The Company C team outweighs the O. F. C. by forty pounds to the man. The local team leaves here on the 1:18 train.

ROD AND GUN.

James DeGraw, George Frazee and William Totten spent yesterday gunning in the vicinity of Mount Horeb. They bagged a total of seven rabbits, three squirrels and two raccoons.

Frank Vanderhoof and his father-in-law, S. H. Peer, of West Front street, have returned from a successful hunting trip at Corn Valley, northern New Jersey. They shot thirty-five rabbits, forty-three quail, one woodcock, one partridge and two grey squirrels.

GOLF.

There will be a continuation of play for the Golf Committee and Boys' cups on the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course tomorrow.

Tricks at Pool and Cards.

There was a fine exhibition of champion pool playing and tricks with cards at the Park Club, last evening, by Fred Hart. His work was very clever and he won hearty applause from those present, including many members and their wives. The player sustained his reputation, that of putting all the balls in the pockets with one shot on the pool table.

Engaged a Lawyer.

Frank Haulenbeck, of this city, who will answer to the Grand Jury for a charge of assault and battery preferred against him by Mrs. Annie Holmes, has engaged Lawyer William G. DeMeza to look after his interests. The case will be heard next week.

Cured of Piles After 40 Years.

Mr. C. Haney, of Geneva, Ohio, had the piles for forty years. Doctors and dollars could do him no lasting good. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cured him permanently. Invaluable for cuts, burns, bruises, sprains, lacerations, eczema, tetter, salt rheum, and all other skin diseases. Look for the name DeWitt on the package — all others are cheap, worthless counterfeits. L. W. Randolph.

STAMPS OF NEW DESIGN

THEY WILL SOON, HOWEVER, BE PUT INTO GENERAL CIRCULATION.

Bear the American Flag and the New Picture of George Washington.

There will be received at the Plainfield postoffice in a few days a new series of postage stamps which have been designed and approved by the postoffice department and will soon be in general circulation. The present red two-cent stamp will be retired and a more artistic stamp will take its place. The American flag will be used in the design for the first time since 1869, and Houdon's profile of Washington, so long in use, will give way to Gilbert Stuart's famous painting of "The Father of Our Country."

On the new stamp the likeness of Washington will be the most distinctive feature, occupying the central oval, which will be slightly smaller than the current issue. Above the oval in a panel will be the inscription, "United States of America." Occupying about two-thirds of the length on either side will be seen the American flag draped, forming a background on which the oval appears to rest. Below the bust will appear the name "Washington," in small figures in each corner the date of his birth and death.

The Stuart picture of Washington has not been used since 1847, when it formed the basis of the 10-cent stamp used in that year. The Washington design with its changing denominations continued until 1869, when it gave way to the Houdon profile of Washington, which appeared first on the three-cent issue.

When the American flag was used in the issue of 1869 it was on a denomination seldom seen, the 30-cent denomination. Petitions have been received for many years back by the postal department asking that the flag be used in the next design of stamps, but it is understood that mechanical difficulties prevented a compliance with this apparently general request. It was especially urged in connection with the Columbian series of 1893 and with other world's fair sets. The flag design on postage stamps is frequently seen on the postage of republics. The Boers, the Hawaiians, Haytians, Cubans and others of the South and Central American republics give prominent places on their stamp to the national emblem.

Resolutions of Condolence.

At a meeting of the vestry of the Church of the Holy Cross, held on Monday, Nov. 3, 1902, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God, in His unerring wisdom, to take out of this world the soul of our deceased brother, Edward C. Perkins, a man highly honored and respected by all, a faithful communicant of the church and for many years a fellow-member and associate in the vestry; and

Resolved; That this vestry has heard of the death of our esteemed and honored member with profound sorrow, and that we desire to place upon record our sense of personal loss, our thorough appreciation of his uniform courtesy, his lovable character and signal ability and of the debt of gratitude which this parish will always owe to him and shall ever continue to cherish in our memory his strong personality, his kindly disposition and rare gifts.

Resolved; That these resolutions be recorded in the minutes of this vestry, that a copy be sent to the family and published in The Churchman and the Plainfield local papers.

The Colt Was Too Lively.

Stories of Abraham Lincoln never seem to lose their charm. The latest anecdote tells of how Mr. Lincoln, when he lived in Springfield, was seen coming away from church unusually early one Sunday morning. The sermon could not have been more than half way through. His son "Tad" was slung across his left arm like a pair of saddle bags, and Lincoln was striding along with long and deliberate steps toward his home. On one of the street corners he encountered a group of his fellow townsmen. Lincoln anticipated the question which was about to be put by the group, and, taking his figure of speech from practices with which they were only too familiar, said: "Gentlemen, I entered this colt, but he kicked around so I had to withdraw him."

Enthusiasm of a Dying Scientist.

The first penguin we met, says Prof. C. E. Borchgrevink, the Antartic explorer, in an article on Penguins, arrived on the 14th of October, 1899, at Cape Adair, in South Victoria Land, thus long before the ice had broken up. I killed him at the request of my zoologist who was dying at the time. The man knew that his death was only a question of hours, but he had looked forward to the arrival of the birds, and the news of this first arrival excited him. He begged us to kill and dissect the bird before him, although he himself was to follow the bird into the mystery of death half an hour afterwards, and he knew it! He showed the utmost interest in the operation, and dictated scientific notes as he watched it till within 15 minutes of his dissolution.—Leslie's Monthly.

Where Smoking Is Incessant.

In Polynesia, China, Japan and Siam smoking is incessant; in Burmah the Burmese mother takes the cheroot from her mouth and puts it to the lips of her nursing babe while the child purses its tiny lips and puffs away with every indication of pleasure. The Burmese girl smokes a 'whackin' white cheroot." Kaffirs habitually smoke cigars with the lighted ends in their mouths and their tongues adroitly tucked out of harm's way. Even Stanley's pigmies of Central Africa are inveterate smokers. The sun never sets on the smoking world, for before the white man of the occident puts down his pipe at night the yellow man of the orient has lit his matutinal cheroot.

County Attorney Codington said that the matter as stated had been called to his attention, and that Mr. Schultz had demanded damages in the sum of $100. After investigation he had found that a light had been placed at the culvert in question, but that the same did not light the excavation in a thorough manner; he was also of the opinon that Mr. Schultz was guilty of contributary negligence. Correct Breathing for Consumption.

It is a curious fact that consumption, the scourge of civilization, is not found within the arctic or antarctic circles. It is probable, however, that this immunity from consumption is in large part due to the fact that the clothing is so constructed that it does not restrict the movements of the body in the slightest degree, and gives an opportunity for the freest activity of the chest in breathing.—Good Health.

Domestic Bliss.

Meeker—Did you tell the cook that I kicked about the roast at dinner last night?

Mrs. Meeker—Yes.

"What did she say?"

"She said I might inform you with her compliments that there was no string tied to you and if her cooking didn't suit you it was up to you to take your meals elsewhere."—Chicago Daily News.

He Wouldn't Tell.

"Oh, Willie!" exclaimed Willie's sister; "when did you buy your Panama hat?"

"To-day," replied Willie, proudly.

"How much did it cost?"

"Sister, it is very bad form to inquire th cost of a Panama hat."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

The One Great Need.

"It's a funny thing to me," soliloquized the one with the pole, "that in these days o' progress in invention somebody hain't got up a labor savin' device fer catchin' fish. Now, I s'pose that soon's I get asleep some fool fish'll grab that bait an' I'll have to wake up an' pull him out."—Indianapolis News.

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887 — PLAINFIELD, N. J., SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1902. — TWO CENTS A COPY—$5 A YEAR.

GREAT BUILDING BOOM IS NOW IN PROGRESS IN THIS CITY

There Are Seventy-Seven New Buildings Now in Course of Erection in Plainfield Today.

BESIDES ALTERATIONS BEING MADE

IT IS GREATEST RUSH THE CITY HAS KNOWN SINCE THE PRESENT ORDINANCE WAS PUT INTO FORCE.

Not Only Are Handsome Residences Springing Up On All Sides, But Industrial Concerns Have Erected New Factories and Great Business Blocks Are Rising in Centre of Town—Thousands of Dollars Are Being Spent Daily in the Various Building Trades.

Plainfield has enjoyed the reputation of being the most progressive city of its size in this State and the great progress made in the building industries in this locality during the past year or more bears out this reputation fully. Known far and wide as a city of handsome residences and fine streets it is but natural that progress should be made but the records in the office of Building Inspector T. O. Doane show that during the past year there have been more new building erected than in any year of the past decade.

The new buildings have not been residences only but new stores have been erected and on the outskirts of the town immense industrial plants have been rearing their tall chimneys skyward and already the hum of rolling wheels and the clang of machinery can be heard behind the long brick walls. These new factories have been locating along the railroad tracks and consequently have not marred the beauties of the city as a residential community. Intead, they have increased the industrial importance of the city to a marked degree.

During the past year there have been more buildings erected in this city than at any time since the building ordinance went into force. At present there are seventy-seven buildings in course of erection within the city limits which is not inclusive of the thousands of dollars which are being spent on alterations and improvements to dwellings and stores which are not extensive enough to have a building permit issued.

Within a year a little less than a million dollars has been spent on building and improvements in this city. A person may go from one end of the city to the other and on every hand he will see indications of the great activity in the building industries. New building are springing up on every side. From the extreme West End to the pretty environments of Netherwood one may hear the noise of the carpenter's hammer and the scrape of the stone mason's trowel as new residences are being erected for new comers into this city.

A few of the more expensive houses taken at random from the list in the possession of the Building Inspector, which are now in course of construction may be interesting of note. J. C. Manning has built four handsome residences during the past year each valued at about $10,000, which he has sold to out-of-town people who have moved their families here. Then there is the handsome residence which was started last winter at Netherwood for W. W. Alpaugh. Another is the fine dwelling built and completed this year at the corner of Watchung and Kensington avenues for S. A. Ginna. The handsome addition to the house of Mrs. Ruth Lounsbury on LaGrande avenue and the handsome stable attached are now one of the show places of the town.

Another extensive building which is now in the course of construction and can be pointed to as an indication of the progressiveness of the town, is the new Muhlenberg Hospital. This building is already one of the principal points of interest in this city.

C. L. Moffett is building a handsome new residence on Park avenue which is rapidly nearing completion, and at the corner of West Eighth street and Arlington avenue another fine new residence is being erected for H. G. Squires. N. B. Smith's new home on the corner of Madison and Stelle avenues, is also rapidy nearing a tenantable condition.

These are only a few of the handsome homes now rearing their graceful walls skyward. Other structures are in course of construction in the city which are doing their part toward increasing the industrial importance of Plainfield.

Last year the Scott Press Works secured a permit for a large two story addition to their already extensive plant which was completed this summer. The Hibbard-Rodman-Ely Safe Works are also adding four mammoth factories to their plant which means an outlay of many thousands of dollars and then there is the Pederick-Ayres Company, iron workers, who are also erecting great factories to meet the growing demands of their business. Other concerns which are building plants in addition to their present factories are the Pond Tool Works, and the "old oil cloth factory" and the Crescent Embossing Company.

These mills, extensive as they are, have not taken from the city the reputation of being a desirable residential town. Instead, they have been the means of helping the city to grow by bringing to the merchants of the community an increase of business and thus adding a commercial importance to the town as is evidenced by the extensive improvements being made on East Front street where one of the most important concerns of the town is building a handsome new store.

The store of Woodhull & Martin, the foundation of which has already been built, when completed, will be one of the handsomest in the county and means an outlay of over $50,000. The improvements to the Babcock building, the most attractive business block in the city, are now underway at a cost of over $100,000.

The churches in the city have also felt the activity in the building boom and the Swedish church, at the corner of West Sixth and New streets, which has been in the course of construction for almost a year, is practically completed and will be opened Sunday, November 30. The banks have also benefitted from the gradual growth of the city and within the past year the building on East Front street, where the Plainfield Trust Company is now located, has been remodeled and is now one of the principal banking houses in the town.

Each day new building permits are granted by the Inspector which show that the boom is not a temporary one and shows also that the city of Plainfield has started to grow so that within the next ten years it may rank in the State but one of the principal industrial and commercial centres in this part of New Jersey.

COAL TAKEN BY WHOLESALE

FULLY FIFTY TONS DISCOVERED IN CELLARS IN TERRILL ROAD VICINITY.

Patrolman Mattox Made an Investigation of That Locality—Arrests May Follow.

Some idea of the loss the New Jersey Central Railroad has suffered from coal thieves working on its trains in the Fanwood cut was gleaned by Patrolman Mattox, yesterday, when he visited the cellars of many of the Italian residences in the vicinity of Terrill road.

A conservative estimate made by him after his tour makes the amount of anthracite taken from the stalled trains at least fifty tons. Some of the bins contained from one to five tons and the residents admitted stealing it. One and all expected to be arrested but it was not the purpose of the officer to do so as his search was merely for the purpose of verifying his suspicions.

The railroad detectives have been informed of the discovery and it remains with them whether any punishment is to be meted out. In the meantime a close watch will be maintained on the company's property in the Terrill road district.

FIRST MEETING OF SERIES

BEGINNING OF N. Y. AND PLAINFIELD SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST CONFERENCE.

Held in Parlors of Local Church Last Evening, With a Very Large Attendance.

The first meeting of the series in connection with the yearly conference of the New York and Plainfield Seventh-Day Baptist churches was held in the parlors of the Seventh-Day Baptist church last evening, with an unusually large attendance of members, some being present from South Jersey and Westerly, R. I. The service was in the nature of an evangelistic one and Rev. E. B. Saunders, of Shiloh, was in charge. He gave an enthusiastic Gospel talk along evangelistic lines and thoroughly awakened those present by his earnest words. After his talk a great many gave testimony and offered prayer for the success of the meetings to follow.

This morning at 10:30 o'clock, a regular sermon was preached by Rev. E. F. Loofboro, pastor of the New York church, who was recently installed into his charge. It was a masterly discourse and had a tendency to quicken all in Christian living.

This afternoon the regular session of the Sabbath-school was held, to be followed by the weekly Christain Endeavor Society meeting. The meeting will be conducted by Esle F. Randolph, of the New York church. This evening there will be a talk by Mrs. Luther Davis, who has been engaged in mission work in Arkansas, followed by a sermon by Rev. N. M. Mills, of Shiloh.

Tomorrow morning Rev. L. E. Livermore, of New Market, will deliver the sermon, followed with a few short papers on the work of the church. The conference will close at noon tomorrow.

GOING ON STAGE.

Local Talent Organizes a Vaudeville Company to Go on Road.

B. C. Firstbrook, F. M. Brown and Ira C. Bowers, all of this city, have joined forces and embarked in a theatrical enterprise of no mean proportions. They have formed an organization to be known as the Eastern Vaudeville Company, which will shortly begin a tour of the surrounding counties and perhaps eastern Pennsylvania. Rehearsals are now being held daily by members of the enterprise, who are mostly local artists, and the first performance will be given in Somerville December 7. Augustus Bowers has been elected advance representative of the concern.

PASTOR FOR MARCONNIER.

H. G. Tulp, of New Brunswick, Has Accepted the Call.

H. W. Marshall has received word that H. G. Tulp, of the Seminary at Rutgers College, has accepted the call to the pastorate of Marconnier chapel and he will assume charge Sunday, November 23, at which time the services will be held in the afternoon after Sunday-school, instead of the evening. The members of the chapel are much pleased that Mr. Tulp has consented to take the place vacated by Mr. Purdy.

BELIEVES THAT THEY ARE CLEVER IMPOSTERS

Foreigners Seeking Subscriptions to Build a Church in Their Native Land.

THEY VISITED THIS CITY

REV. MR. EARP TELLS OF THEIR RATHER IMPROBABLE STORY.

He Refused to Aid Them—Bishop McFaul Has Issued Warning Against Them—Now Heard of Soliciting in Trenton.

A news dispatch from Trenton says that two foreigners representing themselves as natives of Mesopotamia, have arrived in that city and have been making a general canvass soliciting money, which, they say, is to be used for the benefit of a church in their native land. One of the two is discribed as being unable to speak the English language at all and the other is dressed in the garb of a priest or minister.

These men applied for assistance to Bishop McFaul and he, believing that the men are imposters, has issued a warning to his parishioners to beware of the men and cautions them against giving these men any money.

The description of these men sent out in the statement of Bishop McFaul corresponds to the description given to a Daily Press reporter yesterday morning by Rev. Edwin L. Earp, pastor of the Grace M. E. church, who said that a week or two ago two men came to him at his house and asked him for some money which, they said, was to be used to erect a church in Asia. He questioned them closely and according to their story they had been in this country some time securing money which they had been sending back to their native land where the church was in the course of construction.

After further questioning the pastor saw that the men did not have a straightforward story and refused to give them any money. He told his suspicions to a reporter of The Press and said that he thought at the time that it was rather unusual for the men to come to this country to collect money for the church as their expenses here and back again would probably be more than they could collect in some time.

While the reporter was at the house the doorbell rang and at the entrance stood a foreigner who had a similar story and asked the pastor for assistance. The pastor being convinced that the fellow was a confederate of the two who had visited him on the same errand two weeks before, refused to give him anything.

Mr. Earp said that the fellow had a number of letters in his possession purporting to be from prominent church members in Vermont and Connecticut but they were not enough to convince the pastor that the men were giving a truthful story.

It is believed that the men have been working on the sympathies of pastors in many of the cities between here and Trenton.

NAMED PAPER.

Title Selected for High School Publication Soon to Make Its Initial Appearance.

At a meeting of the Board of Editors of the City High School paper held yesterday afternoon, "The Oracle" was decided upon as the name of publication to be published by the High School. From the cover designs submitted by various members of the paper. The design represents two high school flags, crossed behind a shield bearing the letters "P. H. S." The coloring will be red and blue, the colors of the school. The bid for the printing of the paper was awarded to Thomas H. Stafford and the first issue will appear December 3. The reports from the different editors showed all branches of the work to be well under way and all departments are hard at work upon the first issue.

ORGANIZED AID CONFERENCE

THE FIRST GATHERING OF COMMITTEE WORKERS HELD YESTERDAY.

Miss Williams, of New York College Settlement, Addressed the Meeting.

The first conference of the committees of the Organized Aid Association was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Miss Zaidee VanBoskerck, at 542 West Seventh street, when Miss Williams, of the College Settlement Workers in New York, addressed forty or more people and told in an interesting manner of the work being done in that city.

After the talk tea was served to those present and the work was again talked over in a general way.

It is the intention of those who are foremost in the work to hold these conferences every other week during the winter and occasionally holding special meetings like that of yesterday when other societies will be asked to attend the meeting. The regular meetings will be held in the morning at the offices of the Organized Aid Society on West Front street. The special meeting will be held at the homes of the members in the afternoons when, after the meetings, tea will be served.

JEROLOMAN DIVORCE SUIT

TESTIMONY TAKEN IN COURT HOUSE AT SOMERVILLE YESTERDAY.

Wife Presents List of Grievances, Which it is Thought Will be Directly Opposed.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Nov. 15—All day yesterday in the Court House here testimony was taken before Vice Chancellor Emery in the petition for divorce of Mary Jeroloman from her husband, William P. Jeroloman, who is now living in Plainfield, on the ground of desertion. Hon. Alvah A. Clark, of Somerville, is counsel for Mrs. Jeroloman and Messrs. Codington & Swackhamer, of Plainfield, represent the defense. All of Mrs. Jeroloman's witnesses were examined yesterday and then the hearing was adjourned until next Friday morning at 10 o'clock, in Newark.

The couple were married in Jersey City, June 4, 1863. She was a daughter of Hon. Ralph Davenport, of Pluckamin. For a time her husband kept a grocery store at Larger Crossroads and then he went to Liberty Corner, where he put up a store building. Mrs. Jeroloman presented a long list of grievances, chief of which is that she was afraid of her life while living with her husband. She also alleges non-support.

While none of the testimony of Jeroloman's witnesses has been taken it is understood that it will be in direct opposition to that of his wife, that he gave her all the support he could; that she drove him away.

DEATH OF CHARLES GRAVES

OCCURRED AT HIS HOME ON LIBERTY STREET LAST EVENING.

Was One of Plainfield's Best Known Citizens—Member of G. A. R. and Church of the Heavenly Rest.

In the death of Charles Graves, which occurred shortly before 8 o'clock, last evening, at his home on Liberty street, another one of Plainfield's best citizens is taken away. Mr. Graves was taken suddenly ill a week ago last Monday night after a trip to Jamesburg, with pneumonia and other complications. The best medical aid failed to bring relief and from the first he suffered intense pain. He was patient through it all and never complained.

Mr. Graves was born in Wrangle, near Boston, Lincolnshire, England, sixty-seven years ago. During his younger days he learned the trade of slating and he followed this business with few exceptions until eight years ago, when he retired. He came to this country when about 21 years of age, and first went to Philadelphia for a short time. He then went to Newark, and it was in the latter place that he lived when the Civil War broke out. He enlisted as a private in Co. I, 26th N. J. Vols., the same regiment of which M. C. Dobbins, of this city, was a member. The two knew each other by sight at that time, but it was not until after the war that they became warm friends on coming to Plainfield.

In 1865 Mr. Graves married Miss Ella A. Kidger, and they lived in Newark for a time. From there they went to Somerville, where Mr. Graves continued his business as a slater for three years. From there he moved to Plainfield, where he lived the rest of his life. Mr. Graves had a host of friends. He was a man of sterling character and a sincere Christian. He was a trustee of the Church of the Heavenly Rest and was deeply interested in the affairs of that church, being a substantial contributor to its maintenance. Mr. Graves was also a member of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., and at times held various offices in the organization. He was interested in the success of the Post and did all he could for its advancement.

Surviving Mr. Graves is a wife, and four children. The latter are Charles C. Graves, Miss Mary A. Graves, Miss Kate E. Graves and George F. Graves; also three brothers, one in England and two in Australia. The funeral will be held Monday afternoon with a short service at the house, followed by another one at the Church of the Heavenly Rest. The interment will be in Evergreen cemetery.

The contracting carpenter is John Abbott, also of this city.

A frame building will be erected at 286 Jackson avenue by W. B. Bohl, of 720 Kensington avenue. The architect is Mr. Bohl who will also do the carpentering work. The contracting mason is Walter J. Mundy.

LEAGUE OPENS MONDAY NIGHT

Schedule Adopted and List of Players Approved for Local Basket Ball League.

THE DETAILS ARRANGED

Executive Committee of Plainfield Amateur Basket Ball League Completed Arrangements Last Night—Difficulty in Arranging Schedule—Two Lists of Players Filed.

A schedule for the Plainfield Amateur Basket Ball League was adopted at a meeting of the executive committee of the league last evening and details arranged so that the opening game of the league will be held in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Monday evening between the Y. M. C. A. and the Hope Y. M. A. Although the managers of the teams have until tonight to file their lists of possible players with the secretary-treasurer, the selections from two clubs were ready last night and were duly approved by the committee. But for illness, the other list would have been ready as well.

It was decided at a previous meeting that the league should open Monday night but the arrangement of the games and the rest of the schedule was delayed until last night. A schedule was presented and adopted, to be amended in case of necessity. Recent developments disclosed an unexpected difficulty in getting nights to suit all the teams and it was made evident that no matter what nights the games were played one or the other of the teams would suffer.

The following schedule was adopted:

Monday, Nov. 17, Y. M. C. A. vs. Hope at Y. M. C. A. gym.

Friday, Nov. 12, Hope vs. Alis at Hope gym.

Monday, Dec. 1, Alis vs. Y. M. C. A. at Y. M. C. A. gym.

Friday, Dec. 5, Y. M. C. A. vs. Hope at Hope gym.

Monday, Dec. 15, Hope vs. Alis at Y. M. C. A. gym.

Friday, Dec. 19, Alis vs. Y. M. C. A. at Hope gym.

Monday, Dec. 29, Y. M. C. A. vs. Hope at Y. M. C. A. gym.

Friday, Jan. 2, Hope vs. Alis at Hope gym.

Monday, Jan. 12, Alis vs. Y. M. C. A. at Y. M. C. A. gym.

Friday, Jan. 16, Y. M. C. A. vs. Hope at Hope gym.

Monday, Jan. 26, Hope vs. Alis at Y. M. C. A. gym.

Friday, Jan. 30, Alis vs. Y. M. C. A. at Hope gym.

Each club has the right to file a list of not more than fifteen names of members from which its team shall be picked. No one not included in the lists will be allowed to participate in any league contest. The time set for the filing of the lists was November 15, but in order that they might be approved by the executive committee, it was understood that they would be presented at last night's meeting. The Y. M. C. A. and the Alis A. A. had their lists ready but on account of the illness of Manager J. Fred Wharton, of the Hope Y. M. A. team, its complete list was not ready for presentation. Manager Wharton was able to name most of those who would be included and they were duly approved.

The lists filed with Secretary-Treasurer Charles B. Morse were as follows: Y. M. C. A., E. H. Giles, Wm. Heinecke, Walter Caboone, Arthur Denton, Percy Hand, Wm. E. Neal, Raymond Smith, Walter McNaughton, Harry Scull, Fred Cranston, Charles Zimmer, Howard George, Herbert Brokaw, Charles Peterson and R. H. Collins.

Alis A. A., Max Moraller, Norman Kieb, Walter L. Long, Harold Chandor, Harold Phillips, Fred Hillmann, Godwin Beard, Jos. Robson, Homer Smith, LeRoy Radford, Alfred Egan, Herbert Cathcart, Albert Wilson, Harry Cuming and George Proctor Smith.

There were present at the meeting President Robert A. Meeker, Secretary-Treasurer Charles B. Morse, C. E. A. Heywood, of the Y. M. C. A., J. Fred Wharton, of Hope Y. M. A., and George Proctor Smith, of the Alis A. A. An adjournment was made until Monday night when the executive committee will meet just previous to the game.

WHAT OTHERS SAY.

Clippings From Other Newspapers Which May be of Interest to Plainfield and Its Citizens.

The election returns from Union county indicate that the Republicans there know how to bury the hatchet and keep it under ground.

Senator Cross ran behind Congressman Fowler only five voets, notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Fowler bitterly opposed the renomination of Judge Cross.

Hurrah for Union!—Trenton State Gazette.

The referendum has again shown itself practically a failure, as evidenced by returns of the recent election. In five counties at least, possibly more, the referendum was resorted to, to determine whether the voters wanted their county affairs administered by boards of chosen freeholders or by commissioners, as provided for by the law passed through the influence of Senator Strong, of Middlesex. The ballots were printed with both propositions, and all the voter had to do was to cross off the one he did not favor, leaving the other as his choice. What did the voters do? The great majority of them, in all the counties, paid no attention at all to the propositions. They just voted the ticket without crossing off either proposition. It is so every time. A referendum election, pure and simple, receives no popular consideration, unless it is made the means of inciting personal animosity or the instrument of obtaining partisan political revenge. This was what made the North Plainfield annexation referendum a kind of doubtful success, but unless these characteristics are injected into the referendum it is a flat failure, no matter how important the issues involved. —Elizabeth Journal.

LITERARY.

The new story by Alice Caldwell Hegan, author of "Mr. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," will begin in the December Century. It is named from one of its characters, "Lovey Mary," an inmate of a charitable institution who is said to have as many interesting characteristics as Mrs. Wiggs. She runs away and becomes an inmate of the "Cabbage Patch," so that Mrs. Wiggs and her children, with Miss Hazy, Chris and the rest, become characters in the new story, which is said to be fully up to the mark of its author's previous success. For seven consecutive months "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" has been among the six best-selling books in the United States.

THEATRICAL.

The Ethel Dyffryn Co. will present the following popular standard productions next week at the Central Theatre. "Little Torment," "The Boy From Boston," "The Mystery of the Gold King," "The Light-keeper's Daughter," "Little Trump," "The Embassy Ball," "Ten Nights in a Bar Room," "Outcast of a Great City," "Pinkerton Gray Detective." Each and every production will be mounted with special scenery. This company is composed of sixteen artist of talent. Monday night, women will be admitted for a lower rate. Special matinee Wednesday and Saturday afternoons.

Mr. Duff's excellent presentation of the latest London musical comedy success, "A Country Girl," is now entering upon the third month of its career at Daly's Theatre, New York, while the 300th performance at the London house, of the same name, took place last evening and in both cases it shows that a worthy successor has been found to the long line of musical plays which George Edwards, and "Runaway Girl," and "The Geisha" will unquestionably be repeated in the present instance. Refinement is the keynote of "A Country Girl," as it is of nearly all the musical comedies imported from England, and the legitimate comedy, refined acting of the principals, the sprightly action, and delightful singing of the chorus, have made a more favorable impression on New Yorkers than any piece of a similar nature has of late years. Mr. Norris is simply a revelation in the comedy role, and Miss Ashley is a most charming foil, with her songs, dances and beautiful dresses. That favorite comedian, Hallyn Mostyn, is also well cast, while Miss Helen Marvin and Miss Grace Freeman (as the two country girls), Miss Deyo in her fascinating dances, Mr. Stewart, one of the old Daly Theatre singers, have become the favorites of the hour. When you add to this Mr. Duff's handsome chorus, with the beautiful Devonshire scenery so well depicted in the first act, and the beautiful—in fact, gorgeous ball-room scene of the second act, they all contribute toward a stage production which has not been surpassed or excelled in New York for a long time; and unless every sign fails, it will last throughout the winter. There are matinees at this house on both Wednesdays and Saturdays, also on holidays.

A GIANT DEAL.

Harriman Secures Control of the Southern Pacific System.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Edward H. Harriman, heading the Union Pacific syndicate, has routed the Southern Pacific pool, led by James R. Keene, and by the purchase of $12,000,000 of the Southern Pacific stock has secured control of that system.

Harriman in acquiring an actual majority of the stock practically completes the greatest railroad deal in the history of the country.

In February, 1901, the original Union Pacific syndicate paid $70,000,000 for the Southern Pacific holdings of Collis P. Huntington, the Leland Stanford estate and the Crocker holdings.

That gave them control through being the largest minority holders of 9,604 miles of railroad owned, operated or leased by the Southern Pacific.

Since then the syndicate added to its holdings until at the inauguration of the present market crisis it held $90,000,000 and was within $9,000,000 of owning a majority of the stock.

By the purchase of the $12,000,000 additional stock this week the syndicate now owns the road.

REDUCED POSTAL RATES.

Postmaster General Payne Favors Them With Foreign Nations.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—A radical reduction of the postage rates on mails to the leading commercial nations of Europe will be urged on congress at this session by Postmaster General Payne. It is confidently expected that in case the project is carried through to successful execution our foreign trade will be greatly stimulated. It is believed that the nations who are to be approached with a view to being parties to the arrangement will readily give their acquiescence.

The plan will be proposed in Mr. Payne's annual report. The present rate is 5 cents per half ounce on letters to foreign countries, save Canada and Mexico, between which and this country the same postage rates are applied as are imposed on mail within this country. It is proposed to put the governments of England, Germany and France on the same footing.

Fire Laid to Anarchists.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Nov. 15.—The disastrous fire which broke out in St. Pierre, Miquelon, on Nov. 1 and destroyed the government buildings, the Roman Catholic cathedral and a number of other edifices is now believed to have been the work of the local colony of anarchists. It was known that the cathedral was set on fire by incendiaries, and last Sunday night an attempt was made to blow up the powder magazine there, which contains the entire stock of explosives for the islets. Had this attempt proved successful the town would have been destroyed. Two individuals, one of them a Basque and the other a Spaniard, have been arrested on a charge of complicity in the affair. A body of gendarmes is now patrolling the precincts of the powder magazine by night and day. The inhabitants are in a state of great excitement.

Building the Shamrock III.

GLASGOW, Nov. 15.—William Fife has decided that the deck of the Shamrock III. shall be constructed of aluminium, while adhering to mild steel for all the essential parts of the hull where the strain is severe. Experiments are being made with a patent woven wood fiber for covering the aluminium of the deck, as it promises lightness and durability and to give the crew a secure foothold. Captain Wringe is assisting in the superintendence of the work on the challenger for the America's cup.

Thirteen Seamen Drowned.

ST. MICHAEL'S, Canary Islands, Nov. 15.—The Norwegian ship Telefon, Captain Thorsen, which left Norfolk, Va., Oct. 21 for Cardiff, England, has been abandoned. Thirteen of her crew were drowned, including all the officers. The survivors were picked up and landed here by the steamer Warfield, Captain Pattie, from Savannah for Bremen. At the time the Telefon was abandoned she was dismasted and in a waterlogged condition.

Automobile Damage Suit Settled.

NYACK, N. Y., Nov. 15.—The suit of Mrs. Sarah T. Lovatt of Nyack against Edward C. Wallace, a millionaire of New York, for $20,000 for injuries received in May when Wallace's automobile frightened her husband's horse and threw him out has been suddenly ended by Mr. Wallace paying $8,750 to settle the case.

The Mascagni Affair.

ROME, Nov. 15.—The latest news which has been received here regarding the Mascagni affair has convinced the Italian press that the American authorities did their utmost within the law to mitigate the composer's situation.

THE STRIKE HEARING

Commission Begins Taking Testimony at Scranton.

PRESIDENT MITCHELL A WITNESS.

Miners and Operators Represented by a Great Array of Legal Talent—Deep Interest In Proceedings.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 15.—The anthracite coal strike commission appointed by President Roosevelt to arbitrate the differences existing between the mine workers of the hard coal fields of Pennsylvania and their employers has begun the hearing of testimony by which it will determine whether or not the workmen are receiving fair and just wages for their labor and whether their conditions can be improved. The star witness for the miners, President John Mitchell, took the stand in the forenoon, and when the commission adjourned at 4 o'clock in the afternoon he was still under the fire of cross examination by David W. Willcox, general counsel of the Delaware and Hudson company. It was a trying day for the miners' leader, but he seemed to stand the test well. The heaviest fire of cross questions was aimed at him late in the afternoon session, and when the hour of adjournment was reached Mr. Willcox was still propounding questions and testing Mr. Mitchell's memory.

The opening of the sessions was a notable day in the annals of the law in the upper anthracite region. Such an array of lawyers has never been seen in this part of the state, and it is doubtful whether attorneys have ever been so numerous on one side of a case in this state as were present in the interests of the coal companies. The commission's sessions are being held in the beautiful room of the Pennsylvania superior court, which is now sitting in Philadelphia. Ranged around three tables in front of the seven commissioners who occupied the judges' bench were no less than thirty lawyers, twenty-four of whom were looking after the interests of the mine owners.

In addition to these there was a large number of members of the bar present who came to merely look on. The courtroom at both sessions was packed almost to suffocation, and scores of persons were unable to gain admittance. Only one of the heads of the large coal companies, Chairman Thomas of the Erie, was present. There were among the spectators quite a large number of general superintendents and district and mine superintendents, all of whom took a deep interest in the proceedings, and some of them frequently made notes.

Grouped about Mr. Mitchell were District Presidents Nicholls, Duffy and Fahy, the three district secretaries, the three national board members and the members of the three district executive boards of the anthracite field.

The attitude of the commissioners was closely followed by every one in the courtroom. They appeared to be greatly interested in the cross examination of Mr. Mitchell, but at times seemed to grow restless under the ceaseless fire of questions aimed at the mine workers' leader. Judge Gray, as chairman of the commission, being versed in court proceedings and in the law, was the only spokesman for the commission. He at times asked questions and at the very close of the commission's session directed a query at Mr. Mitchell which Mr. Willcox had been leading up to for some time. The chairman asked Mr. Mitchell whether his organization approved the act of withdrawing from or denying the necessaries of life to those who had offended the organization, and he replied, "I should say emphatically no."

During the day Mr. Willcox asked Mr. Mitchell many questions as to the policies of the union, the method of calling strikes, the ability of the union to maintain discipline and prevent the members of the union from violating the law and also as to the liability of the union breaking contracts. It was apparent to many of those present who understood the situation that Mr. Willcox's object was to attempt to prove by Mr. Mitchell's own testimony that the contention of the companies that the miners' union was an irresponsible organization and that trade agreements therefore could not be safely entered into was well founded.

During the hearing the statement was brought out for the first time since the late strike was inaugurated that the union had disbursed $1,500,000 among the union and nonunion men who were on strike.

One of the questions yet undecided which came up before the commission was the advisability of hearing counsel on behalf of the nonunion men who remained at work during the strike.

Mr. Mitchell before taking the witness stand in the forenoon presented the miners' side of the case in a 6,000 word statement. It took him forty minutes to read his address, and he was listened to by the commissioners and the operators with the closest attention.

Wife May Be Buried Alive.

EMPORIA, Kan., Nov. 15.—Judge Madden in the district court decided that a man had the right to bury his wife alive. The city asked for an injunction to prohibit an exhibition of hypnotism by burying a woman underground and leaving her buried six days. It was claimed the exhibition endangered life.

Stromboli Grows More Violent.

ROME, Nov. 15.—The eruption of the volcano Stromboli is increasing in violence and is accompanied by shocks of earthquake and alarming detonations. Ashes thrown out by the volcano are falling on boats out at sea.

FLEECED RICH MEN.

Band of Blackmailers Posed as Nihilists.

IMPORTANT ARREST IN NEW YORK.

A Member of the Gang Reveals One of the Boldest Schemes For Extortion Ever Known—Names of the Leaders Known.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—As a result of the arrest of William Becker, a ship's carpenter on board the steamship Americus, accused of being one of the "Russian nihilists" who for weeks have annoyed prominent millionaires and bankers in this and other cities by writing threatening letters, the police have extorted a confession that has put them on the trail of the boldest gang of blackmailers that ever operated in this country.

The man Becker, who is not a nihilist, made a confession, in which he implicated five men and gave their names. Scores of detectives have been turned loose from police headquarters and are now scouring this and adjoining cities in search of the leaders of this band.

At first the police thought that the writers of supposed nihilistic letters to J. P. Morgan, John W. Gates and other millionaires were written by some mad cranks, but from the startling revelations made by the prisoner Baker they have learned that the writers of these letters are some of the most famous criminals in the United States and that they have been operating successfully and collecting fortunes in blackmail for months.

Had these men been content to confine themselves to the smaller fry, whom they frightened with their blood curdling epistles into turning over small sums of money, they might have continued their machinations indefinitely; but, emboldened by their success, they thought that they could frighten such men as Morgan, the Vanderbilts and John W. Gates into disgorging to them great sums.

All of the letters which are now in the hands of the police are signed with five names, purporting to be the signatures of desperate Russian nihilists. They are fictitious, and the real names of the leaders of the gang are now in the possession of the police.

According to the confession made by this man Becker, the gang has operated in most all of the large cities of the Union, and the police here have now corroboration of this statement in letters received from many cities in the country.

Death or lifelong insanity through the agency of a subtle poison was the penalty named in their blackmailing letters for failure to send $1,000 to "C. C. Barton" at the general delivery.

Murdered Entire Family.

VIENNA, Nov. 15.—A dispatch from Satoralja Ujhely, Hungary, states that a butcher there named Michael Malarozek has murdered his father, mother and three other members of his family by setting fire on Thursday evening to the house in which they dwelt and thus burning them to death. The murderer committed the crime out of revenge for a refusal on their part to give him a sum of money he demanded. Malarozek first intended to die with them, but changed his mind and jumped from an upper story of the house into the street. He was immediately arrested, and the police had considerable difficulty to keep the crowd from lynching him.

Revolution Considered Ended.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Mail advices received here from Caracas, Venezuela, are to the effect that a report had reached the capital city that the irons had been taken off General Jose Manuel Hernandez, Dr. Finol and the other prisoners detained in the castle of San Carlos. Hernandez was imprisoned by order of President Castro to prevent him participating in the recent revolution. Hernandez has been a prominent figure in past revolutions and an aspirant for the presidency. The advices show that the government now treats the revolution as having been crushed.

Ten Years For Pension Frauds.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 15.—Judge Adams in the United States district court sentenced on four counts John W. Holleck, a farmer and alleged pension agent, to ten years' imprisonment in the penitentiary, the heaviest punishment for pension frauds ever recorded in this city. Holleck was charged with making false pension affidavits, with forging the names of witnesses and with overcharging.

To Move Havana Prison.

HAVANA, Nov. 15.—The cabinet has considered favorably the project of removing the state prison here to Principe castle. The present building occupies a central location in the city. Sir William Van Horne has made an offer to the government of $350,000 for the building and land, which he intends to utilize for hotel purposes.

Rebel Leader Offers to Surrender.

CARACAS, Venezuela, Nov. 15.—General Bello Rodriguez, formerly a cabinet minister during the administration of ex-President Andrade and who has been one of the leaders of the revolution in Venezuela, has offered to surrender to the government.

Pennypacker's Plurality a Safe One.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 15.—The official returns of the recent election just compiled at the state department show that Pennypacker (Rep.) had a plurality over Pattison (Dem.) of 150,410.

Weather Probabilities.

Fair; fresh to brisk southwest winds.

TRADE CONDITIONS.

Manufacturing and Transporting Interests Insufficient.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Lower prices for railway stocks than at any time since last March do not necessarily indicate loss of traffic or a setback in business. On the contrary, coincident with the collapse of the stock market there were numerous evidences that manufacturing and transporting interests have not sufficient facilities to meet demands, although plants and equipment are now of greater efficiency than at any previous time.

Distribution of merchandise is fully maintained, preparations being made for a heavy holiday trade, and frequent complaints of tardy deliveries testify to the heavy consumption. Prospects for continued activity are bright because of unprecedented harvests, prosperity in the agricultural sections assuring a good demand for other products.

Production of pig iron during October was 1,503,978 tons, according to the Iron Age, a considerable increase over the preceding month and much more than was indicated by the scarcity of coke.

Considerable irregularity occurred in quotations of the leading staples. Winter wheat conditions are unusually favorable, and movement of the current crop maintains high figures. Western receipts of wheat for the week were 9,384,395 bushels compared with 7,390,441 a year ago.

Failures for the week numbered 241 in the United States against 215 last year and 24 in Canada compared with 27 a year ago.

BUTLER GETS THREE YEARS.

St. Louis Millionaire Found Guilty of Bribery.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 15.—Colonel Ed Butler, millionaire and politician of St. Louis, on trial charged with attempting to bribe Dr. Chapman of the St. Louis board of health in order to influence his vote on the indorsement of a garbage contract with the city, has been found guilty by the jury, which fixed the punishment at three years in the penitentiary. T. H. Hickman of the jury said the verdict was reached on the first ballot.

Colonel Butler and his wife, his two sons, Congressman James J. and Edward, Jr., and their wives were in the courtroom when the verdict was received. Judge Hockaday read the verdict as follows:

"We, the jury, find the defendant, Edward Butler, guilty as charged and assess his punishment at imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term of three years."

The Hawaiian Defalcations.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Official reports on defalcations by two prominent officials of the Hawaiian government have been received by the secretary of the interior from Governor Dole. William H. Wright, the treasurer of the territory, admitted he was $17,950 short, and B. H. Wright, chief clerk of the department of public works of Hawaii, is charged with the embezzlement of $8,272. The former escaped on the steamer Alameda, which sailed from Honolulu Sept. 24 for San Francisco, and he has not been found, but the latter was arrested and held for trial this month.

Zinc From Mrs. McKinley's Mine.

METROPOLIS, Ill., Nov. 15.—The Empire Lead and Spar mines on the Illinois Central railway in Pope county have just shipped the first carload of zinc ore ever mined in Illinois. This mine is on land owned by Mrs. William McKinley, widow of the late president, and was operated by the Saxtons for several years after the civil war for spar and lead, but so much carbonate of zinc ore was found that the mines were finally abandoned, the value of the brown colored rock not being known. Operations were resumed recently by an Ohio man.

Great Slaughter of Deer.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Nov. 15.—Hunters returning from the Adirondacks report a greater number of deer killed during the season which closes today than during any season since the antihounding law was passed. The Adirondack Gun club, composed of prominent residents of Saratoga and Warren counties, have arrived here from the Boreas river region with a wagon load of deer. Reports from various points in Warren and Essex counties show the presence there of deer in great numbers.

Peculiar Phenomenon In Australia.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—According to a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Sydney, N. S. W., an extraordinary red dust storm has been experienced in Victoria and New South Wales. Darkness enshrouded the city of Melbourne at noon, and balls of fire fell and set fire to several buildings. The people were thrown into a state of panic, as they thought the world was coming to an end. A similar cloud of red dust hung like a pall over the city of Sydney and many inland towns.

Losses of the Fisher Folk.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Nov. 15.—The Gloucester fishing season has ended. The year's loss of life and treasure among the fishermen of Gloucester is as follows: Seventy-one seamen were lost, and there were left twenty-two widows and forty-eight fatherless children. Eleven vessels in all were lost, a value of $87,700, with an insurance of $52,464. Of the vessels two, with a total crew list of thirty, were not heard from after leaving port.

Vanderbilt's Horse Won.

NICE, France, Nov. 15.—W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr.'s, Edna won the La Turbie stakes here. His Quos Ego, ridden by the American jockey Thompson, took third place in the Carabacel stakes.

DIGG'S UPRIGHT FIRE EXTINGUISHER.

The Best on Earth! We Challenge the World!

The Extinguishers that turn up-side-down to discharge are good of their kind, but this is far better. Read the following reasons:

Points of superior merit of the Diggs-Upright over any other machine—

1—A sealed acid bottle and an air-tight tank. No change in the conditions of the chemicals possible.

2—Can never be discharged by accident; absolutely under the control of the operator.

3—A 3-gallon machine of this type contains ONE QUART more of liquid than a reversible, because it does not require a handle underneath.

4—It does not need inspection and recharging as required for the reversible with its loose stopple.

5—The acid being released at the top of the tank, and the outlet being at the bottom, the mingling of the chemicals is so thorough before the acid reaches the outlet that it is completely neutralized, and no harm can be done to flesh or fabric. In the reversible type the acid is released within the two inches of the outlet.

6—Convenience in handling. The machine stands on its bottom, and all the operator has to do is to turn the screw in the cap, and the flow begins instantly.

7—The bottle is not broken, and no nuisance of broken glass.

BOSTON BANK CLOSED.

Failure of Central National Causes Only Slight Flurry.

BOSTON, Nov. 15.—The Central National, a small institution compared with many other city banks, has closed its doors by reason of an order from the comptroller of the currency, who has placed National Bank Examiner W. E. Neal over it as temporary receiver. Impaired assets is given as the reason for the failure, and the bank is closed for good.

The incident did not produce any flurry in financial circles, as the closing of the bank through liquidation by the Eliot National bank was looked for, and such action it was supposed had commenced.

The incident which precipitated the failure was the rejection of a considerable portion of the Central bank's assets by President Burrage of the Eliot bank, who was scrutinizing them preparatory to taking the bank for liquidation. Another portion of the assets was known to have been acceptable, and the action of President Burrage and the Eliot bank directorate in refusing to liquidate the bank was unexpected. Wednesday sales of the Central's stock dropped $15 from par, and Thursday depositors withdrew something like $2,000,000.

Later the clearing house declined to aid the bank, and certified checks on the bank were refused acceptance by other banks. Preparations were at once made to place a receiver in charge of the bank.

Many banks came to the relief of the Central's depositors, the National Shawmut offering to advance 50 per cent of their deposits. Director Moses W. Richardson of the bank says that depositors probably will be paid in full, and while the stockholders may be called upon for a quick assessment in the end they will lose nothing. Officers of other banks are of the opinion that the Central's failure will not be noticed in financial circles.

Installation at Swarthmore.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 15.—Joseph Swain, LL. D., was today installed as president of Swarthmore college. Dr. Swain resigned the presidency of the Indiana State university to accept the office of president of Swarthmore college. Many distinguished educators from various sections of the country participated in the exercises, and the inaugural ceremonies were witnessed by delegates from 120 institutions of learning. More than ordinary interest had been manifested in Dr. Swain's inauguration from the fact that he declined to accept the presidency of the college unless a large fund was established with which the scope of the institution might be enlarged. Wealthy friends of the college answered the call for contributions, and when the amount stipulated by Dr. Swain had been secured he no longer hesitated to accept the office.

Dady's Attorney and Cash Missing.

HAVANA, Nov. 15.—Colonel Michael J. Dady of Brooklyn has filed charges before the court here against his attorney, Joseph De Wycoff, who, he alleges, has absconded with a sum of $10,000 which Mr. Dady forwarded here to be used in securing an option for the construction of waterworks at Cienfuegos. Mr. Dady declares that De Wycoff deposited the money in his own name and afterward drew it out and left for the United States.

Incendiary Fires.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 15.—The storehouse of David Gill, Jr., and lumber yard of the Hutton company, on Rondout creek, have been destroyed by fire. During the night an old icehouse adjoining, owned by the Newark Lime and Cement company, was fired by incendiaries, but the flames were soon extinguished. The loss is $25,000.

ONE BEAR IN CAMP.

President's First Hunt Somewhat Disappointing.

NEWSPAPER MEN TURNED BACK.

All Approaches to the Hunting Headquarters Guarded by Negroes Who Will Not Be Bribed or Bullied.

SMEDES, Miss., Nov. 15.—A lean black bear which weighs 235 pounds is hanging up at the president's camp on the Little Sunflower; but, to the regret of the entire party, the first trophy of the hunt did not fall to the president's Winchester. The bear's trail was struck by the hounds soon after the party started in the morning.

The members of the party, except the president, Mr. Foote, Mr. Parker and Holt Collier, had been stationed at the various crossings, and as soon as the dogs gave tongue the president and his guides plunged through the dense underbrush in pursuit. Within a few minutes the dogs showed the direction the quarry was taking, and Holt Collier, with the instinct of an old bear hunter, immediately made up his mind where the animal would come out. To save the president needless hard riding through the brush he directed Mr. Foote to take the president along the trail to a certain cutoff. This was done, and the president and Mr. Foote rode to the assigned station. On their way several swamp deer were jumped up, but no effort was made to get a shot at them. Then for several hours the president and Mr. Foote waited. The trail of the bear carried the yelping hounds out of hearing, and shortly after noon Mr. Foote abandoned hope that the quarry would come back their way, and he and the president returned to camp for lunch. Had they remained the president would have had a shot, as the bear, with the pack at its heels, crossed at almost the exact spot which Holt had indicated.

About a mile beyond this point bruin, exhausted by his long race, ran into a water hole and turned upon the dogs. They were all over him in an instant. The poor beast was too exhausted to make much of a fight, but he grabbed one of the hounds by the neck and crushed it through its spine, killing it instantly. As the bear was making a sweep with its paw at another dog Holt Collier jumped from his horse and, clutching his rifle, knocked the game over with a blow on the head.

"If the colonel had stayed whar I put him," said the aggrieved Holt, "he would'er done got this yere one."

The camp is admirably located under some big oaks on the edge of the Sunflower. The brush has been cleared away, and three sleeping and one cook tent have been put up.

The president expressed his satisfaction at the simplicity of the arrangements. His tent contains four cots, which were occupied Thursday night by himself, Mr. Fish, Mr. Dickinson and Secretary Cortelyou. The negroes slept on blankets under an open tent fly. None of the small army of newspaper men and photographers who followed the president here succeeded in reaching camp yesterday. The only newspaper men allowed there were the three press association representatives who came with the party. All kinds of expedients were attempted by the others to get to camp, but without avail. Every trail leading out to the woods was guarded, and no negro could be found who cared to risk making an attempt to guide visitors in.

One of the newspaper men here tried to bribe a darky to show him the way to the president's camp. He offered the negro $25.

"'Deed, mistah," responded the negro, "I wouldn't take you out there for $1,000,000. Mistah Mangum told us any of us who took white men there would be shot or hung, an' I ain't goin' to take no chances."

He killed forty-seven birds out of a possible fifty, which broke the former record of forty-six.

PLAINFIELD'S GROWTH.

Anyone who has the slightest doubt that Plainfield is not growing has only to take a trip through the city streets to see evidences on every side of the substantial prosperity which is visiting this city at present. New residences are springing up on every side. Old industrial concerns are enlarging their plants and new ones are locating here. In the business section, there is activity. The handsomest building in the city is being rebuilt after partial destruction by fire. Another new business block has only recently been started. Empty stores are very few and far between.

It is pleasing to know that the prosperity which is so general throughout the country is equally in evidence here. As a matter of fact, it seems more evident here than in many of the other cities of the State. New Jersey can boast of few cities indeed that are enjoying the material and healthy prosperity that has come to Plainfield. The city's excellent government, its attractive location and the desirable character of the vast majority of its inhabitants all combine to assist in the permanent growth of the place. It has been growing steadily and will continue to do so but this appears to be a period when the growth is considerably accelerated.

In another column will be found some interesting facts concerning the remarkable building boom which appears to be at its height. As the borough has no building inspector or building ordinance which compels the issuance of permits, it is impossible to obtain like facts concerning that municipality. There has been some building there as well but not to as great an extent as in Plainfield. The building operations th re have been largely confined to the erection of new residences of which a number have sprung up. It is all good news and right welcome and serves to show as we have often declared that when the people can be brought here there is no difficulty in securing them for permanent residents, for it has been the increase in the population which has made so many of these new building necessary.

There are two things which are needed to fully complete the environs of the North Avenue station. Sycamore street should be widened and paved and transformed into another thoroughfare to care for the traffic to the station from the part of the city south of the railroad tracks. Then Sycamore street should be continued north of the railroad to Front street, thus relieving the congested condition of Park and Watchung avenues. With those improvements and a business block located at the corner of Watchung avenue and East Fourth street, the approaches to the Plainfield station would excell those of any other place along the Jersey Central.

Final arrangements were made last evening for te opening of the Plainfield Amateur Basket Ball League Monday evening. The league is composed of three local teams and was organized at the suggestion of The Daily Press which has offered a trophy to be awarded to the winner of the series. The league promises to furnish the local lovers of basket ball with such exciting contests. Unfortunately neither of the local gymnasiums is large enough to accommodate a very great crowd but special arrangements will be made to utilize every available bit of room to permit as many as possible to witness the game.

Think of it, another Saturday and no baseball game. It doesn't seem right.

'PLAINS BALL TEAM PLANS

PRESENT BALANCE WILL BE SPENT FOR UNIFORMS AND STAND.

Entertainments Will Probably be Held During Winter to Add to the Balance.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Nov. 15—The success of the Scotch Plains baseball team on the diamond this season has been more than gratifying to the supporters of the team. When Manager Johnston organized the team in May there were many who thought that Scotch Plains could not support a first-class team. When the season first opened there were a number of weak places that needed strengthening but Manager Johnston did not feel as though he wanted any additional expense until it was found whether the residents of the village and borough would support the management in its efforts to provide some recreation for Saturday afternoons. As the season advanced new men were signed and when the season finally closed three weeks ago, the club had a balance in the treasury of over $200.

Plans are already being formed for next season, new uniforms owned by the club will be purchased, more seating facilities will be built, either a small grandstand or several more lines of bleacheries. This will no doubt wipe out the balance before the beginning of the season but arrangements are underway for a fair or entertainment for the benefit of the club's treasury during the coming winter.

Manager Johnston has not signed a player as yet for next season but the fans can rest assured that nearly all of the old familiar faces will be found next season in their accustomed places and that just as fast an article of ball will be played next season as has been played the past and some of the best teams through this section and the metropolitan district will be seen on the local diamond, from the present outlook.

LOVERS OF LIBERTY.

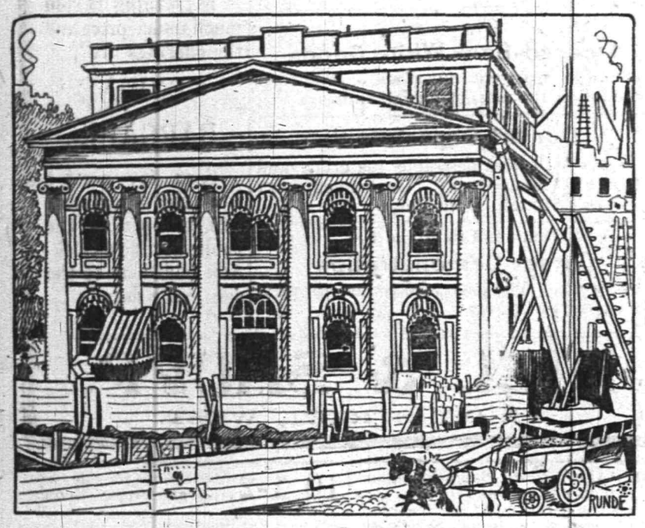
Many Were Put to Cruel Death in Old Hall of Records.

Razing of One of New York's Historic Buildings Recalls Some of the Saddest Days of the Revolution.

[Special New York Letter.]

WITHIN six or seven weeks one of the most historic buildings in New York will be razed to the ground. It is the old hall of records, which was known during the time of the revolution as the provost prison. Directly in the line of the Rapid Transit Tunnel, on the east side of City Hall park, it is necessary that the solid walls of masonry, which have been the scene of terrible tragedies and untold miseries, shall be demolished.

Across the way on Chambers street a magnificent new hall of records has been erected of white stone and marble which is in strange contrast to the old building with its tall Doric pillars reaching to the projecting roof and its dull, grim walls and dingy windows. But with the passing of the old prison the unhappy days of '76 are recalled to us. Only the other day workmen unearthed human bones in digging in the trench near to the foundation walls on the east side of the building—the remains of those unfortunate Americans who were prisoners under the infamous Irish provost marshal, William Cunningham. It is believed that when the real work of tearing down the building is begun many skeletons will be found, for in one of the dungeons below ground Cunningham erected his "slow gallows" where American soldiers were tortured to death in a spirit of wanton cruelty only equaled by the Spanish inquisition.



THE OLD HALL OF RECORDS, NEW YORK.

The original hall of records was built in 1756 as a suburban prison and later on during the early days of the city, when the law for imprisonment for debt was in full force, many an unfortunate debtor was confined within its gloomy walls. Its appearance then, however, was far different from to-day. The Doric columns now in the front and rear were not then in place, and the third story had not been added.

After the evacuation of the city by the British and till the year 1832 the building was used as a debtors' prison. At that time its convenient location to the city hall resulted in its being transferred into a hall of records, for which purpose it has been used up to the present. It was the decision to make it one of the buildings of the city that brought about the change in its architectural construction. It was at the time when the custom house and subtreasury were being constructed and stately Parthenons were being erected along the Hudson. So, in keeping with the architectural ideas of the period, the stiff columns were added along with another story.

Just before the old prison was turned into a hall of records, however, another chapter was to be added to the long chronicle of sufferings that had been endured within its walls. In 1832 occurred the cholera epidemic in New York, and, on account of the lack of proper accommodations, the newly-altered building was utilized as a hospital for several months.

But it is the revolutionary period in which we are the most interested. The building was the principal military prison of the English, although several churches, sugar houses, Columbia college and the hulks of old ships of war were also pressed into service. A few days ago the hull of one of these old prison ships—the Jersey—was discovered in the Brooklyn navy yard. It was buried 20 feet beneath the soil upon which is being built the ways for the new battleship Connecticut.

But "the Provost," as the old Hall of Records prison was called, was reserved for the most important captives of war. Among the famous American prisoners confined there was Ethan Allen. Cunningham, who was placed in charge, rapidly developed into a most cruel and oppressive tyrant. Not only was he insulting and coarsely insolent, but he devised some of the most exquisite forms of torture ever known in fiendish ingenuity. Among the fearful instruments to "break the wills of the stubborn Yankees," as he expressed it, were the cat-o'-nine-tails, the searing irons and the slow gallows. In the basement of the building may be seen a low vaulted arch. It was there where the slow gallows was erected, and never was a more terrible machine of torture invented. It was different from the ordinary instrument of death in the fact that it permitted the noose to slowly tighten around the necks of the victims, thus prolonging the frightful agony of strangulation.

If one will take a walk through the dark basement of the building he will see on every hand the signs of cruelty. The walls are of thick masonry, the roof low and arched, and on either side the space is divided off into little cells. In one of the cells in the northeast corner is a large excavation in the heavy wall of brick and stone. It marks the place where some revolutionary prisoners attempted to escape. One of Cunningham's men discovered them, however, before they had penetrated the masonry, and they all met death on the slow gallows and their bodies were buried under the floor of the dungeon.

It was to such acts of atrocity as these that Cunningham doubtless referred in this statement, said to have been made by him on his death bed at Tyburn, England, shortly after he returned to that country:

"I shudder to think of the murders I have been accessory to, both with and without orders from government, especially while in New York, during which time there were more than 2,000 starved in the churches by stopping their rations, which I sold. There were also 275 American prisoners executed and hung without ceremony, and then buried in the Black Pioneer of the Provost."

Cunningham called the northern part of the second floor of the prison "Congress Hall," in a spirit of irony, because it was there he herded the bulk of his prisoners. In this apartment they were compelled to lie so close together on the floor that when one became tired and desired to turn over he had to awaken the others, and the word for all to turn at once was given.

When the happy days of the British evacuation of New York came there were still several prisoners in the old building, and as Cunningham and his deputy, O'Keefe, were preparing to leave hurriedly, one of the Americans cried out:

"What is to become of us?"

"You may go to the devil!" ejaculated the provost, as he threw the prison keys to the floor.

"No, thank you," was the response of the American. "We have had enough of your company in this world."

In 1830, when the "provost" was turned into a debtor's prison, the bell, which had hung in its cupola for over three-quarters of a century, was taken down and, after doing service in the Bridewell, was presented to the Naiad Hose company in Beaver street.

It will require several weeks of incessant labor to transfer the records from the old hall to the new. Few realize the extent of the work in keeping the records of the metropolis. There are no figures available as to the actual number of papers recorded until after 1868. An indication of the immense business done by the register may be obtained, however, when it is known that during the last year the total number of papers and instruments which passed through the recording department, and which represent hundreds of millions of dollars, was 118,390. Of this number 42,976 were recorded in libers by the folio writers and 75,614 were chattel mortgages.

KODOL
Digests What You Eat.

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

Kodol

Digests What You Eat

Mrs. Loring Nichols of Penn Yan, N. Y., writes: "After eating, my food would distress me by making my heart palpitate and I would become very weak. Finally I got a bottle of Kodol and it gave me immediate relief. After using a few bottles I am cured."

Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach disorders, and gives the heart a full, free and untrammeled action.

Bottles only. $1.00 Size holding 2½ times the trial size, which sells for 50c.

FASHION NOTES.

Differences In This Winter's Costumes—Large Sleeves.

Waists have altered nearly as much as skirts. Sleeves may ere long render fashion extremely ridiculous. Some of the French models show sleeves with absurdly large proportions from the elbow to the wrist. Many are rendered clumsy with bands of shirring. Good dressmakers, however, will no doubt modify this tendency.

Bodices are nearly all tight fitting in the back, though elongated and pouched in the front, with a narrow pointed waistband. Collars are higher than ever. The French are compromising by wearing pretty little flutes of silk at the sides of the collar.

There is a tendency toward voluminousness in evening dress and more handsome materials than of yore. Velvet will be worn a great deal both for day and evening wear. Embroideries will be seen on everything, and of course lace never loses its popularity, while a good many Paris frocks are threaded through with white velvet.

The evening coat shown would also be suitable for afternoon wear. It is of velvet lined with white satin. The revers are of ermine, the cuffs part ermine and lace. The triple shoulder capes are piped with white satin.

UP TO DATE COSTUMES.

Plaited Skirt—New Flecked Zibelines.

All walking and tailor costumes just clear the ground and have no trains. It is a different matter, however, in the case of smart frocks. The skirts of these are not as long as they were, but they take all up in fullness and absolutely lie in folds around the feet.

The newest skirt is the plaited one. This is arranged in folds around the hips and at the back, but the front is still kept fairly plain. It is charming when the material is not too thick. Tailors are using a great deal the new box plaited or kilted skirt, which they mostly put into a plain piece fitted around the hips.

The materials of the moment are the new snowflake tweeds and zibelines. Somewhat similar fabrics were used last winter, but now the flakes are larger. In these blue, brown, red and green are the favorite shades.

The illustration shows a street gown of gray zibeline flecked with white. The hat is of rough white felt.

RICH ORNAMENTS.

Motifs of Lace—Cabochons and Spangles.

Motifs of lace are studded with cabochons of jet, and colored stones are used in similar fashion.

This will be a season of beadings and spanglings.

Tucks and plaits of ribbon are laid freely on lace, and net and folds or tabs of velvet are finished with tiny buttons or little bows or buckles. Where lace is employed it is usually left transparent or lined with color. Ecru or ficelle lace is popular over white satin, and a tracery of black chenille running over the light colored lace is quite the height of the mode.

Evening blouses are not very decollete, and many have the necks wholly or partly covered with transparent lace. Choux of colored velvet, crape or chiffon are liberally used, but placed more at the center than at the left side. Embroidered galon is inlet in the fashion of lace on heavy gowns.

A thoroughly up to date gown is the one in the cut. It is trimmed with strappings of lighter shade. The hat is of white felt, trimmed to correspond.

HAT FASHIONS.

Ingenious Imitations of Fur and Feathers.

The new millinery shows ingenuity as well as charm. Both fur and feathers are imitated in weaving, while real feather flues uncurled are supporting the return of fringes. Some about an inch in depth are applied in continuous circles on the large flat crowns. Be the shape what it may, flatness is the marked characteristic of the hats of the moment. Felt, smooth and hairy, and the fluffy silk beavers play an important part, but moire cloth and velvet, especially white, hold their own.

Feathers assume a new aspect. Bird of paradise plumes are fashioned into bows and loops and into cockades and aigrets.

Large flat hats after the Lamballe order are much worn. Some of the crowns are of white cloth, some of white moire. Drawn louisine hats are another novelty.

Large hats are made of sable and gray squirrel. They are trimmed with tabs of bright colored velvets.

The smart tailor made hat in the illustration is of black beaver, trimmed with a scarf of red silk, black panne straps and two wings, the one black and red, the other white.

Neuter?

An order was received by a large shoemaking firm in Cawnpur from the Middlesex regiment for shoes for the men. The manager passed the order over to the head baboo and told him to see it was attended to at once. The baboo read it over and seemed rather mystified, but went away. After a short time he returned and said to the manager of the firm:

"Please, sir, don't understand. Male sex I know, female sex I know, but what is Middlesex?"—London Tit-Bits.

THE CARUTHERS AFFAIR

By WILL N. HARBEN.

COPYRIGHT 1898 BY A. N. KELLOGG NEWSPAPER CO.

"Don't do that!" pleaded the artist, in a gentle, submissive voice. And he took the count's arm as they went down the stairs. "It seems to me that I struck him at the club, but I can't remember."

HE CAUGHT HIM ROUGHLY BY THE ARM

"Come on," again interrupted the count. "I'll explain it all when you get to a place of safety."

When they reached the street Gielow lagged behind again.

"Where are you going?" he asked, "I am sleepy, and—and cold."

The count lost patience, and putting a hand on each of Gielow's shoulders, he turned him roughly to him.

"Look me in the eyes," he commanded. "No, right in the eyes! There now, you remember killing Caruthers!"

"Yes, the scoundrel," was the artist's slow reply. "Yes, I killed him."

"Then come on, they are after you."

A look of terror spread over Gielow's visage. He quickened his steps, and together they turned into a dark, infrequented alley. Here a two-horse carriage stood in the shadow of a high wall. A man wearing a slouch hat, and a long fur ulster, the wide collar of which hid the back part of his head and the lower half of his face, stood near the vehicle whipping his body with his arms to keep warm.

"Ah!" he exclaimed, and then an oath broke from him.

"Sh!" hissed the count apologetically. "I know we were slow, but it couldn't be avoided."

The man continued to grumble, and began to get his reins ready.

"Get in; get in!" said Bantini to Gielow, and when the artist had obeyed he leaned into the carriage and said: "You are sleepy. There, that's right; lean back and sleep. Sleep! Sleep!"

"He's all right now, and we'll have no more trouble," the count said, in a conciliatory tone, to the driver.

"Did he go through it all right?" asked the man, with a foreign accent.

"Beautifully, beautifully, and we would have been here before this, but just after he made the confession I lost control of him for a moment and he got at a decanter of brandy and drank about a pint of it. I cannot do a thing with a subject under the influence of spirits. But I got him away before it was too late. We are safe. His sudden flight and confession will place us beyond suspicion."

"The servant may never admit to the police that his master confessed," said the other, distrustfully.

"In that event I shall testify that the confession was made in my presence; then Henri will be obliged to swear to what took place or run the risk of being convicted of perjury."

"Ah, true!" answered the man; "unless you become afraid to 'face the music,' as they say in this country."

The count laughed as he climbed into the carriage.

"We must hurry now," he said. "When you know what my next move is, you will say that no human being on earth could implicate me."

"All right," came from the driver's seat in a more satisfied tone. "I am trusting it to you."

As Bantinni sat down by Gielow, the latter stirred and muttered something.

"Sleep, sleep!" commanded the count, taking the limp hand of the artist and stroking it with his own. "there, that's right!" And, as Gielow leaned back in the corner again, the carriage began to move. The count took out a cigarette, drew down the curtain, struck a match, and began to smoke.

CHAPTER XVII.

Gielow came back to consciousness through a maze of dreams. He seemed to be in the studio laughing at Henri for draping a curtain awkwardly. Next he was with Dorothy in the conservatory at her home; she never had seemed so beautiful. Then a swift draught of cold air seemed to be striking his feet and ankles. She held some flowers towards him and he tried to take them, but could not lift his hand, or stir a muscle. She glided away, melting into a vast bank of orchids, but when he essayed to follow his feet seemed chained to the floor. He gave a sudden cry of terror as she vanished, and his voice seemed to rebound from the walls and ceiling, which appeared to have contracted. Then he awoke and found himself enveloped in such profound darkness that he wondered if his soul were released from his body and adrift in space.

"Great God!" he exclaimed. "What can this mean? Where am I?"

He tried to recall his latest conscious moments, but his brain seemed benumbed. Everything was chaos. He moved his hand, and felt a clasp of cold steel on his wrist. He heard a chain rattle. Aghast—terrified ineffably—he moved the other hand. It, also, was chained to the stones beneath him. He attempted to draw up his feet. They, too, were manacled.

Then he lay motionless and tried once more to recall past events. Dorothy! Yes, he remembered calling on her and humbly confessing his sorrow for having publicly quarreled with Caruthers. She had readily forgiven him, and shed tears at something she would not explain. He remembered telling her that he was not going to the reception at the Palace hotel the following night. She understood that he shrank from being seen publicly, though she begged him to go and dance once with her. She reminded him that Caruthers was away, but even that did not alter his determination. He left early, for she and her aunt were going to the Horse Show with Count Bantinni, and it was almost time for her to dress.

Then he remembered how hard he worked all the next day, and how he threw himself that night on a lounge and tried to sleep. Finding this impossible, and longing to catch sight of Dorothy as she alighted from her carriage at the reception, he went to the hotel and stood around in the crowd near the ladies' entrance. Here he was met by Count Bantinni. The count had such a strange gleam in his black eyes, and for a wonder was not wearing evening dress.

"I want to have a talk with you," he said in a gentle tone. "You have evaded me for a long time. I am your friend, and will prove it. Come with me to my apartments."

Gielow went with him to his chambers in the next block. It seemed to him, from Bantinni's tone, that he had something important to communicate. Then what had happened? Ah, yes. The count had turned up the gas in his luxurious smoking-room and ordered a bottle of wine. His first words were the very soul of humble candor—and so pathetic.

"My friend," said the count, "we ought to sympathize with each other and bear no ill-will. I am suffering the pangs of hell. I love your sweetheart with all my soul. I have loved her passionately since the moment I first saw her. I, too, am miserable. I walk the streets in agony. I know how you feel, and I sympathize with you."

Tears were in Bantinni's eyes. He took the listless hand of the artist and pressed it. Gielow was too unhappy to repulse him, and by and by it seemed that he really liked the Italian.

"I deaden my pain of heart," said the count. "You know that I understand the use of hypnotism; I apply it to myself when I am most miserable. You need rest; allow me to calm you. It is very simple."

"I'd rather not," said Gielow; but the count had spoken soothingly, and then—why, that was the last thing he could remember excepting—yes, in front of the studio building it seemed that the count had detained him and told him some absurd story about his having killed Caruthers. That must have been a dream, and yet—great God! the chains and the cell! Could he be in a dungeon for the murder of Caruthers?

Gielow managed to rise to his feet and began to grope about him. He touched the wall behind him. It was uneven, like the inside of a cavern. He felt all round the room. In size it was about ten feet long by six in width. One end was of bricks, and that end contained an iron door. Gielow's intelligence told him that he was not in prison, but it furnished no hint of the truth.

The hours passed. Gielow went back to his corner and lay down on the bed of straw. His knees shook and he was very weak. Then the pangs of hunger and thirst awoke in him.

A moment later he knew he was starving. Maddened by this realization, he crawled to the door and beat upon it with his handcuffs. He made a thunderous noise, but when the echoes had died out the silence seemed even more profound, more menacing than ever. Again he beat upon the door till the irons cut into his wrists.

Finally he was rewarded by noting a dancing pencil of light pierce the gloom through a crack over the door, and then he heard footsteps outside. A bunch of heavy keys clanked, one was fitted into a rusty lock and the door swung open. In the light of a lantern which he held appeared the crafty features and glistening eyeglasses of Count Bantinni. A sinister smile was in his sallow face.

Gielow shrank backward in bewilderment.

"For God's sake, tell me the meaning of this!" he cried.

"It means that you'll never see the light of day again," said Bantinni, harshly. "You had the cheek to tell me in my rooms that she loves you. Ah! we shall see, my young idiot—she shall love no one but me. Remember I have said it."

"You brought me here, then!" exclaimed Gielow, in wonder.

THE THREE QUESTIONS

A TALE PICKED UP IN THE ORIENT

SULTAN SULEIMAN the Glorious—may Allah grant him peace!—once upon a time disguised himself and, accompanied by his grand vizier, also in disguise, traveled through the country to acquaint himself with the sentiments of his subjects. Upon a winter day, just before sundown, he encountered an old man who, in spite of the cold, was busily plowing his sterile bit of land. The sultan stopped, blessed the labor and looked on for a few minutes without saying a word. When the peasant turned his weary oxen homeward, the sultan spoke:

"Whence comes the snow upon these mountains?"

"From the hard times," replied the old man.

"And do the bears have dens in the forest?"

"Just as large as God has made them."

"Are you in the habit of skinning your asses in this country?"

"Whenever the opportunity offers, Effendum."

In the meantime the peasant had finished his preparations for going home. The two wayfarers accompanied him. When they arrived at the gate the old man invited the strangers to enter. His wife brought food and drink and prepared a bed.

The grand vizier could not get the questions which the sultan had put to the peasant out of his head. Finally, he could no longer control his curiosity and asked his imperial master for an explanation.

The sultan looked at the vizier and shook his head.

"How is that, Muharem; you, the grand vizier of the Sublime Porte, have not understood my questions? Miserable wretch, if you cannot answer them by morning your honors will be taken from you." Thereupon the sultan lay down and soon was lost in sound sleep.

THE SULTAN, THE GRAND VIZIER AND THE PEASANT.

Muharem tried to think what the snow, the bear and the asses could mean. The longer he thought, the more confused became his brain. At last, when the melodious snore of his lord and master revealed that he was sleeping the sleep of the just, he arose and aroused the peasant who was resting in the adjoining room.

"Old man," whispered Muharem, "what did my master mean by the snow on the mountain?"

"He referred to my white hair, Effendum; which, I told him, came from the hard times."

"Very well; and now about the large dens of the bears?"

"He asked for a resting place for himself and you in my house. I told him that we must put up with what Allah has given us."

"Excellent; most excellent. But now about the ass who is being skinned hereabouts?"

"That, Effendum, is a great secret which I will not reveal to you."

"But if I shall beg it as a favor, old man?"

"Not even then, my lord."

"Here is a gold piece. It is yours if you will answer me."

"That I may not do, Effendum."

The grand vizier continued to implore, but the peasant remained inexorable. Muharem at last sought his humble bed, still searching for an explanation of the riddle. Soon the cock began to crow—he was no wiser than before. The fear of losing his wealth and honors was constantly before his eyes. In his despair, he ripped open his belt and took out enough gold pieces to fill his turban. With this heavy load he once more entered the old man's room, aroused him, and said:

"All this is yours. What did my master mean when he spoke of the opportunity to skin the ass?"

With a smile on his face the peasant took the treasure, and said:

"See now, Effendum, the opportunity has come."

FRANCE IS EXCITED.

Views with Alarm British Aggressiveness in Siam.

Situation Is One That May Lead to Serious Trouble—Brief Resume of a Peculiar Diplomatic Entanglement.

ALTHOUGH there is only the shadow of a foundation for the report, recently published in Paris, that a regiment of Sikhs had "occupied" Kelantan (a Malay state under Siamese suzerainty), yet there are elements in the situation which may lead to awkward consequences. It is well known that Siam has for some time been restive under the attempted aggressions of the French and a Siamese envoy has been recently sent to Paris to arrange a modus vivendi, if possible. While the negotiations are still going on comes the report of this "occupation" by Sikh troops, supposed to have been dispatched from Singapore, and immediately the colonial party in France clamor for similar advances from the French sphere. Only a few weeks ago French Chauvinists got up a scare on account of the supposed employment by Siam of 1,500 Sikh soldiers under British officers. This report as founded on the fact that about 150 Indians were engaged at Bangkok on police duties under a couple of civilian police officers. The present army of occupation is found on inquiry to dwindle down in the same way to 30 Punjabis employed by the rajah of Kelantin as a guard.

SIAM AND MALAY PENINSULA. (Map Illustrating British and French Spheres of Influence.)

These exaggerations and misunderstandings, absurd as they seem, have their origin in the unsatisfactory and unstable condition of Siamese affairs. Ever since the signature, in 1896, of the "declaration" by which Great Britain and France guaranteed to Siam the integrity of the territory embraced in the basin of the Menam and neighboring rivers, together with the coast line from Muong Bang Tapan on the west to Muong Pase on the east, France has regretted her share of the bargain, for the sphere of which she gained possession has proved of little worth, and at the same time she has eyed with disfavor the growing influence of Britain in Siam.

Siam is the last remaining tropical oriental kingdom to retain its independence, and with the example of Japan it has made efforts to preserve its national existence by adopting western civilization. The reforms introduced do not, however, go very deep, and it is to be feared that the Siamese are too indolent a people to carry through their schemes to a logical and practical conclusion. Among their aspirations has been that of reasserting their power in the native state of the Malay peninsula. These states are governed by native rajahs, and are peopled by Mahommedan Malays. The British government controls certain of these states, chiefly by means of advisers or residents at the native courts. The most northern states under British control are Perak and Pahang, and immediately to the north of these lie the states of Kedah, Patani, Kelantan and Trinngganu. Over thes Siam claims suzerainty.

The genuine grievances of the Malay rajahs and the disorders prevailing in their territories adjoining the British-protected Malay states, which are rapidly becoming models of progress and good government, make it difficult to avoid an extension of British influence if the evils are to be remedied. At the same time the temper of the French is well illustrated by their excitement over the supposed advance on Kelantan, and the situation is, as can be seen from this brief resume, which is condensed from the London Graphic, a delicate and difficult one.

BASKET BALL.

Twelve candidates for the City High School basket ball team were out for practice in the Hope chapel gymnasium yesterday afternoon. The practice, which was under the supervision of Robert W. Meeker, captain of the team, was a satisfactory one in every respect; and from the material that showed up, there is every reason to expect that a team can be formed which will come up to the standard of basket ball established by last year's team. Manager Arthur F. Conant is hard at work making up a schedule for the winter season and expects to bring several good teams to town to cope with the school boys. The games will be played in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium.

ROD AND GUN.

Edward Mundy, of Stone street, and Frank Webster, of Duer street, have gone to Hunterdon county for a week's hunting trip.

George Bailey, of Somerset street, was out hunting yesterday and returned with a large bag of rabbits and quail. He was hunting in the Watchung mountains where the game this season is very plentiful.

Among the successful hunters from North Plainfield are Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, Wilbur W. F. Randolph and Frank W. Bailey. They went to Cherryville, Hunterdon county, and returned with sixty-two rabbits.

J. A. Staats, proprietor of the Kensington Hotel and Fred Sandford, returned this morning from a hunting trip in Warren and Sussex counties where they have met with unusual luck. They brought back six genuine English pheasants, three of which they are going to have stuffed. They also shot ten quail and a number of rabits.

ON THE GRIDIRON.

The manager of the I. C. T. football team has secured the services of a college man as coach for the rest of the season.

The I. C. T. and Company K football teams will battle on Alis Common, this afternoon. The game is scheduled to commence at 3:30.

Swedish Pilgrim Services.

The services of the Swedish Pilgrim church will be held in the Y. M. C. A. tomorrow as usual, with Pastor O. G. Norseen in charge. The opening of the new church on West Sixth street has been postponed for two weeks.

SUDDEN ILLNESS WAS FATAL

MRS. MARY MARTIN DIED WITHIN A FEW MOMENTS AFTER TAKEN ILL.

Physicians Performed Autopsy and Assigned Cause of Death to Throat Tronble.

While waiting for a train at the North Avenue depot, yesterday afternoon, Mrs Mary Martin, widow of the late Thomas Martin, was seized with a fainting spell. Dr. Westcott sought to revive her but seeing the woman was very ill, called the ambulance to have her taken to Muhlenberg Hospital. She died without regaining consciousness as the vehicle was entering the institution yard.

The sudden death of the woman led the authorities to order an investigation and one was held, this morning, with Drs. Ard and Hedges and County Physician Westcott in attendance. They found her demise due to a choking of the throat passage, caused by an affliction to which she has been subjected for many months.

She is survived by two children, a boy and a girl. The former is in a Newark hospital and she was on her way there when taken ill. The funeral will be held from the Mount Olive Baptist church, tomorrow afternoon at 3:30. Interment will be in Evergreen cemetery.

Athletic Class Projected.

There is every indication to show that a boys' gymnasium class will be formed in the City High School which will be placed under the supervision of Physicial Director C. E. A. Heywood at the Y. M. C. A. At a meeting of those interested in the formation of such a class, held yesterday, fifteen of the boys expressed their desire to join. It is probable that the class will be formed as soon as possible and regular days decided upon for the athletic instruction of the boys.

Enlivened Matters on East Fifth Street This Morning.

There was an exciting runaway this morning at about 10 o'clock on Fifth street and during the mad race of the horse which was attached to a light carriage several people were nearly run down by the frightened animal.

The horse came into Fifth street from a side street on the west side of Park avenue and in front of the office of Dr. W. Kempton Browning the wheels came in contact with the trolley track and overturned the carriage. The horse kicked itself free of the rig and continued its flight down Washington street where it ran over several lawns and was finally caught in the rear of a house near Seventh street.

TRAINED FOR Y.M.C.A. WORK

A NEW PROFESSION OPENED BY THE GROWTH OF THAT ORGANIZATION.

Two Training Schools of Y. M. C. A. Opened With More Enrolled Than Ever Before.

The two training schools of the Young Men's Christian Association opened this fall with more men enrolled than in any previous year. The Chicago Training School and Secretarial Institute, located in the million dollar building of the Chicago Young Men's Christian Association, has more than eighty students who are studying to be Yong Men's Christian Association secretaries and educational and rleigious work directors and are in training to become physical directors.

The International Training School at Springfield has ninety-one men on the roll and an entrance class of forty-eight. One man is from France, another from Italy. This school has an equipment worth $75,000, a large athletic field and gymnasium, a dormitory and the most complete physical laboratory in existence for the study of physical training, under a corps of specialists. The course of training is three years.

These schools are unable to supply the demand of the association for trained officers, which last year was 247. The schools are turning out about 25 trained men each year.

The associations employ 1,714 trained secretaries, physical, educational and religious work directors and boys' secretaries, and the demand is steadily increasing, as well as the requirements for the positions.

This fall twelve of the leading college and university men of Illinois became secretaries under experienced leaders. College men are now looking upon the association secretaryship as a new profession, offering to the best of them an inviting field of effort, fair remuneration and employment for life.

The associations employ 325 men as physical directors, and demand a technical and scientific training as well as experience for the position. The training schools have furnished considerable proportion of the gymnasium directors employed by colleges.

The associations have nearly 100,000 men in their gymnasiums—more than any other organization in the world. There are 75 boys' secretaries employed, with a constantly increasing demand for more and better men.

There will be fields opening for 200 men in this department in the next two years. There are 20 educational directors employed, who have each in his local department 300 to 1,200 students.

The position of religious work directors in the association is becoming permanent. Associations not infrequently have from 1,000 to 2,500 men each week in their Bible classes and meetings.

There will be a demand for at least 100 secretaries for county and groups of country associations in the near future.

Association leaders declare that it would be possible to double the number of associations in a short time were the properly qualified men needed as secretaries and directors procurable.

J. A. Smith, of Central avenue, came home from Virginia, Thursday evening. quite ill with a fever. Dr. Zeglio is attending him.

HOWARD WRIGHT COMES TO FORE FOR TROPHY

Now Leads for Golf Committee Cup at Hillside Tennis and Golf Club Course.

PASSED E. T. NEWKIRK

WRIGHT DIVIDED FIRST HONORS WITH W. L. GLENNEY SATURDAY.

W. T. Glenney Now Has the Boys' Cup Practically Won—The Play for the Cups Will Probably Last Two Weeks More.

E. T. Newkirk did not hold the lead for the Golf Committee cup at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club very long. Saturday afternoon Howard Wright, who has been playing a strong game this year, divided honors with W. L. Glenney and now holds the lead with 20½ points. There yet remain two Saturdays to compete for this cup and the chances are that Mr. Wright will be the winner if he continues in his present form. All the scores Saturday were good and the course being in fine condition it was a pleasure to play over it.

The scores for the Golf Committee cup are as follows:

Howard deP. Wright	79	0	79

In the weekly play for the Boys' cup, there were only two contestants, W. T. Glenney and Arthur Peterson. The former won first honors, which gives him a total of thirty-five and a half points. This makes him practically the winner of the cup for it is now impossible for any one to beat him out. Arthur Peterson has a substantial hold on second place.

The score for the Boys' cup are as follows: W. T. Glenney, 94, 6—88; Arthur Peterson, 108, 10—98.

MET 'PHONE POLE.

Wagon Stayed Behind, While Horse Continued on Its Way.

An exciting runaway occurred this morning in the borough when the horse and delivery wagon of John Green, a huckster, dashed down Duer street where it collided with a telephone pole. The wagon was demolished and the horse, once freed of the vehicle, ran down Duer street to Craig place with the shafts banging about its heels. The horse was captured near the corner of Pearl street and Watchung avenue.

PARK BOWLERS ARE ACTIVE

THE ALLEYS WILL BE PUT IN THE BEST OF CONDITION.

Many Attractions at Park Club Will Serve to Boom Interest in Bowling This Winter.

Improvements are to be made to the Park Club alleys this fall which will make them the equal of any in the county. At a recent meeting of the bowling committee of that organization, it was decided to get an expert on bowling alleys from Newark who will look over the club's alleys and see just what is necessary to put them in the best of condition for the fall and winter months. Another year it is hoped to have a concrete foundation laid for the alleys and thereby prevent any warping.

Bowling promises to be an important factor at that club this winter. First and foremost will be the contests for the championship of The Daily Press Bowling League. The Park Club's team will be captained by William R. Faber who was in command last year. Among those who will participate in the league contests are such veterans as Laurens H. Van Buren, H. D. Hibbard, F. O. Ball, Allan B. Laing and others with less experience as William A. Townsend, Morgan T. Townsend, Ralph Willis. There is also some new material in the club which it is hoped to bring out.

But the league contests will not be the only attraction as far as bowling is concerned. The bowling committee is arranging for its usual handicap individual tournament which always attracts interest among the members, if not so much on the outside. Then there will be the usual inter-team contests which always prove such pleasant features of the holiday season at the club.

HUNTER DROPPED GUN.

The Weapon Went Off and So Did Dewey, the Dog.

H. Howard Becker, who lives in South Plainfield, went hunting Friday and took with him his dog, Dewey. Dewey was tied with a long clothesline so that he would not get away. While passing through a thicket the dog saw two rabbits and suddenly determined that one of them at least must be his prey. He stood still for a moment and then made a sudden dash the rope slipped through the hands of Becker so that the flesh was burned and then he accidentaly dropped his gun. The gun went off and the next thing Becker knew the dog was sailing peacefully on its way to dog heaven where all faithful canines are destined to go.

DEFEATED BY SOLDIER BOYS

ORANGE FIELD CLUB MADE A PLUCKY FIGHT AGAINST ODDS.

Company C, of Elizabeth, Won the Game at Elizabeth Saturday Afternoon—Score 5 to 0.

At Elizabeth, Saturday, the Orange Field Club met the football team of Company C, of that city, on the gridiron and, although the local eleven was defeated, it made a good showing in the face of bigger odds than it has experienced this season.

The local team held the Elizabethians down well and they only succeeded in making a score of 5 to 0. The game was played without any sensational playing on either side. The greater strength of the Company C. men did not avail them much as the Orange's superior team work counted to their advantage.

"Bob" Eaton, a former Columbia College football player, in the position of fullback played the star game for the soldiers and it was his work that enabled the Company C men to keep the ball in their territory the greater part of the time. Fifteen minutes after the game started the soldiers made a touchdown, but were unable to kick the goal.

Then the Plainfielders took a brace and the star playing of the day for the local team was done when Galvin made the longest run of the day by carrying the ball twenty yards on a double pass. Peter Emmons made several short runs. The touchdown for the soldiers was made by Eaton.

During the game most of the players on the Orange Field Club were temporarily disabled and had to retire, leaving their places to be filled by substitutes, who, however, played well. Brokaw, Guinn, Kenyon, Egan and Furguson were the players who saved the Orange Field Club from a worse defeat.

The lineups were:

O. F. C.		Co. C.
Emmons	le	Lane
Egan	lt	L. Brown
Slingham	lg	Rice
Guinn	c	Wickoff
Brokaw	rg	B. Brown
McNaughton	rt	Cannon
Thayer	re	Hollsed
McVoy	qb	Park
Smith	lhb	Phillipson
Sherwin	rhb	Morris
Galvin	fb	Eaton

Timer—Guinn; referee—Beard; umpire—Mathison, of Elizabeth; linesmen—Pike and Ellswood.

The court then set the hearing on the date mentioned. S. S. Swackhamer and Francis J. Blatz represent the wife.

Mr. McElwaine has captured a number of blue ribbons at the show in previous years and he hopes to carry off another prize this year.

BOTH ELEVENS FAILED TO CROSS GOAL LINE

Thrilling Football Game Between Company K and I. C. T. Club Saturday.

PLAYED ON ALIS COMMON

SPRINGER MADE TWO LONG RUNS FOR THE I. C. T. CLUB.

Military Boys Had Weight and Club Eleven Team Work—They Were Evenly Matched for Neither Eleven Could Score.

Football teams from the I. C. T. Club and Company K presented one of the best and most hotly fought games of the season on Alis Common, Saturday afternoon. Neither side made a goal during the two halves and the supremacy of the elevens is still to be decided. Every member appeared to be in excellent shape and although the military men were superior in point of strength, the club boys were more than their equals in trickiness and team work. Spectators to the number of 300 witnessed the contest.

I. C. T. kicked to Company K which by means of center plays carried the ball to the center of the field, where the military boys lost on downs. I. C. T. took the ball and by a succession of end plays carried it back into Company K's territory and after pretty team work lost on downs after making thirty yards. By weight and center plays the pigskin was gotten back to the center of the field where the club players worked a new trick, the "right shift" which assisted Springer in making a forty-yard run. He might have gone further but for stumbling and rolling out of bounds. The half ended with the pigskin in the Company K twenty yard line.

In the second half Company K kicked to I. C. T. and the ball went into the former's territory. The military boys took the ball but could not get around their opponent's line, finally losing it on downs. Springer again came to the fore with a thirty-five yard run and would undoubtedly have made a touchdown but for colliding with a spectator. The ball changed hands in short succession and rested on Company K's twenty-five yard line when time was called.

The lineup was as follows:

I. C. T.		Co. K.
Flannery	re	Bosterli
Hakes	rt	Walker
King	rg	Hinkle
Utzinger	c	Jennings
Heardle	lg	Wyckoff, Callahan
Sutton	lt	McLoughlin
Harris	le	Giddis
Fisher	qb	Gardner
Springer	rhb	Allen
Day (Capt)	lhb	Ruttledge
Cumberson	fb	Whitney (Capt)

Score, 0 to 0. Referee, R. Erickson; umpire, W. West; timers, Nash and Sampson; linemen, Texier and Faulks. Halves, 15 minute. Attendance, 300.

GERMAN FAIR BROUGHT TO SUCCESSFUL CLOSE

Saturday Night Ended a Week's Activity for Members of the Saengerbund.

WAS WELL ATTENDED

THOSE TO WHOM CREDIT FOR FAIR'S SUCCESS IS DUE.

Dancing Was an Important Feature—Results of Contests and Prize Bowling—A Number of Out-of-Town Guests Were Present.

After a week's successful run the fair of the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein came to a close Saturday evening when the big hall was crowded with young people who thoroughly enjoyed the dancing. The fair has been a great success, as is shown by the heavy receipts at the door and by the interest manifested in the several contests which have been going on at the fair during the week.

Every night the hall has been filled to its utmost capacity and the patronage has been unusually generous. Each night the local society entertained out-of-town guests. Thursday night the members of Warren Engine Company were guests and Saturday night forty-five members of the Arion Singing Society came up here from Newark and during the evening rendered several selections. Other societies from Elizabeth, Rahway, New Brunswick and Bound Brook were entertained on different evenings of the week.

A feature of the closing night was the prize bowling when three prizes were offered for the best scores. These prizes, which were two chickens and a duck, were won by Henry Rummell, chairman of the bowling committee.

The committees who are deserving of credit for the success of the affair were as follows: August Melcher, chairman; Joseph Haurand, John Wirth, Charles Meyers, Jr.: floor manager, Peter Blake; assistants, Henry Hertle, Charles Frey, Adolph Luttmann, and John Retzer. The women who were on the committee were: Mrs. Joseph Haurand, Mrs. Rudolph Spiegel, Mrs. Henry Hertle, Mrs. Henry Rummel, and Mrs. John Retzer.

The awarding of the prizes and contests took place at about 12 o'clock. In the contest for the wheel Henry Haurand was declared the winner, having collected $39. Adolph Barry won the rifle by collecting $20. The contest for the football was won by Henry Stenzenberger who collected $7.

In the diamond ring contest Miss Minnie Frey collected $20.75, while her opponent collected $7.70 and Miss Frey was therefore declared the winner. There was an interesting contest for a gold bracelet between Miss Ida Ballentine and Miss S. Luttmann. Miss Ballentine handed in $21 against Miss Luttmann's $7.

The women's bowling prize of a gold trimmed clock was won by Mrs. Melcher.

WHAT OTHERS SAY.

Clippings From Other Newspapers Which May be of Interest to Plainfield and Its Citizens.

The members of the election boards in Elizabeth are the latest to demand double pay for their services at the polls on the ground that the consolidation of the spring and fall elections by the Meeker act does not take from them their right to remuneration from both the city and county. Their claim is that the length of the ticket now makes their work more arduous than it formerly was at one election. This matter is already before the courts for adjudication. Should the contenions of the election boards be upheld, all the claims made by the men responsible for the passage of the Meeker act that it would result in a great saving in the cost of conducting the elections, would be overthrown, and there would not be a single argument left in favor of consolidated elections. This feature of the matter may play an important part in the attempt which will be made at the coming session of the Legislature to repeal the Meeker act.

If the movement for repeal be successful, and spring elections should be restored, there would be added strength to the arguments in favor of the general use of voting machines. If, with one election, the city of Newark could save $6,900 by the use of machines as compared with the cost of present methods, with two elections the saving would be double that amount. Should the Meeker act remain in force, and the election officers be allowed doubt pay by the courts, there would still be possible a much greater saving of expense to the city than $6,900.—Newark News.

A State Commission will make a report to the Legislature at its coming session embodying some sort of primary election reform, and it is to be hoped that the Legislature will give the matter more consideration than is usually given to reports by commissions.

The people want to have primary elections which will reflect the will of the majority and to have the elections conducted in such a manner as to insure personal safety to the voters who wish to express their preference. The best plan proposed is to have the primary elections conducted by the regular election officers and with the same registry as the general elections have, each voter being allowed to vote for the ticket he prefers, as at a general election. All tickets to go into the same box and to be counted as the official ballots are counted.

This plan would be fair to all, and it would prevent any little clique from preparing a ticket which the voters would be compelled to vote for or to go without voting.

The official recognition of the parties would do away with the question whether political belief can be made a qualification for officeholding and the use of the registry and the official character of the elections would prevent fraud and insure order.

There is no reason why this plan should not be put in operation, and the Legislature has no more important business before it than this.

Partisan enrollment with the lists open to manipulation by unscrupulous election workers with the disorder caused by the burly element prevents thousands from attending the primary elections. This plan would purify the pirmaries and in time would bring out a very full vote for candidates.—Jersey City Journal.

CLUB FOR JERSEY'S SENATORS AT TRENTON

May Play Important Part in the Affairs of the Upper House.

HAS LEASED A HOUSE

IT WILL BE A "HOME AND SOCIAL AND POLITICAL HEADQUARTERS."

The Club May Take a Hand in Election of President of Senate—Those Who Are Interested in Its Formation.

A Senate club, the organization of which was announced in the State house corridors, writes the Trenton correspondent of the Newark News, may have no little part and influence in deciding the election of the next Senate president. While the avowed purpose of the new club is only to provide a comfortable home and social and political headquarters for its members and their friends during the legislative session, there are indications that its scope may extend beyond that, and possibly have the effect of shaping Senate action on organization and legislation no less effectively than the famous "coteer" organized and held inatct last winter by C. Asa Francis and Charles Arthur Reed.

With Francis and Reed out of politics, the Senate "coteer" of last year has lost its leaders, and its resuscitation along the old lines is improbable. Some of the lesser lights in the combination of a year ago remain, however, and their names, almost to a man, are on the list of charter members of the new Senate Club, while it is significant that of the eight Senators who have been announced as members of the new social club, six are also declared to be already pledged to the election of Hutchinson, of Mercer, to succeeed Francis in the presidential chair.

The Senate Club had its origin in the fertile brain of Walter E. Edge, the Atlantic City newspaper owner and promoter, who for two years has been secretary of the Senate. Its inception came from the lack of first-class accommodations offered by Trenton's hotels. The brown stone house at 36 West State street has been leased as a home for the club, which is to be modelled on the same lines that have made the Albany "House of Lords" famous.

Sleeping apartments are to be furnished in the house for the members, and the other attractions of a good club, including a high class cuisine, buffet, parlors, reading-rooms and reception-rooms, are to be provided. Receptions are to be a feature of the club's programme for the winter, and it is planned to make the clubhouse the politicial and social headquarters of the legislative session

The Senators who with Edge are interested in the plans for the club, and are put down on the list of charter members are Wakelee, of Bergen, Lee, of Atlantic, Shinn, of Ocean, McKee, of Passaic, Han, of Cape May, andd Minch, of Cumberland. It is probable that Bradley, of Camden, and Welsh, of Morris, will also join the Senate colony.

It is significant that out of this liat, five are already claimed as pledged to vote for the election of Hutchinson for president. They are Minch, Lee, Shinn, Hand and Welsh. In addition to these, the Hutchinson faction claim the votes of Haines, of Burlington, and Brown, the new member from Monmouth. With his own vote, or by exchange of courtesy with his opponent, should it come to a caucus contest, this would give the Mercer man a majority of fourteen Republican Senators, and guarantee him the caucus nomination for the nomination for the presidency.

DIGG'S UPRIGHT FIRE EXTINGUISHER.
The Best on Earth! We Challenge the World!

The Extinguishers that turn up-side-down to discharge are good of their kind, but this is far better. Read the following reasons:

Points of superior merit of the Diggs-Upright over any other machine—

1—A sealed acid bottle and an air-tight tank. No change in the conditions of the chemicals possible.
2—Can never be discharged by accident; absolutely under the control of the operator.
3—A 3-gallon machine of this type contains ONE QUART more of liquid than a reversible, because it does not require a handle underneath.
4—It does not need inspection and recharging as required for the reversible with its loose stopple.
5—The acid being released at the top of the tank, and the outlet being at the bottom, the mingling of the chemicals is so thorough before the acid reaches the outlet that it is completely neutralized, and no harm can be done to flesh or fabric. In the reversible type the acid is released within the two inches of the outlet.
6—Convenience in handling. The machine stands on its bottom, and all the operator has to do is to turn the screw in the cap, and the flow begins instantly.
7—The bottle is not broken, and no nuisance of broken glass.

PACKING PLANT GONE

Fire Destroys Armour & Co.'s Sioux City Buildings.

LOSS IS ESTIMATED AT $900,000.

Burning Lard and Provisions, With Exploding Tanks of Ammonia, Cause Intensely Hot and Spectacular Blaze.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Nov. 17.—The big plant of Armour & Co., which occupied three and a half acres of ground at the extreme south end of the stockyards district, has been totally destroyed by a fire which started at an early hour Sunday morning on the second floor of the fertilizer building.

The loss, estimated by Charles W. Lennon, manager of the company, is total, or $900,000. The insurance is $721,500.

The cause of the fire was said by Mr. Lennon to have been either spontaneous combustion or an imperfect drier.

Six hundred men will be thrown out of employment all winter by the fire. The fire was discovered by a watchman of the building who only a few minutes before had pulled a messenger box on the floor where the flames started.

Quickly the Armour private fire department of six men was called out, and the entire city department followed.

In a short time six streams of water were being thrown upon the fire which was destroying the fertilizer building, but the pressure was inadequate. The fertilizer building, which was of brick, 120 by 60 feet, four stories high, was located between the beef killing house and the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha railroad tracks on the east. The floors and contents of the building burned like chaff. In less than an hour the roof fell in, and a moment later the fire burst through into the beef killing house. Simultaneously the cattle chute ignited and lasted five minutes, when it fell with a great crash.

From the beef killing house to the oleo building was only a step, and when the lard was ignited the fire presented a most spectacular appearance. The big beefhouse, where 500 carcasses were hanging, soon caught. By this time the entire plant, except the hoghouse, was a lake of fire. The roar was terrible. The country for miles around was lighted up. Suddenly came a terrific explosion, followed quickly by another and then another. Twenty-four drums of a hundred pounds of ammonia each exploded before the reserve supply in the ammonia cistern was reached. That ignition almost razed the entire plant from its foundation.

At 2:30 o'clock the flames burst through the heavy fire wall that separated the big hoghouse from the other buildings. The hoghouse was the last building to the north and the largest of all.

Steadily the fire crept against the wind and through the office building, which from the first had been enveloped in flames. Not a scrap of paper was saved from the office.

About this time a burning roof of a chute fell upon a bunch of live hogs, and their squeals were added to the appalling chorus.

When the hoghouse caught fire, all streams were turned in that direction, but the water seemed like oil. In the building were 3,500 dressed hogs and 2,500,000 pounds of pork product.

After the fire got a good headway in the hoghouse all hope of saving any part of the plant was abandoned. The shops, chicken packing plant, icehouse and ice runways and smaller department houses were consumed in quick succession. The efforts of the firemen seemed without result. The terrible roaring continued unabated, high brick walls crumbled and fire walls were absolutely valueless.

The fire continued to burn all day, and in the afternoon there was another terrible explosion which threw bricks and pieces of hot iron for hundreds of yards, endangering thousands of spectators, but no one was seriously hurt.

Will Rebuild at Once.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 17.—C. W. Armour of the Armour Packing company stated that the Sioux City plant destroyed by fire Saturday night will be rebuilt at once. The new plant will be much larger and finer than the one burned. The company in the meantime will remain in the market, the cattle purchased to be distributed between Omaha, Kansas City and Chicago.

French Editor Comes to See Us.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Among the passengers who arrived on the French line steamer La Touraine from Havre was Jules Huret of the Figaro, Paris, who comes to study American life, the financial and industrial institutions and the probable effect of American enterprises upon the future of Europe. On his return to Paris M. Huret will write a series of articles on these subjects.

Moroccan Pretender Captured.

TANGIERS, Morocco, Nov. 17.—According to a report which has reached here from Fez, the imperial troops have succeeded in capturing the pretender to the throne. It is stated that the sultan at the head of an army of 25,000 men will direct in person the operations to put down the uprising of the Kabyle tribesmen at Zemour.

Governor Yates Seems Better.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 17.—Physicians attending Governor Yates state that they believe a turn for the better has developed. For five hours his temperature remained stationary at 99 3-5 degrees, only one above normal. This is the lowest mark since the beginning of the governor's illness.

A SUNDAY IN CAMP.

President Passes a Quiet and Restful Day.

NEWSPAPER MEN ATTACK BY WATER

Defeated by Mangum's Pickets on Land, They Try to Reach the Camp by Boat—The Bear Hunt Resumed.

SMEDES, Miss., Nov. 17.—Sunday was a quiet day at the president's camp on the Little Sunflower. There was no hunt, but the president and several members of the party spent a couple of hours in the morning rambling over the forest trails on their horses. Dinner was the chief event of the day. The menu included roast bear paws, possum and sweet potatoes. Dinner was served in camp style on a rough pine board table set up in the open air. Tin plates and tin cups were used. There were not enough knives and forks to go around, and the colored cook announced, to the amusement of everybody, as the party sat down that on account of the scarcity of the articles he had distributed them only to the "colonel" (as the president is invariably called in camp) and the "foreign gentlemen."

The president is enjoying his outing very much. He has not had three days of such complete freedom and rest since he entered the White House.

The insurgent newspaper men returned to the assault again. Having been repulsed on the land side by Mr. Mangum's pickets, they resolved to try to effect an entry to the camp by the water route. A boat was chartered at Vicksburg, according to the story in circulation here, and it was reported to have left that place at 3 o'clock in the morning. The route of the expedition is to be up the Mississippi to the mouth of the Yazoo, thence up the latter river to the Big Sunflower. The distance, owing to the trials and bends in the river, is more than forty miles. The rivermen say there is now a sand bar at the mouth of the Yazoo which would stop any craft drawing more than twelve inches.

The Chicago party which is hunting with Bob Bobo's pack of hounds seventy miles north of here is reported to have had better luck than the president's party, according to a message received here. The party during the last week bagged eleven deer and four bears.

Holt Collier's dander is up, and he vows that the "colonel" shall not go home empty handed. His dogs have had a good rest and are in fine condition for the chase, which was resumed this morning.

The Statehood Committee.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Nov. 17.—The United States senate committee on territories has made an important change in its itinerary by which the time of the committee at all points is affected. Instead of going from Albuquerque to El Paso, thence over into Arizona, the committee left for Ashfork, Ariz. From there it intends to go down toward Phenix, where it will stop. It may also stop over at other points on the way to that city. The detailed itinerary of the committee is governed wholly by the work in hand. At Albuquerque the committee heard many witnesses representing practically every phase of the population and resources. Besides, it took frequent drives into the country districts unaccompanied by local citizens. In this city in addition to witnesses Delegate Rodey and citizens selected by him were heard in arguments favoring statehood. The new itinerary of the committee includes Oklahoma and the Indian Territory.

Labor Federation Plans.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 17.—There is a strong probability that the executive council of the American Federation of Labor will be enlarged from nine to eleven members at the present convention and that one of the additional members will be a representative of the socialistic wing of the labor unions. The socialists claim they control nearly one-third of the votes cast in the convention and feel fairly confident of getting one man into the board. A strong element is opposed to the increase in number, and the socialists say they do not expect to win without a fight, but they do expect to have won that much when the fight was over.

Confederate Pensions.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Nov. 17.—The report of Comptroller General Derham, just published, gives the total amount paid out this year in Confederate pensions as $200,227. The total number of pensions is 7,750. Eighty-seven veterans collectively received $1,999 in lieu of artificial limbs. The increases in the number of pensions grows yearly, and if this condition continues much longer the appropriation will furnish a pittance much smaller than now received.

Stole From Their Mother.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 17.—Mike Patroski and Frank Skizenacki, two Amsterdam boys, aged respectively seventeen and fifteen years, were arrested in Schenectady for stealing $1,000 in bills from the former's mother and are confined in the Amsterdam jail. Patroski stated that his mother was about to marry again, and he took this method of securing the money, their joint earnings for ten years, which she kept under a mattress.

WAGE INCREASE CONTINUES.

Many Railroads Follow the Example Set by Pennsylvania Officials.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Announcements of increases in wages have been made by officials of the New York Central, the Philadelphia and Reading and the Erie railways. On the New York Central system the order applies to the train operating department and will give to 15,000 men on its lines from 8 to 13 per cent more wages. A conference at Cleveland of the representatives of the Nickel Plate and several other roads was followed by a statement from a high official that advances would inevitably be made by at least twelve systems, increasing their aggregate pay rolls by $50,000,000 annually.

These announcements follow closely the order for a 10 per cent advance in wages to the employees of the Pennsylvania railroad, though it is stated that the New York Central officials began to revise their wage schedules early in October.

In no case have these orders to increase wages been made in response to demands from employees or of threats to strike. Officials say it is in recognition of faithful service and because of the increased cost of living.

Better Pay For Trainmen.

DENVER, Nov. 17.—Under an agreement reached between Manager J. M. Herbert of the Rio Grande system and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen the members of that order who are employed as switchmen in the various yards of the company are granted an increase of pay based on the Chicago schedule recently adopted.

A TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE.

Survivors of Lost British Steamer Faced Starvation For Days.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Wellington, New Zealand, telegraphs that the eight survivors from the wreck of the British steamer Elingamite who were rescued on a raft by the British survey steamer Penguin went through a dreadful experience. The raft from which they were taken measured only twelve feet long by seven feet wide and had sixteen persons on it when it left the wreck. The only food on board was two apples. The first apple was consumed on Tuesday and the second on Wednesday, each being divided into sixteen portions.

From Sunday, the day they were wrecked, until Thursday, when they were rescued, the survivors drifted sixty-six miles on the half submerged raft. Several attempts were made to land on the Three Kings islands, but without success. Three men died on Monday night through drinking salt water. All of the survivors suffered the tortures of thirst, and four other men and the stewardess died of exhaustion before they were picked up by the Penguin. They had a cruel disappointment on Tuesday night. A steamer was sighted in the distance, and frantic shouts were raised by those on the raft to attract attention. The steamer lowered a boat, which passed within fifty yards of them, but the boat's crew apparently did not see the raft and returned to their vessel.

When the Penguin was sighted, only one of the survivors was able to stand, and all were terribly emaciated.

The Moccasin Is Fast.

GREENPORT, N. Y., Nov. 17.—As far as official figures go the United States today possesses the fastest submarine boat afloat in the Moccasin, which received its under water trials in Peconic bay. It outclassed its English sister ships of similar design and as far as known it proved itself faster under the water than the French boats. It was thought to be quite an advance in submarine warfare when the contract for the new boats stipulated that they should make seven knots submerged. Consequently when the official figures were given out showing the Moccasin had made a maximum speed of seven and twenty-eight hundredths knots on its submerged trials she was hailed as the "queen under the waves."

The Boston Bank Failure.

BOSTON, Nov. 17.—Latest developments in the affairs of the Central National bank, which failed, indicate that the amount of paper considered doubtful is $800,000. This is nearly $100,000 in excess of the total capital stock and surplus. The loss from the Lebanon Springs railroad loan, originally about $350,000, has been gradually reduced until it was carried on the books at $110,000. It is said that the heavy shrinkage in deposits was principally in money owed to the bank.

POET'S HOME BURNED.

Former Residence of William Cullen Bryant at Roslyn, N. Y., Destroyed.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Much regret is expressed in the literary circles of this city over the destruction by fire of the former home of the poet Bryant at Roslyn, on Long Island.

Scores of men and women whose names are familiar in society strove in vain to save from the flames the famous house. While his friends and neighbors toiled in a bucket brigade to aid the firemen gathered from all the surrounding villages Mr. W. Butler Duncan, who lived with his family in the house, directed their efforts and was greatly disappointed at the failure to stop the fire.

All the furnishings of the house, including rare paintings, costly rugs and furniture and the original library of the poet, were saved, but the house itself was destroyed, together with Mr. Duncan's valuable collection of yacht models. The fire lasted nearly four hours.

One of the heirs of the estate, a daughter of Mr. Bryant, is Miss Julia Bryant, who is now in Paris. Since the death of Mr. Bryant in 1878 the family has not lived much in the house at Roslyn, and for a large part of the time the dwelling has been leased to members of the Long Island colony of New Yorkers.

Few literary men were blessed with as many homes as was the author of "Thanatopsis." He had a house in this city, the old Bryant homestead at Cummington, Mass., and the rambling structure at Roslyn, which he liked most of all. It was in the study of the Roslyn house, then called Cedarmere, that important literary work was done. There he wrote the great poem of his later life, "The Flood of Years."

The principal room so far as historic interest is concerned was the library, where one of the best collections of books in the country was gathered. After his editorial labors Mr. Bryant was accustomed to spend in this room several hours an evening refreshing his mind.

Much as the poet loved his home at Roslyn there was a period in his life that he could not endure to remain there. His wife, to whom he was deeply attached, died there in 1866. She was buried in the cemetery at Roslyn, where afterward he erected a monument to her memory. Mr. Bryant's body rests by the grave of his wife.

CHOLERA INCREASES.

Spread of Disease In Manila Causes Alarm.

MANILA, Nov. 17.—The number of cholera cases is increasing in this city, and the spread of the disease is causing some alarm. There are on an average thirty cases daily. The Funst reserve hospital, the casual camp at Santa Mesa and Bilibid prison are now included among the places infected. The disease is spreading in the Marquina valley, where the danger of an infection of the water supply is regarded as grave. Should the water supply become infected a general epidemic is considered to be inevitable.

The cholera reports from the provinces show a decrease in the number of cases.

A conference of the bishops, priests and leaders of the Philippine Roman Catholic church will be held in Manila next week. They propose to address a memorial to Mgr. Guidi, the apostolic delegate in the Philippines, setting forth their position. A number of native priests who sympathize with this movement but are still adhering to the Roman Catholic church will seek an interview with Mgr. Guidi before reaffirming their allegiance to Rome or joining the dissenters.

A Viceroy's Funeral.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 17.—The funeral of Liu Kun Yi, the famous viceroy of Nanking, at Nanking was the occasion for unprecedented demonstrations of respect on the part of the foreign representatives in that city. The funeral cortege was of immense length, and the obsequies by command of the dowager empress were carried out with imperial pomp. Nearly 250,000 people lined the route to the jetty where the remains were embarked by a Chinese cruiser which will bear them to Hunan, the native province of the deceased statesman. The foreign men-of-war lying off the city fired minute guns during the progress of the funeral procession.

Life Prisoner Lynched.

ELIZABETHTOWN, Ky., Nov. 17.—Harlan Buckles, who was sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of Robert L. Reid, was hanged by a mob shortly after 2 o'clock in the morning. The mob included from fifty to seventy-five men, some of whom are supposed to have come from Larue county. On account of their number they had little difficulty in getting Buckles from the jail. He was taken to the courthouse yard and hanged to a tree, after which the mob dispersed. Reid was deputy marshal here at the time he was killed.

Unionists May Be Tried For Treason.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 17.—It is reported that Major General Roe, Adjutant General Henry and other officials of the national guard have conferred with Governor Odell regarding the advisability of bringing treason charges against the officers of the Schenectady labor union which expelled from its membership a man who had served with Company F, Second regiment, during its recent service in preserving order during the strike on the Hudson Valley railroad.

GOOD WORD FOR ARMY

Inspector General's Report Is Very Exhaustive.

THE ENTIRE SERVICE COMMENDED.

Breckinridge Defends the Conduct of the Soldiers In the Philippines After Having Visited the Islands Officially.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—The annual report of General J. C. Breckinridge, inspector general of the army, is a voluminous document and covers every phase of the military establishment and each department bureau and command in the army. It contains more than fifty recommendations and suggestions relating to improvements in the army, most of which pertain to technical matters and minor conditions. General Breckinridge finds much to commend in all branches of the service and reports progress and improvements everywhere.

The most serious criticism is in regard to absenteeism where officers are on detached duty, leaving the regiments short of officers. Thus, in the Philippines especially, it is found that many companies are without captains and the companies in command of new and untried officers. He attributes this to lack of officers in the army to fill the details and detached assignments.

General Breckinridge shows that instructions in the army is progressing satisfactorily. He recommends the fortification of Pearl harbor, in the Hawaiian Islands, as a strategic point. He says water transportation in the army is rapidly assuming stable and economical methods.

He has the following to say regarding his inspection in the Philippines:

"During my tour in the Philippines it was evident on all sides that the army as a whole was laboring patiently and faithfully to solve the many vexing problems continually presented to it. The difficulties encountered and the hardships endured never can be fully appreciated by any one who has not been on the ground and observed the daily life of officers and men 7,000 miles from home influences and associations, living in communities either openly or secretly hostile, depending almost entirely for their subsistence upon the commissary, where one is always afraid to take even an ordinary drink of water without ascertaining first whether it has been cooked. Critics at home may sometimes search for epithets to apply to our general officers, but these officers are no less kind hearted than their critics and were anxiously mindful of the sufferings which necessarily fall upon the innocent in warfare as well as the guilty and were devising means by which the poor might be cared for and fed.

"That the army performed its duties well and bore its hardships uncomplainingly is well known to all who have kept in touch with it since the opening of the Philippine insurrection. In fact, it has only done those things which we expect of it and which we will continue to expect of American soldiers.

"There has been a good deal of discussion in the public press and elsewhere concerning the treatment of the native Filipinos by the American troops, and some rather serious charges have been brought against the army which, however, have not been substantiated. The conditions of war in the Philippine Islands have been perhaps unusual and from reasons arising from the conduct of the Filipinos themselves, who, as the authorities agree, are sometimes extremely cruel and treacherous. In the conduct of the American army toward them the exercise of unexampled patience is claimed, and the humanity of the troops engaged has no parallel in the history of dealing with Asiatics."

A Brilliant Meteor.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 17.—A meteor of great brilliancy fell here early in the evening. The weather bureau reports that it was consumed at an altitude of 300 yards when over the southwestern part of the city. The light produced was intense for several seconds. A dispatch from Cincinnati says: "The meteor that fell at Lexington was seen by the people of Norwood, O., a suburb of this city. It passed in a southerly direction, leaving a bright streak in its path."

Secretary Wilson Ill.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Secretary Wilson is confined to his home by a severe neuralgic cold which has developed since the recent political campaign, in which the secretary took an active part. His ailment has been considerably relieved, but it will be some days before he is able to resume his duties in the agricultural department.

Prince Edward Dead.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar is dead in this city. He was attacked by appendicitis Thursday and succumbed to congestion of the kidneys, with which the original malady became complicated. Prince Edward was born near London in 1823 and was married morganatically in 1851 to Lady Augusta Gordon-Lennox.

Mrs. Grant Ill.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Mrs. U. S. Grant has been seriously ill for several days, having suffered from a severe cold, which increased her chronic asthma. Her physician has said he did not fear a dangerous result of her illness. Her advanced age, however, seventy-six years, has caused apprehension on the part of her friends.

GAME IS PLENTIFUL.

Not for many years have the hunters of New Jersey found game so plentiful as it is reported to be this year. Not only is there plenty to be seen but hardly an enthusiast of the gun goes forth who does not return with his game bag more or less filled. Some are more expert than others while luck has its favorites but they all manage to bag something. Stories of wonderful trips are therefore numerous.

Just exactly why game should be more plentiful this year than in previous years is a hard thing to explain. It is undoubtedly a fact, however. Plainfield has supplied even more than its usual quota of hunters and all seem to have met with more than the usual luck. The poor cottontail is quite numerous in the fields just outside the city and he and hundreds of his little brothers have been brought down. Quail and partridge are not as rare as one might expect. It is through the counties of Somerset, Hunterdon and Warren that the hunters' paradise appears to exist. From these counties come the greatest tales of remarkable results of sundry expeditions.

With the exception of the accidental shooting of the South Bound Brook lad, the hunting season has been singularly free from accidents in this part of the State. With so many hunters out, many of whom are undoubtedly inexperienced in handling firearms, it is wonderful that more people are not killed or maimed for life.

New York is not going to permit the sale of parlor matches witin its boundaries. The people of the great city will have to use either the safety matches which strike on the box or else return to the old sulphur matches with their highly sulphurous odor. There are bound to be many objectors but if the countless accidents and fires, which owe their origin to that deadly parlor match, can be eliminated in the future, the city will be a wonderful gainer by the law. Even here in Plainfield a long list could be made of accidents, some serious, others of a minor character, which are directly traceable to the advent of the parlor match.

The lines of the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Street Railway Company have been singularly free from serious and fatal accidents since a decided change was made in the management and policy of that road. The collision, which resulted in the death of Emil Amiet, on West Front street, Wednesday night, was the first fatal one to occur for some time. For a time it did look as it that company was fated for serious accident followed serious accident with frightful rapidity.

Great news and good. Rev. Mr. Scudder, pastor of a Jersey City church, has formed a boxing class and is teaching the sons of his members the manly art of self-defense. Now when the women corner the young men at their church fairs they will know how to fight their way out before suffering financial embarrassment.

The Gorham Silver Company has done most of its advertising in the magazines, but after an experiment in which it used space in 200 newspapers twice a week it has decided to appropriate $75,000 for daily "ads" in the leading newspapers for next year, relates the Philadlephia Record.

If only Senator-elect Samuel S. Childs would move over into Union county and go into the water business, Plainfield might secure water meters. Bernardsville has to thank Mr. Childs for its water supply. They do not use water meters there but it is because they make no charge.

An exchange makes a great hullabaloo about a crowd of men, women and children scrambling for a roll of money dropped on a street in Elizabeth. Why, the same thing can be seen on the floor of the stock exchange every day and nobody thinks it worth mentioning.

A clubhouse for State senators ought to have more wires radiating from it than are to be found around a telephone exchange.

DUNELLEN.

A large crowd assembled in Apgar's Hall Saturday evening and enjoyed the dramatic entertainment presented by the Banjo, Mandolin and Guitar Club. Three short plays were presented in a finished manner and were much enjoyed. They were "A Social Outcast," "By Telephone," and "Burglars." All the players were good in their parts by the Linbarger family were especially prominent. Other parts were taken well by James Wotten, Mrs. John Lance, Mrs. Jennie Fesmeir, and Miss Annie Wilcox. Between the plays some excellent selections were given by the club and afterwards the evening concluded with a reception and dance in which all participated. Altogether the evening was a very successful one for the club.

Some excitement was furnished the people of this place last evening at about 6 o'clock in the shape of a fire in the house on Dunellen avenue, owned by Thomas Bodine. The fire was first discovered by Mr. Bodine, who gave the alarm. The engine responded, but as there was some delay in finding the key to the fire house the fire was out by the time it arrived. The blaze was in the chimney and resulted from a wood fire. It was put out by knocking out a side of the chimney and pouring water down. Some damage was done by water and also considerable by the smoke, which was very thick.

Last evening the children of the Presbyterian Sunday-school brought in the boxes in which they have been saving money for missionary work, for the past year. The teacher of each class read appropriate selections on missionary work and Rev. N. J. Sproul spoke a few words.

The "lean old Doctor of Spotless town" could not make a good living because the people would not get sick. Why not save doctors' bills by preparing for cold weather and get the proper kind of underwear at J. R. Blair's haberdashery.

If you want to purchase groceries and meats at a great saving go to S. Scheuer & Company's on West Front street. You can get the best goods and experience will teach you that you can cut corners on lots of things, thus saving yourself money and trouble.

In a shipment received several days ago, by the Plainfield Art Store in the Y. M. C. A. building, numerous new designs in molding were noted. Now is the time to have your pictures framed as the lot will not last long. Special rates will prevail during the holidays.

One reason why the people living in the park, on the other side of the brook, like to trade at W. W. Dunn's grocery store is because he attends so carefully to the wants of his patrons. In his store may always be found the choicest lines of farm produce and fancy and staple groceries.

The hunting season is here and there is no reason why every one should not have fresh game when Smalley Brothers, on North avenue, have large supplies of rabbits and quail. Smalley Brothers' Jersey sausage is the best sold in this city. This week they will make a specialty of Jersey chickens.

In order to instruct its many patrons in the proper preparation and use of health food-, the management of the A. and P. Tea Company store on West Front street, will have a demonstrator, Mrs. M. Flannigan, give exhibitions there all this week. Those who care to visit the store will be greatly repaid for the time.

The fame of Dudley S. Miller's instantaneous headache cure has spread all over this country and to Montreaux, Switzerland. From the latter place, recently, Mr. Miller received his second order for a shipment of this cure and he has also received praise for its curative powers. Mr. Miller's pharmacy on Park avenue is one of the best in the State.

THEATRICAL.

The Ethel Dyffryn Company, which is considered one of the best organizations, will open a week's engagement at the Central Theatre this evening, presenting the "Little Torment," a sensational comedy drama in four acts. The company is composed of clever people and includes the child actress, Ethel Dyffryn, who is considered the youngest star on the stage today. Her success for the past five years has been so marked that she has become a great favorite in all the cities played. The strength of the company, the grand productions, together with the choice selections of plays should make the engagement one of decided interest. Other plays for the week will be "The Boy From Boston," Lightkeeper's Daughter," "Hour of Vengence," "Out Casts of a Great City," "Little Trump," "Embassy Ball," "The Octoroon." The specialties will include Little Ethel, the child Patti of the world, the famous Dyffryn Trio, Master Tommy Dyffryn in character songs, the Mozart Quartette in choice selections, Waldo Whipple, bone soloist, buck and wing dancer, Emam Boultore and W. D. Reed, making the performances a continuous one and one which is well worth witnessing. Women's tickets Monday night.

—No breakfast is complete without a cup of Neuman Brothers' Mocha and Java coffee. It's simply delicious.

Cured of Piles After 40 Years.

Mr. C. Haney, of Geneva, Ohio, had the piles for forty years. Doctors and dollars could do him no lasting good. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cured him permanently. Invaluable for cuts, burns, bruises, sprains, lacerations, eczema, tetter, salt rheum, and all other skin diseases. Look for the name DeWitt on the package — all others are cheap, worthless counterfeits. L. W. Randolph.

WHY HE SHOT AT KING.

Anarchist Attempted Leopold's Life Because of His Inhumanity.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 17.—According to some reports, Rubino, in the course of his examination before the magistrate declared that he selected King Leopold for his attack on account of his majesty's inhuman conduct toward his daughter, Princess Stephanie, at the time of her mother's death, and he also wished to show to the anarchists in London who suspected his loyalty that, while they only talked, he acted. He would have killed King Edward, he added, but for the strong feeling of the English people in favor of the monarchy.

The attempted assassination of King Leopold is still the chief topic of conversation here. His majesty had been to the cathedral at Brussels, accompanied by members of the royal family and court officials, to attend a "Te Deum" in memory of the late Queen Marie Henriette. The royal carriages were passing the Bank of Brussels, in the Rue Royale, when an Italian fired three shots from a revolver.

Fortunately no one was hurt, but a bullet passed through the window of the Count d'Oultremont, the grand marshal of the court, and grazed the count's face.

King Leopold's Assailant.

ROME, Nov. 17.—The ministry of the interior has established the identity of the assailant of King Leopold. His name is Gennaro Rubino, and he is described in their records as an advanced socialist. He was condemned to a long term of imprisonment for stealing at Milan in 1893, but he effected his escape to England, where he is supposed to have imbibed his anarchist principles. His father was a patriotic communal councilor, but Rubino while still serving in the army was condemned to five years' detention for writing a subversive newspaper article. These are the only criminal records that have been found against him. Since leaving Italy he has resided continuously in Scotland and England, first in Glasgow and afterward in London. Some years ago he was accused of treachery by his anarchist friends and expelled from their ranks.

BOYCOTTING A RAILWAY.

Schenectady Trades Assembly Trying to Tie Up City System.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 17.—The executive committee of the trades assembly was in session during Sunday arranging details of the boycott against the Schenectady Railway company. The boycott officially went into effect at midnight, but was not actually enforced until 6 o'clock this morning. Seventy-one men, one from each union, will watch the cars and will be aided by others if necessary. Every union man found riding on the cars will lose his union card. Every business man will be warned not to ride again and will be boycotted if the warning is disregarded. If any employee continues to ride after being warned, his employer will be notified to discharge him. There are, it is estimated, 2,800 persons who live at such a distance from their work that they are dependent upon the cars.

It has also been decided to extend the boycott to the use of gas and electric light, both of which are manufactured and controlled by the Schenectady Railway company. Members of unions, business men and the general public will be asked not to use gas or electric light, and the trades assembly is considering petitioning the common council to cancel the contract which the company has for lighting the streets with arc lights.

The trades assembly has arranged for the importation of seventy carryalls to carry men to and from work. The trades assembly officers state positively that it will not tolerate violence of any sort. There are about 250 motormen and conductors employed by the Schenectady Railway company at $2.60 a day, and the refusal of the company to compel these men to join a union is the cause of the boycott. The majority of the men express themselves as perfectly satisfied and say that they do not want to be unionized. There is a strong undercurrent of opposition to the boycott among trades union members, and public sentiment is unanimously with the company.

Danish Ambassador Sets Out.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 17.—Ambassador Jusserand and his wife, who is an American lady, have left for Paris, where they intend to spend the New Year. They will proceed thence to Washington, where they expect to arrive in January. A great homage was paid to them on their departure, Foreign Minister Deuntzer, United States Ambassador Swenson and Mrs. Swenson, the other members of the diplomatic corps, the court dignitaries and a crowd of personal friends being present at the station.

Burned to Death In Bed.

PARIS, Nov. 17.—Count Frank, who was well known in society here, was burned to death in his bed through an outbreak of fire at his residence, the Chateau des Landes, at Saresnes. It is supposed that he fell asleep while reading and the lamp in some way set fire to the bedding.

AN EQUINE FREAK.

A Beautiful Black Mustache Adorns Upper Lip of Bearded Myra, a Western Hors..

Chicago has a horse with a mustache. Early the other day Myra H., out of Queen Myra, by Black Giant, appeared in the city, and wondering citizens stopped to gaze as she high-stepped down the boulevard, says the Chicago Inter Ocean.

Bearded Myra, the veterinary surgeons agree, is a phenomenon. On her upper lip is a long black mustache, not a spare thing, made up of a few scattered hairs, but one of heavy, luxuriant growth, like the false affair the villain wears in the play. When left alone it droops gracefully over her mouth and gets in her way when she eats.

MYRA AND HER BEARD.
(Illinois Horse Known as the Queen of Equine Freaks.)

Myra is the property of F. A. King, of Clinton, Ill. She is coal black all over, with the exception of a single white star on her forehead, a strong, straight-limbed, beautifully-formed animal, and altogether a splendid specimen of horseflesh. Mr. King brought her from Clinton to have two prominent Chicago veterinary surgeons examine the growth on her upper lip, and, if possible, explain its presence there. From here he will take her to San Francisco, where he will remain for the winter.

"Myra was my mother's pet. Mother died recently. I would not part with Myra for a fortune," Mr. King says. "Museum managers have fairly haunted my footsteps, all anxious to buy her. Many surprisingly large offers have been made me, but I would accept none of them. As long as I have money enough to keep her well-fed, well-housed, and well-cared for, Myra and I shall not be parted."

The Chicago veterinary surgeons who have seen the mare are at a loss to account for her mustache.

Occasionally Mr. King has the hostler cover the mare's facial adornment with a black cloth, which effectually conceals it. Then Myra passes up and down the boulevard without attracting more than the most casual glance from the passers-by. She seems to understand this, and enjoying her distinction, dislikes the cloth.

Sometimes, on the other hand, Mr. King orders the hostler to take great pains to "dress" the mustache becomingly. The style that he and Myra like best is the one affected by Emperor William of Germany.

BISHOP JOHN M. FARLEY.
(Recommended by Propaganda for Archbishop of New York.)

New York, has been the auxiliary bishop of that diocese since 1895, in which year he was consecrated bishop of Zeugma. In 1884 Pope Leo had already given Dr. Farley the title of monsignore, and in 1891 he was made vicar general of New York. The prospective archbishop was born in Armagh, Ireland, 60 years ago, and was educated partly in his native land and partly at St. John's college here, in the American college at Rome, and in St. Joseph's seminary at Troy. He has been a priest for 32 years.

THE NERVOUS WOMAN

"WELL, doctor?" The patient drummed her fingers impatiently on the table as she spoke.

"You live on your nerves," was the answer.

The woman laughed. "As if I had anything else to live on!" she retorted sarcastically as she shrugged her slender shoulders.

"Why did you choose a rocking chair when you came into this office? Why didn't you sit in a straight backed one?"

"I—I don't know." She stopped the quick, jerky rocking she had been indulging in ever since the beginning of the conversation. "I suppose I did it unconsciously." The rocking recommenced without her noticing it.

"You see you can't stop it! Now you are fidgeting your feet—that's just as bad—and now you're rubbing your right thumb against the side of your first finger. Can't you keep absolutely still?"

The patient took a long breath and faced the doctor. "No!" she said. "I feel as if I should fly all to pieces. I can't; that's all there is to it!"

The woman rose to go. "Oh, if I had known that nerves was all that was the trouble with me I wouldn't have bothered you!" she said crisply. "No one ever died of nerves that I know of."

"Then you haven't studied cause and effect very carefully," remarked

THE PIANO DRIVES HER WILD.

the physician. "More people die of nerves every day of the year than one can count. They die in three ways—mentally, morally and physically. If you have a very strong will, you don't die mentally or morally, and if you have very strong health you don't contract disease. Now, a disordered nervous organization robs you of both these safeguards. You make light of nerves," he went on, "and yet I tell you that the nervous woman is not only no good in this world, but in many cases she is a positive harm. She begins by allowing herself to be affected by small things. The sound of a piano drives her wild if she is writing, and when she reads you mustn't talk within a mile of her. She fidgets, she bites her lips and drums on the table; then she begins to borrow trouble, to fret, to wonder why other people don't fret and to worry for them—in other words, to nag them. The next step is to become visionary. Her mind is in that state of tension that she is ready to believe almost any superstition or fancy. Her children, if she has any, become weak willed and cowardly through their nerves. The nervous woman loses life's best chances because speech trembles on her lips, and she is incapable of sustained action or patient waiting. She becomes an extremist and is thorough in nothing. She lives perpetually at high tension, her tastes become highly flavored, she dislikes quiet company, quiet books, even quiet sounds. Life itself must be keyed to her own unnatural pitch."

"And what would you do about it if you were such a woman?"

"I would seriously go over my mode of life and find out what was wrong with it. There are three principal causes for such a state—mental worry, an unhealthy mode of life and overstrenuousness, or attempting too much. Concerning worry, here's the best thing that was ever said: 'If what you are worrying about is hopeless, then worrying won't do it any good; if it is not, then devote your energies to changing matters.' As for the two last causes, I have only this to say—make a change at all cost, live regularly, insist upon getting the proper time for sleep, food, work and recreation. If your present position in the workaday world or in society is untenable under these conditions, change it, even if you have to change your whole mode of life, for life was not meant to be a torture or a curse, and it is only by our own acts that we make it so. And, above all, have respect for your nerves, for they mean not only your own well being, but that of all those around you."

THE CARUTHERS AFFAIR

By Will N. Harben

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY A. N. KELLOGG NEWSPAPER CO.

certainly," was the count's reply. He set his lantern down and leaned against the closed door.

"Where am I, in the name of mercy?" gasped Gielow.

"You will never know that," answered the count, with a satisfied smile. "Would you believe that you have been sleeping on that straw for three days and three nights?"

"That may be," slowly replied the artist, "for I am starving."

"Ah, yes, it is time for you to feel that way," replied Bantinni. "It will be hard from now on. I could let you sleep your life away without a moment's pain if I were to hypnotize you again, but I shall not waste the time."

"I was under your influence, then?"

"Completely."

"And for what reason?"

The count laughed.

"I don't mind telling you my plan. It will give you something to think about in your solitude. If you will reflect, you will remember that Caruthers was the only barrier to any man's marrying Miss Huntington and getting the benefit of her fortune. Well, Caruthers is non est; he has been murdered. On the night the crime was discovered you confessed to your servant in my presence that you had committed the deed; then you packed your bag and fled."

"Absurd," said Gielow, slowly, his staring eyes fixed in horror on the face of the Italian.

"You remember nothing about it, for you were hypnotized," said the count; "but, if you will believe an eye witness, you played the part most naturally. The papers of New York have been full of you for the past three days."

The count paused and feasted on Gielow's expression.

"What have you to say to that?" he added, with a fiendish chuckle.

"I simply don't believe it," said the prisoner, slowly. "You have cut me off from information and intend to torture my mind with your Satanic inventions."

"Oh, that's it, eh? Well, how do you like the looks of that?"

Bantinni took from his pocket a folded newspaper, and opening it held the front page where the sullen rays of the lantern fell upon the head lines.

"That's plain enough to be read from where you are," he said. "There's your name at the top."

The big black letters seemed to stamp themselves on the brain of the artist. They drew him, as it were, by force to a sitting posture, then he covered his face with his hands and sank back on his pallet of straw.

Bantinni drew nearer him and swung his lantern over his face. It was as if he feared his victim had succumbed to the ordeal. Seeing his fear ungrounded, he laughed lightly.

"You must not die too quickly," he said; "it would not suit my purpose. Since you have been here you have aided me vastly, and I may need your assistance again."

Gielow made no answer. He had folded his white lips together as if to keep them in subjection.

"You seem to have little curiosity," went on the count. "You have good control over the features, but I can make you writhe. What if I were to tell you that since you have been here you have with your own hand written to your sweetheart confessing your crime and saying that Count Bantinni had followed you for days and nights trying to get you to give up your awful scheme, and that you had finally eluded his vigilance and carried out your plan unknown to him?"

Gielow's very soul seemed to die within him. He closed his eyes to shut out the diabolical visage of his tormentor, but even through his eyelids he saw the red glow of the lantern and felt the presence of the inhuman fiend.

"And more than that," continued the voice of the Italian. "You have written a letter to the police acknowledging the crime and expressing your intention of leaving America for good. They are trying to catch you, but when they fail and have forced me to testify against you—I say forced, for it would be unseemly in a friend to volunteer such information—and after my statement has compelled Henri to open his lips, well, you can see that with you buried here I shall be safe to marry the girl. You don't think so?" (Gielow had writhed visibly.) "Well, remember my power. She would have been my wife long ago but for the clause in the will pertaining to Caruthers. I have always believed that a great murder could be committed without the perpetrators ever being detected, and I have carefully worked out the details of this plan."

The strain was too much for the depleted physical condition of the ill-starred prisoner. Bantinni seemed to be talking to him from a great distance. Then came the sound of the iron doors closing, the turning of a key in a rusty lock, darkness, silence, soothing unconsciousness.

CHAPTER XVIII.

When Gielow next awoke it was with increased pains from hunger and thirst. His lips and throat were dry and swollen; his face was hot with fever. Slowly his last talk with Count Bantinni came back to him.

"I must die here like a dog, and Dorothy will be his next victim," he groaned. "If only I could save her! would not care what became of me." But later the realization of his blasted reputation, the downfall of the name he had been so proud to bear, struck him like a blow and he threw himself back on the stone floor and wept.

After awhile a dull sound like the far off beat of horses' hoofs and the hollow rumble of wheels was transmitted to him through the rock against which his head rested. He found when he sat up that the sound was no longer audible, so he judged that there must be a paved road or street near if not beneath him. For hours he listened to these sounds, his sense of hearing becoming so acute that he could distinguish between the passing of a two horse vehicle and a single one. After awhile everything became quiet and he judged that it was night.

Long dragging hours elapsed, then the sounds awoke to life again and he knew that another day had broken. Touching the uneven rocks of one of the walls he discovered that they were moist, and crawling to them he licked their slimy surfaces with his parched tongue, but this only seemed to irritate his thirst without giving relief, so he threw himself back on the straw and tried to practice what he had heard a mental scientist say about the efficacy of ignoring the belief in hunger or thirst to escape suffering when deprived of food or water. But he failed in this, and allowed visions of cool sparkling streams in sunlit meadows to pass before his eye's mind. He never thought of Dorothy now except as seated with him at a sumptuous table.

Once when he put his head in a new position, to avoid the piercing of the sharp-pointed stones, he felt a tiny stream of fresh air shooting from the wall about a foot from the floor. Examining the stone in that vicinity, he found a long irregular crack through which the air entered. Then he began to beat the stone with his handcuffs and noticed, when he struck it near the crack, that it gave forth the sound of broken rather than of solid stone. Again and again he beat the rock until he felt more air coming in at the cleft, and then his heart bounded with expectation, for he had loosened a piece of the rock about a foot long by two inches in width, and when he had tugged at it for several moments it fell to the floor.

Then, joy untold! a stream of daylight flashed into his face and for an instant blinded him. When his eyes had become accustomed to the unwonted brightness, he saw that there was a widening crevice through the solid rock from the interior of the cell to the outside. And through it, about 50 feet beneath him, he saw a paved roadway bordered by trees and grass.

But owing to the downward tendency of the fissure his range of vision was very limited. In fact, he could see only a little beyond the furthest edge of the road and barely 50 feet of its length. So he could form no idea of the landscape, or where the spot was situated. Now and then, a man, or a group of men, would walk past, but the sound of their footsteps did not rise to his ears. Carriages and vehicles of several kinds went by, but they glided along as noiseless as bicycles, unless Gielow put his head against the stone.

There was a rustic seat at the side of the road, and the artist almost forgot his inward torture in hoping that some of the passers-by would sit there to rest. He had a vague idea that if the people would only stop and look up he might manage to signal to them.

A young man and a girl came into view. They were walking slowly hand in hand, and, as if obeying Gielow's desire telepathically, they sat down on the rustic seat. The young man put his arm around his companion's waist, their eyes met, and their faces glowed.

Gielow placed his lips to the crack and shouted, but he had grown so hoarse that his voice did not pass through the crevice in the rock. He tried again and again and at last gave up in despair.

Then another thought entered his brain. Feeling over the floor, he finally found a pebble and tried to throw it through the fissure, but this was also an impossibility. The opening was too long and irregular for anything to be thrown through it, and it sloped downward so gradually that the pebble would not roll.

ALLERS, THE ARTIST TRAVELER AND HIS WORK

A GERMAN PICTURE MAKER WHO HAS PAINTED THE PEOPLE OF ALL LANDS.

IT is strange that a traveling artist, so admirable and so well known in his own country as Christian Wilhelm Allers, should be practically unheard of in the United States, where, among the numerous art students, at least, much attention is usually given each aspirant for fame along unique lines. It cannot be due to any jealousy on the part of our artists, for they have none of that, but are always willing and eager to recognize merit wherever found, and are not prone to see ability only in the old masters. They seek the modern rather than the ancient in art, and worship at the shrine of the living rather than the dead, and care not from what country they come.

Yet few draughtsmen of modern times could surpass him in his own way with the pencil, and fewer still could match him in observation and humor. Nevertheless, not one in a thousand among the students or the art lovers have heard his name in this country. This may be, in part, because despite his popularity in Germany, he did not appear to champion his country in the Paris exhibition of 1900. But at that very time he was making beautiful character drawings in the isle of Samoa.

The art of drawing with the lead pencil and with the chalk-point, long fallen into comparative desuetude in this country, has always been practiced in Germany. In England, Prof. von Herkomer and his pupils have especially delighted in the work—the highly finished head with plenty of finger-rubbing, and roughly indicated bodies, are much as we often see them in Herr Allers' work. But Allers is as various in the detail of his technique as his subjects themselves. But look at it closely and you will find echoes, as it were—proofs of sympathy with many a notable draughtsman. Close observers will sometimes see the influence of M. Renouard; still more often Von Menzel has been the master; now there is the handling and even the eye of Oberlander, or of Wilhelm Leibl, or again of Max Klinger, or of Segantini, the Italian.

Who then is the celebrated yet mysterious artist? He is a man 45 years old, a native of Hamburg, who began life as a lithographer (like Jules Cheret), and so gained his extraordinary facility of finger and wrist. After studying in the art school of Carlsruhe, where he learned drawing from Poeckh and painting from Ferdinand Keller, he painted many portraits and life-size genre pictures (such as his "Life in Capri"), which are now all in private hands in Duesseldorf and Hamburg. But until he began to produce his humorous sketches, with their keen insight into life and character, he could not be said to have become famous. Now he is among the most popular of German graphic humorists, and widely accepted as an admirable artist. His clever works include studies of extraordinary excellence in their way—"Renz's Circus," "Behind the Scenes," "The Silver Wedding," "Our Navy," "The Germany Hunting Book," "The Club Entrance," "Things Unpoetical," and the like, give proof of a talent which belongs rather to a man of quick observation and humor than of imagination or creative power. But is not that what we must say of the older German school as a whole—even if it comes to it, of the band which in the bright pages of Jugend struggle to be unconscious of their effort, and brush up old motifs till they think they are original? As if unconscious originality were a deliberate thing!

The great moment in Allers' career was when he determined to make a protracted tour around the world and draw the people of all countries. From Italy, where he was in 1896, he made other longer journeys—he was in Ceylon in February of 1897, and in Egypt later in the year; in Cairo, on the Nile, in Assouan, and then in Philae. The year 1898 was a fruitful one; India, Java, Bangkok, China, Japan, produced a cloud of studies of street characters and street scenes in Kobe, Yokohama, Hankow, Canton, Hong-Kong, Tingtau; and in 1900 many beautiful drawings of Samoa bring us back once more to the gentle native and to Robert Louis Stevenson. It is a wonderful record, and delightfully set down, as may be seen in the three examples issued herewith.

The artist sought to give not only the types of the various nationalities among which he has passed, but has recorded also characteristic occupations and customs. The Japanese mandarin girl, and Egyptian water carrier, the Tyrolese eagle slayer, the Assouan warrior, the Chinese missionary and public letter writer, and the lemonade seller of Cairo are recorded with a truth equally felicitous and keen. The views in Japan, landscape and street scene, are masterly in pictoral arrangement and vivacity of suggestion, and the technique is so good that there is little of the drawing-master element about them such as we used to see in the old days. These drawings, no doubt, recall a good deal of the work of our great lithographers, for this is the style which made the stone so popular in the middle half of the nineteenth century, but the freedom of pencil upon paper necessarily exceeds the greater deliberation of the "greasy chalk" upon stone. And modern process has come to assist the artist in a way which lithography could rarely do.

MORE OBSTACLES.

This Time it is the Mason Who is Blocking Front of Postoffice.

While many obstructions have been removed from in front of the Babcock building, other obstructions in the way of stone were placed this morning in front of the postoffice. Postmaster E. H. Bird was very indignant over the matter and complained to the contractor, who said that it was the mason who had placed the stones three.

When the mason was seen about it, he was inclined to ignore Mr. Bird's request that the stones be removed and up to noon they had not been. Mr. Bird is determined that he shall have a clear space in front of the postoffice, even if he has to take heroic measures to accomplish the desired purpose.

PLAINFIELD WELL REPRESENTED AT BIG FOOTBALL GAME.

Some of the Local Enthusiasts Had Some Trouble in Getting to Princeton Saturday.

Plainfield was well represented at the Yale-Princeton football game at Princeton, Saturday afternoon, and it was for Yale that a majority of the local enthusiasts were cheering. Those who went from this city by the way of Elizabeth had more than the usual amount of trouble in reaching Princeton before the game. The specials on the Pennsylvania Railroad were so heavily loaded when they left Jersey City that they went through without stopping at Elizabeth to pick up the passengers waiting there. So the crowd boarded a regular local train and were turned out at Princeton Junction without any means of getting over to the town. By making flying connections with some of the passing excursion trains, the Plainfielders succeeded in reaching Princeton in time to see the game.

Among those from this city who witnessed the game were Mr. and Mrs. Lewis E. Waring, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford A. McG..., Miss May Waring, Miss Florence Waring, Miss Mary Anderson Reinhart, J. W. Reinhart, Chas. S. Lee, Miss Genevieve Lee, Miss Daisy Elsberg, Charles Dupee, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Bond, Ray Biglow, C. Wesley Abbott, Robert Abbott, Francis Martin, John Valiant, Jr., William L. FELL IN FRONT OF A CAR

QUICKWITTED MOTORMAN STOPPED CAR JUST IN TIME.

A Three-Year-Old Child Ran Into Path of Car and Fell Beneath Fender.

Presence of mind on the part of Mark Hipp, a motorman on the Dunellen-Netherwood trolley line, is all that prevented the life of Sarah Nolan, the three-year-old child of Andrew Nolan, of East Front street, from being crushed out beneath the wheels of a car, Saturday afternoon. In her anxiety to get to a candy store to spend a penny, she ran directly into the fender of Hipp's car as it was passing her home.

She was struck by the fender and knocked down but at the same instant the quick-witted motorman reversed the power, bringing the conveyance to a stop with a jerk that sent passenegers in a confused heap. A few feet more and the wheels would have passed over her form as she had slipped beneath the fender.

The child was picked up and taken home, more frightened than hurt. She still complains of a pain in the back but it is thought to be a mere bruise. Hipp's action was warmly commended by all who witnessed it but he modestly declined to accept any praise.

ALL ESCAPED INJURY.

Trolley Car, Nearing Bound Brook, Plunged Down Embankment and Heaped Up Passengers.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, Nov. 17—An accident, which might have cost several lives, occurred Saturday afternoon on the Middlesex and Somerset Traction Company's line near Riverside Park, between Bound Brook and New Brunswick. A trolley car in which were nine passengers jumped the track while going at a high rate of speed and rolled down an eight foot embankment. The motorman jumped as the car left the rails and thus saved his life.

The car struck at the foot of the embankment on its front end and piled the passengers in a heap in the corner. They were gotten out as soon as possible and it was found that no one had suffered any injuries beyond a few bad bruises.

TEA TABLE TALK.

Short Sketches That Are Not Always News, But Just as Interesting.

To Plainfielders, who are so accustomed to seeing automobiles of all kinds, gasolene, steam and electric, speeding about the city streets, it seems rather strange that there should be but five automobiles owned in New Brunswick. While no one has ever attempted to make a census of the automobiles owned in this city, a very conservative estimate places the number at over twenty. But where New Brunswick has only one street in really good condition, there are miles of finely macadamized streets in this city which offer excellent opportunity to the owners of horseless carriages.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

The Thanksgiving vacation closes on Friday, Nov. 28, and the pupils will assemble as usual Monday morning, Dec. 1 and will also be in session Tuesday. There will be no school during the rest of that week. The school law requires that all teachers be present at the sessions of the Institute.

ENDEAVOR PRESIDENT'S LETTER TO SOCIETIES

Letter to New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union From President Lumbar.

A GREETING FOR YEAR

A STATEMENT ISSUED BY THE STATE FINANCE COMMITTEE.

W. T. S. Lumbar Wants All of Jersey's Societies to be Up and Doing—Year Has Been One of Growth and Improvement.

The New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union has entered aggressively and earnestly upon another year of work, and from his home in Moorestown the president has issued the following characteristic letter to the socities of the State:

"Dear Endeavorers—As we enter on another year it is with feelings of thankfulness that we look back over the year that has passed and see how God has led and blessed us. The year was one of growth along many lines. The Bridgeton convention made that very plain. The willing co-operation of the vice presidents, superintendents of departments and the district secretaries, together with the efficient labors of State secretary and treasurer, made this possible.

"At the opening of our new year we find a still more willing, united and aggressive spirit prevailing. We anticipate a larger and more efficient work as the result. But with all the determination and consecration of the State officers to be unsparing of time and strength in prosecuting the work, they can do but little without your assistance. Will you give it? Will the corresponding secretaries do what they can by reading to their societies all communications that are sent them from the State officers, knowing that nothing but what is important will be mailed to them.

"We therefore ask you, as members of Christian Endeavor Societies, to do three things the coming year to advance the cause of the Master in our State.

"Pray for the work. It is the work of God, and has been, and is being used of Him for His glory. Pray earnestly and with faith, that God will consecrate us all to His service, and also bless the work and make it a power in the State for the doing of much good. Let our hearts be bound together by the sweet sympathy of united prayer for a common, unselfish purpose, and the great Head of the Church will bless us.

"We also ask you to work with us. Prayer without work is like the body without spirit,—dead. Join heartily in every effort made to do good through this channel. Think how vast the results that might be obtained through such concentrated service. A tiny stream gushes from yonder hillside, it seems of little import ance, but as it flows down through hill and plain it receives many a rivulet and noisy brook, until at last it glides on, a majestic river that carries on its broad bosom the commerce of great nations; so shall it be with us and our work if we will unite all our strength in one grand, aggressive movement for Christ and the church.

"Finally we want your financial co-operation. Without it the work must suffer and many things be undone that are needed to be done for His sake. You will be informed as to the disposition of all that you give for this work. You have a right to know, just as we have a right to ask it of you, for it is not for ourselves, but for Him who said, 'The Lord loved a cheerful giver.' Do you think the Lord cares, do you think He is interested in it all, do you think He will bless you if you give heartily and generously as unto Him? If you do we know that the appeal will not be in vain.

"United in our prayers, united in our service, united in our gifts, we know there can be but one result, and that will be that through the consecrated hosts of Christian Endeavorers God will accomplish such a work in our State as will cause us all to rejoice that He said unto us, 'Go work today in my vineyard.'"

"Yours heartily, in the work,
"W. T. S. Lumbar,
"President."

Accompanying President Lumbar's letter is the statement of the finance committee estimating the expenses of the union for the year. At the meeting of the executive committee, held in Westfield, September 29, the vice presidents of the union were appointed as the finance committee, and together with the treasurer were instructed to present to the societies the work of the State for the coming year, and to enlist their hearty co-operation and prompt support. The following departments of work are now in active operation: Fresh Air, Sabbath Observance and Citizenship, Correspondence, Junior, Evangelistic, Press, Bible Study, Missionary, Colored Societies.

The circular says: "As the executive committee felt that an advance should be made this year along all these lines of work, and also as the new constitution provides for closer relations between the State officers and the individual societies, in the way of information and visitation from the vice presidents, the finance committee feels that the work should have at least $1,000 this year to successfully carry it on."

The expenditures are for absolutely necessary expenses, such as postage, circulars, literature, etc., and in no case as salary or perquisites of any kind or for general traveling expenses. Those who are familiar with the workings of the State union and cognizant of the far-reaching influence of its several departments will at once see that the committee has made a most conservative estimate for the year.

J. T. Sproull, Rev. W. D. Stultz and Dr. A. W. Bailey form the finance committee, while the treasurer is Rev. T. E. Davis, of Bound Brook. To the last-named all societies are to forward their subscriptions. The committee asks that the matter receive prompt attention, in order that the work may be pushed without delay.

NEXT MEETING AT SHILOH

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS FIX PLACE FOR NEXT YEARLY MEETING.

Concluding Session Held at the Seventh - Day Baptist Church Yesterday.

The yearly meeting of Seventh-Day Baptists was concluded yesterday morning, when the last session of the conference was held. At the opening of the service a short business meeting was held at which time it was decided to meet next year at Shiloh, N. J.

The first part of the morning service was occupied with an excellent address by Rev. O. U. Whitford, of Westerly, R. I., corresponding secretary for the Seventh-Day Baptist Missionary Society. This society represents both the home and foreign fields, and Mr. Whitford told of the progress being made in missionary enterprises in the church.

After this address, and a prayer by H. H. Baker, of this city, Rev. L. E. Livermore, of New Market, preached the sermon of the morning from the topic, "I Am the Light of the World," Gospel of St. John viii; 12. It was a deep spiritual discourse and was a strong incentive to better Christian living. After the sermon the conference closed in the regular way.

THE MOTORMAN NOT TO BLAME

Coroner's Jury Decided Yesterday That He Was Not Responsible for Accident.

SHARP WAS RELEASED

Testimony Was Taken Before the Jury—Sharp's Witnesses Held That Van Driver Was Asleep and That Slippery Rails Were Responsible for Collision.

Eugene Sharp, the trolley motorman in charge of the car which struck a van on West Front street, Wednesday night, causing the death of Emil Amiet, of Bound Brook, was discharged from custody, yesterday afternoon. A jury, empanelled by Coroner Livengood for the purpose, listened to testimony in regard to the case and after a brief deliberation decided Sharp was not culpable for the fatality. They held a failure of the brakes to work on the slippery track as responsible for the accident and not any negligence on the motorman's part. The jury was composed of Charles DeGraw, foreman, Morris Abrams, John J. Kenney, Jere Foss, Stephen Schlief and Frank Linke. Police headquarters was the scene of the hearing.

The witnesses examined at the hearing were Dr. J. C. Gaston, who lives opposite where the accident occurred and who examined Amiet's form immediately after; Carlos C. Gallup, Aaron Levine, conductor of the car, Dr. Albert Pittis, who also examined the body immediately after death ensued, County Physician F. W. Westcott, Patrolman Andrew Saffron, Robert McAfee, John King, owner of the truck, Edward C. Hobby and Miss Cora Willet. Prosecutor N. C. J. English called for the direct testimony on behalf of the State, while cross examination was made by Assemblyman William Newcorn, representing Sharp. Attorney W. R. Codington was also present in behalf of the victim's widow.

Assemblyman Newcorn's evident intention from the start was to show that Amiet was asleep when his van was struck. Valuable witnesses to this effect were McAfee, Hobby and Miss Willett, who all saw the vehicle just before the collision and testified that Amiet had every appearance of one in slumber. The latter two were particular about his appearance and asked by Prosecutor English, as to why they had taken special notice of an ordinary van, related an incident that removed all doubt as to their sincerity.

"You see," said Hobby, "this girl put her hand on my shoulder and I said: 'Look out, there's a man on that wagon' ".

"Did she 'look out?' " asked the prosecutor. The witness replied in the affirmative while the spectators laughed.

Patrolman Saffron, who saw the van as it passed Front street and Park avenue, averred that the man was awake, but he was the only one who so testified.

Nothing of importance regarding the blame was gleaned from any of the other witnesses excepting Levine, the conductor. In his statement he claimed to have heard the motorman sound the gong and felt a reversal of the power twenty seconds before the crash occurred. On alighting from the car, he said, the motorman remarked that he had done all he could to avoid the collision but that the slippery tracks prevented. Testimony revealed this was the case, as the night was damp and wet leaves were on the rails. It was this fact that evidently influenced the jury in its decision.

In summing up Prosecutor English defined for the benefit of the jury the purpose of holding the coroner's hearing. It was not, he said, to try anybody but merely to determine where the responsibility rested for the accident. If Sharp had been originally negligent, he continued, then he was culpable for involuntary manslaughter, otherwise he was blameless. The jury retired with this admonition and returned with its verdict in about thirty minutes.

FINAL FAREWELL TO AN HONORED MEMORY

Funeral Services of Charles Graves Held From Church of the Heavenly Rest.

WINFIELD SCOTT POST, G. A. R., WAS PRESENT IN A BODY AT THE CHURCH.

And Conducted the Services at the Cemetery—Were Many Beautiful Floral Tributes—The Veterans Served as the Pallbearers.

The Church of the Heavenly Rest was filled to overflowing yesterday afternoon when the funeral services of the late Charles Graves were held. It was solemn and impressive testimony to an exemplary Christian life and each one felt that Mr. Graves' death was a distinct loss not only to the church, of which he was a devoted member, but to the community as well.

The services were conducted by Rev. Harris C. Rush, rector of the church, and in connection with the regular funeral service of the Episcopal church, he spoke a few earnest words of the life and character of Mr. Graves.

There were selections by the church choir consisting of Mrs. E. E. Brown, Miss Jennie Wenzel, Miss Lizzie Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Morgan, Juan A. Babcock and John Thompson. Garret T. Dunham presided at the organ. The choir sang "Abide With Me," "O Paradise, O Paradise," and "Rest, Spirit Rest."

The members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., of which Mr. Graves was a member, attended the services and at the grave conducted the Post memorial service. This was in charge of Commander J. F. Berg, assisted by M. C. Dobbins, who acted as chaplain, and Francis A. Whitely, H. C. Smith and H. C. Corsa. There was the salute at the grave by the firing squad and the final sounding of taps. The Independent Fife and Drum Corps acted as an escort for the Post and played the funeral march.

There were a great many beautiful floral tributes from relatives and friends, including a cross, bearing the word "Papa," from the children, a large bunch of chrysanthemums from the Woman's Guild, of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, a pillow from Post, No. 73, G. A. R., a wreath from the Woman's Relief Corps, and a large number of cut flowers, including lilies from other friends.

The firing squad, members of Post No. 73, G. A. R., included the following: John Vail, E. M. Devine, Preston B. Goodfellow, Israel Compton, Jas. Beglin, William Hand and M. Wagner. They were in charge of Officer of the Guard Albert Perry. The pall-bearers were also from the Post and were as follows: T. O. Doane, W. C. Smith, Louis Willett, Job Coddington, Fred Wendell and M. C. Dobbins. The interment was in Evergreen cemetery.

SEWERS FOR THE BOROUGH

Sewage Commission Submitted Its and Engineer's Report to Borough Council.

TWO PLANS PROPOSED

Either a Sewer to Tide Water or a Disposal Plant—Commission Will Report More Fully in the Future—Municipal Engineering Company's Report.

The Borough Sewage Commission, comprising B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Elston M. French, William C. Smith and David T. Keenny handed in its partial report on its investigations on the sewage problem in North Plainfield, at the adjourned meeting of the Borough Council last evening when the Municipal Engineering Company, of 1123 Broadway, New York, sent a report and a description of its plan which shows the people in the borough what they may expect in the way of a sewer disposal plant.

The description of the plant and the cost of installing the same is given forthwith and shows the extent of the project of doing away with the sewage in this manner instead of carrying it to tide water.

This, however, is not the final report of the commission as they are to submit a more exhaustive report later after they have investigated the question of tide water drainage further.

There was much time taken up in discussion for and against the proposed system in which Mr. Clark asked if there was not a law which was passed prohibiting any town from emptying into a stream after 1904 unless they have been emptying into such a stream prior to that year, to which the borough counsel, Charles A. Reed, said that such a law had been passed but in that law there was a clause saying that it was necessary to get the approval of the State Sewage Commission and cited Passaic as an example.

Mr. Reed further said that if the sewage could be carried to tide water it would be much preferable. Personally he thought that the scheme proposed was better than the system now in use in this city because, he held, that not only has the sewage got to be carried to tide water but it has to be carried to a point where it is not obnoxious to communities in that vicinity. He said the nearest tide water from here is the Raritan River but New Brunswick has already cried out against Somerville and Bound Brook emptying their sewerage into that river and there was likely to be a greater howl if North Plainfield should follow their example.

He argued that it would have a septic tank at the bank of the river. Even at Raritan Bay it would be necessary to have a septic tank as the State Sewerage Commission makes it almost complusory.

New Brunswick, Bound Brook and Somerville may be stopped at any time from emptying their sewage into the Raritan without a septic tank, he said, as they have no authority for sewering at tide water or anywhere else unless they have the permission of the State Sewage Commission to do so.

After a little further discussion it was moved to receive the following reports and they were ordered placed on file.

To the Honorable the Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield.

Gentlemen: Your Sewage Commission appointed by Mayor Smalley on June 7, 1901, under authority given by a resolution passed by the Borough Council, begs to report as follows:

Owing to several resignations from your commission, and other causes, we did not get actively to work until early in 1902, since which time we have had numerous meetings for the purpose of investigating the subject committed to our care. As a result of those meetings your committee desires to submit the following preliminary report:

First—That owing to the fact that the borough of North Plainfield bears such close relationship to the city of Plainfield, that it is in reality competing with the city as a place of residence, and as the city is povided with a sewage system it is necessay for the borough to be provided with a like convenience if it expects to secure normal growth or even to hold its present position.

Second—It being deemed necessary, for the reasons stated, that a system of sewage should be introduced the next question is what system appears most feasible? In regard to the systems of sewage which your committee would report on we would state that we have considered the various methods which are common for this purpose.

First—To carry the sewage to tide water. This would be most desirable and is having our further consideration, as we desire more time to more thoroughly investigate this system as applied to North Plainfield.

Second—To adopt the system which disposes of the sewage by means of intermittent filtration. This does not appear feasible to your commission on account of the difficulty of securing the proper soil upon which to construct it and which is essential to the successful operation of this plan. This system was tried in the city of Plainfield and failed on account of the soil on which the beds were constructed.

Third—To use a system embracing the use of a septic tank in connection with a series of contact beds, which system bears the stamp of approval of the New Jersey State Sewage Commission and which is now in use in the city of Plainfield, and from reports received from the city authorities, is doing its work to their entire satisfaction.

Having eliminated the second method of sewage disposal on account of its impracticability under existing conditions, the two remaining plans seem the only ones within the range of present possibilities. Acting on this conclusion, so far as the septic tank method is concerned, your commission employed the Municipal Engineering Company to make a survey of the borough and prepare an estimate of the cost of the introduction of such a system. We append their report and estimate to our report, together with the map which they prepared in connection with their proposal. The plan they propose is an improvement on the system used in the city of Plainfield. The cost of this plant, including mains, laterals and flush tanks, is $87,400. In naming this figure it must be borne in mind that there was no competition in securing the bid and was only obtained so that we might place before your honorable body and the people of the borough a statement as to what the approximate cost of such a system would be.

We are unprepared to report on the approximate cost of a system of tide water disposal at this time, as we now have this matter under investigation, but hope to make a final report at an early date, all of which is

Respectfully submitted,

Elston M. French,

David T. Kenney,
Committee.

THE PROPOSED SYSTEM

The sewer system as proposed by the Municipal Engineering Company will cost the borough $48,000 and the disposal system completed in a first-class manner will cost $39,000. These figures will not include engineering fees which, Mr. Pearson, the representative of the company who was present at the meeting, said would amount to about five per cent. of the cost of the plant.

This amount provides for a first-class system of sewers, including manholes, flushtanks, etc., on all streets on which houses are located. In some places, notably along the Green brook, road iron mains will have to be laid on account of the great number of springs which are to be found along this place which will form an inverted syphon. The sewers will be divided so that they will be found adequate for present as well as future conditions.

The disposal of the sewage arranged for safeguards the health of the community and is destined to care for a population of 7,000 inhabitants and will allow for the extension of the system to provide for a population of double that number.

The sewage enters the system through an endless line of moving screens, the function of these being to remove all coarse matter in suspension and to convey the same to the chambers where the evaporation take place. The matter is then conveyed to the large sedimentation tanks where the velocity is checked and the settling of the fine suspended solids may take place. From the sedimentation tanks the sewage flows over dams to a conduit from which it may flow to each of the reception tanks. These reservoirs will have a capacity of holding 4,000,000 gallons.

From these tanks the sewage goes through a natural process which liquifies all solid organic matter to prepare it suitably for purification. As this part of the process causes the sewage to turn black and causes offensive gases this part of the system is covered

ESCAPED FROM BURNING HOME

Mrs. John W. Mulholland and Her Daughters Fled in Night Robes From Blazing House.

THE RESIDENCE GUTTED

A Midnight Blaze Practically Destroyed a Washington Park Residence—The Loss Will Amout to $16,000—Partially Insured—Occupants Escaped in Time.

Awakened this morning with the room full of suffocating smoke and the roar of hungry flames ascending the staircase, Miss Eleanor Mulholland rushed into the apartments where her mother and sister were sleeping at their home at 93 Rockview avenue, aroused them and led them in their night robes through fire and smoke down a winding back stairs to safety, stopping only long enough to grab up some clothing. Such were the experiences of Mrs. John W. Mulholland and her two daughters, Mrs. J. B. Mason and Miss Eleanor Mulholland, this morning, when a fire broke out at their home at 12:30 and completely gutted the house.

The fire evidently started in the cellar from a furnace flue and ate its way up through the flooring to the reception room and from there to the living apartments at the top floor where it was discovered by Miss Mulholland just in time to enable her to arouse her mother and sister, who are both quite deaf, and lead them to safety. As soon as she had seen that her mother had been placed in the care of neighbors she rushed in her night robes to the home of J. L. Watson, where a telephone message was sent in to the Warren Engine Company. There was no one in the house at the time and the telephone bell was only heard some minutes later by Marshal Adelman who turned in an alarm from a neighboring box.

When the firemen arrived at the scene it was found necessary to have assistance so the West End Hose Company was sent for. The firemen saved the house of J. L. Watson, which was already smoking, and the house of J. M. Pitman, next door. The fire burned fiercely for four hours.

There was only one accident reported. Walter Bennett, a fireman who was carrying a length of hose up a ladder, fell through the rungs of the ladder and, slipping, fell to the rafters below where he caught his chin on a nail and was severely cut.

The long fight in the face of the terrific heat made the firemen exhausted and E. A. Overton, whose house is near by, made some coffee and served it to the men. W. H. Debele, the milk dealer, had some coffee made and brought it to the scene of the fire in his delivery wagon.

The house, which is almost totally destroyed, is owned by Mrs. Mulholland, and is about two thirds covered by insurance. The firemen returned to the headquarters at 5 o'clock and at 6 o'clock they were again called out by a still alarm to quench a fire in the rafters. The total loss will be about $16,000. A little dog lost its life in the flames.

INCREASED THE PRICE.

Charge for Private Rooms at Muhlenberg Hospital Has Been Raised.

Notification has been given to physicians that on and after December 1 the charge for private rooms at Muhlenberg Hospital will be $20 a week, instead of $15 as heretofore. Just why the increased rate is adopted is not understood by many physicians who have received notice of the change. For some time past the number of private rooms has not been sufficient for the demands as a rule. Only a week ago one physician was obliged to place two of his patients in the ward because he could not get private rooms.

MAKER OF HARNESS SUCCUMBS TO DISEASE

Wm. H. B. Drake, a Well-Known Citizen Passed Away Last Evening at His Home.

ILL FOR FOUR WEEKS

HAD SPENT HIS LIFE OF SIXTY-FIVE YEARS IN PLAINFIELD.

Save for the Time He Served as a Volunteer in the Civil War—At His Request Pythian Knights Will Conduct the Funeral.

William Henry Bryant Drake, a well-known citizen, died last evening about 6:30 o'clock at his home in Orchard place, after an illness of four weeks, the last two of which he was confined to his bed. Early this year Mr. Drake was critically ill. He recovered for a time and was able to attend business. His death was due to a complication of diseases which baffled the skill of the physician.

Mr. Drake was born in Plainfield sixty-five years ago and, with the exception of the time he was in the Civil War, he lived here all his life. At the age of seventeen years he went with Thomas Worth, the harness-maker. He learned that trade and followed it up to the time of his illness. He was probably one of the best known harness-makers in this vicinity.

When the Civil War broke out Mr. Drake enlisted at Perth Amboy in Company I, Twenty-eighth New Jersey Volunteers, and he saw considerable service. He was married just prior to the war. He was a faithuful member of the First Baptist church. He was also a very active member of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Knights of Pythias, and a member of Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, Improved Order of Red Men and Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R.

Mr. Drake leaves a wife and one son, Arthur Drake; also one sister, Miss Hannah Drake, the only one left of a family of ten children. The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock and, as it was Mr. Drake's request that Perseverance Lodge conduct the service, this will be followed out.

"The Hero of the Merrimac," Capt. Richmond Pearson Hobson, is to lecture on "The United States as a World Power," with reminiscences of his work, career, etc., at the Casino, Monday night and it will be an event of great interest no doubt, to many.

Capt. Hobson in the war displayed great tact and a wonderful physical courage which will be exploited in history for all time. Monday night he lectures upon a theme in the highest degree patriotic and showing a mastery of technical detail.

SAW A LIGHT.

Exploded Lamp Had Been Thrown Out of the Window.

A bright reflection shining in his room, Sunday night, caused Nels Nelson, a clerk in the drug store of Peter Hodge, to investigate and he soon found that an exploded lamp had been thrown on to the roof of a building from a window in the upper apartments of a house on West Front street. Mr. Nelson went in search of Patrolman Quass and he put the fire out before the building caught fire.

A Distinguished Company.

From Boston comes the interesting item of news that last week Mrs. Julia Ward Howe entertained at her Beacon street residence Signor Mayor des Planches, Italian Ambassador to the United States. Among the other invited guests were Mrs. Howe's two daughters, Mrs. Maude Howe Elliott and Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of this place, besides Count Campello, president of the Circulo Italiano and Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson. Mr. Anderson was formerly attached to the United States Legation in Rome.

Long Water Main.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company is just about finishing the laying of a six-inch water pipe about a mile long which will supply the new residence of Francis Hyde near the Park Golf Club, and a number of other houses which he intends erecting in the near future. The pipe is almost a mile long, it being over 4,000 feet in length.

MUSIC HALL CHANGES HANDS

S. F. Sherman, of New York, Purchases Plainfield's Opera House This Morning.

TO OPEN IN JANUARY

Plans for Remodelling Theatre Will be Carried Out, Except Second Gallery Will Not be Built Until Next Summer—The Entrance Through the Drug Store.

The Stillman Music Hall has just been purchased by S. F. Sherman, a well-known theatrical man of New York. As soon as the plans can be perfected, Mr. Sherman will fit up the house in a first-class manner. He will also make a fine entrance through Rowley's drug store to the lobby of the theatre.

The plans for remodelling the house will be carried out in the original form, with the exception of the second gallery, and that will be added next summer. There will be new seats, scenery, heating apparatus, etc., and the house will be made up-to-date in every respect.

Mr. Sherman is the president of the H. S. Taylor Exchange, New York, and he owns the Sherman Opera House block in Newark, N. Y., one of the finest of its kind in western New York. He is also lessee of the Baldwin Theatre, of Wellsville, N. Y., the Burrett Opera House, of Weedsport, N. Y., the Nelida Theatre, of Catskill, N. Y., the Passaic Opera House and the opera house at Clinton, Hunterdon county.

It is Mr. Sherman's plan to open Stillman Music Hall about the middle of January with Maude Adams or a star of equal brillancy. He has had a wide experience in the theatrical business and there seems to be no doubt but that his latest venture will be a success. Credit for the deal is due to Charles H. Hand, of this city. He has worked earnestly to open Music Hall and in securing such a capable man to take the house, he deserves much praise. Mr. and Mrs. Sherman was in Plainfield this morning and inspected Music Hall. It is likely that they will take up their residence here.

GOLDEN GATE TOURS.

Under the Personally-Conducted System of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

California and the Pacific coast resorts have become so popular in recent years with the better class of winter rest and pleasure seekers that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has decided to run two Golden Gate tours this winter, one to include the famous Mardi Gras spectacle at New Orleans. On the going trip both tours will travel by the Golden Gate Special, one of the finest trains that crosses the continent. One tour will return by this train, while passengers by the other and later tour will use regular trains returning. In California, passengers will be entirely at their own pleasure in the matter of itinerary. Should a sufficiently large number of passengers desire to join in taking an itinerary suggested by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, the services of a tourist agent and chaperon will be at their disposal.

The first tour will leave New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, and other points on Thursday, January 29, and will travel via Chicago, Kansas City and El Paso to Los Angeles and San Diego, arriving at the latter point February 2. An entire month may be devoted to visiting California resorts, the Golden Gate Special leaving San Francisco on the return trip, Tuesday, March 3, and returning via Salt Lake City, Glenwood Springs, Colorado Springs, and Denver. The rate for this tour will be $300, covering all expenses of railroad transportation, including side trips to California, as well as berth and meals on the Golden Gate Special going and returning. No hotel expenses in California are included. Tickets are good for return trip for nine months, excepting that passengers who do not return on the Special must provide their own Pullman accommodations and meals eastbound.

Tour No. 2 will leave Thursday, February 19, by the Golden Gate Special. Cincinnati, Montgomery, and Mobile will be visited en route to New Orleans, where the party will stay during the Mardi Gras festivities. The train will be side-tracked for occupancy during the three days spent in New Orleans. Stops will also be made at Beaumont, Texas, Houston, Texas, San Antonio, and El Paso. The train will arrive at San Diego, February 28. So far as special train arrangements are concerned, this tour will be completed at San Diego Passengers may dispose of their time in California as they see fit. Should a sufficient number desire to take a suggested trip through California, the services of a tourist agent and chaperon will be placed at their disposal.

The rate for this tour will be $275, covering all railroad transportation for the entire trip, including side trips in California, seat at the Mardi Gras Festival, and Pullman berth and all meals on the Golden Gate special from New York until arrival at San Diego.

Private compartments, i. e., drawing rooms or state rooms, may be obtained by the payment of additional charges on both tours. A detailed itinerary is in course of preparation, giving all information concerning these tours. Application should be made to George W. Boyd, assistant general passenger agent, Broad Street station, Philadelphia, Pa.

A UNIQUE AND BEAUTIFUL collection of everything that genius has devised or mere man thought of for the happiness of the children. Dolls—thousands of them, and so many games that you cannot help but wonder who invented them all. As a special attraction to this newly opened fifth floor department we have secured at a considerable expense

The Famous Mechanical City.

It required the entire time of one man for over twenty years to build it. Nearly two hundred moving working figures no larger than the little people of the land of Lilliput. Railroad trains, windmills, water wheels, foundries and factories, all in full operation, and there are so many interesting features in this little city, covering an area of less than twenty-five square feet, that it would be an almost impossible task to name them all here. It costs nothing to see it, and none are too young or none too old to enjoy this remarkable novelty.

DIGG'S UPRIGHT FIRE EXTINGUISHER.
The Best on Earth! We Challenge the World!

The Extinguishers that turn up-side-down to discharge are good of their kind, but this is far better. Read the following reasons:

Points of superior merit of the Digg's Upright over any other machine—

1—A sealed acid bottle and an air-tight tank. No change in the conditions of the chemicals possible.

2—Can never be discharged by accident; absolutely under the control of the operator.

3—A 3-gallon machine of this type contains ONE QUART more of liquid than a reversible, because it does not require a handle underneath.

4—It does not need inspection and recharging as required for the reversible with its loose stopple.

5—The acid being released at the top of the tank, and the outlet being at the bottom, the mingling of the chemicals is so thorough before the acid reaches the outlet that it is completely neutralized, and no harm can be done to flesh or fabric. In the reversible type the acid is released within the two inches of the outlet.

6—Convenience in handling. The machine stands on its bottom, and all the operator has to do is to turn the screw in the cap, and the flow begins instantly.

7—The bottle is not broken, and no nuisance of broken glass.

THE STRIKE INVESTIGATION DRAGS.

Counsel For the Erie, Wayne MacVeagh, Spends a Day in Firing Questions Without Material Results.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 18.—In the presence of as many persons as could be jammed into the superior court room Wayne MacVeagh for the Erie company and John Mitchell for the miners continued their brilliant battle of cross examination before the anthracite coal commission. The two men, the one in his thirties and the other in his seventies, were followed with intense interest by both the commissioners and the crowd throughout the day, and the contest was not ended.

The fourth demand of the union, which calls for a yearly trade agreement and which means a straight out recognition of the union, was the bone of contention, and, although four hours were taken up in a discussion of the question, not much material progress was made. Wayne MacVeagh, skilled in the art of cross examination, attempted to show the utter irresponsibility of the union and its unfitness to make contracts which it could not live up to. His principal argument was the alleged boycott, and he often hard pressed the miners' president for an answer. The latter, however, slowly and deliberately gave his replies, but they did not always satisfy his inquisitor. Mr. MacVeagh in the presence of the assemblage expressed his admiration of the ability of the witness, and on one occasion, when Mr. Mitchell parried a question regarding the boycotting of a coal and iron policeman by a hotel keeper, the distinguished attorney threw up his hands, laughed and said, "Mr. Mitchell, you are the best witness for yourself that I ever confronted."

Mr. MacVeagh weighed heavily on what he said was a reign of terror in the anthracite region during the period of the strike. He read a list of fourteen names of men who were killed during that time and also submitted in evidence about seventy-five printed pages of alleged violence, boycott and intimidation and with the assistance of stacks of other documents maintained that it would be utterly impracticable for the coal companies he represents to enter into agreements with an organization that could not control its own men.

Mr. Mitchell stoutly maintained that the discipline in the organization is as good as it possibly could be where 147,000 men were involved. He claimed that the strikers were not entirely responsible for the acts of lawlessness that were committed. He regretted that members of the union had in some instances violated the law even after they had been warned to refrain.

In answer to questions he said that where there is a reign of terror—and he had no information that such was the case during the late strike—conditions arise that are "intolerable" or "unfortunate." Replying to specific instances pointed out to him by Mr. MacVeagh where men had been deterred from going to work through fear of personal harm or social ostracism for themselves and families, Mr. Mitchell said that in some cases men may have been deterred, but denied the assertion that such alleged acts prevented the mines from being operated.

The miners' president, no matter how skillfully he was questioned, could not be dragged into a flat admission that he, as president of the union, approved of the boycotts complained of by the companies.

In the course of the forenoon session Mr. MacVeagh examined Mr. Mitchell regarding the eight hour demand and referred to the fact that Abraham Lincoln, James A. Garfield and William McKinley worked more than eight hours a day and were thus enabled to climb the ladder to the presidency. Mr. MacVeagh grew eloquent in the course of putting one of his questions to Mr. Mitchell regarding the martyred presidents and added, "I only mention these because they are the three victims of the spirit of anarchy which is the curse of this country today, and the only serious curse afflicting it."

The miners' president quick as a flash came back with the inquiry, "Trade unions are not held responsible for it, are they?" to which Mr. MacVeagh quickly responded that they were not and supplemented this with the remark that labor unions are most admirable.

The investigation is dragging too slowly to suit the commissioners, and it is likely the commission will ask both sides to agree upon some arrangement for expediting the investigation. Mr. Mitchell has now been on the stand for three days and has been examined by the attorneys of only two companies. The second attorney, Mr. MacVeagh, is not yet through with him. The lawyers for the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western or the Philadelphia and Reading company will next take Mr. Mitchell in hand unless the programme is changed.

It is expected the attorneys for the nonunion men will present their case to the commission today. They have asked the commission to take up the grievances of the nonunion men growing out of the strike, and as the nonunionists are not a logical party to the arbitration scheme their attorneys have been requested to give reasons why the commissioners should take up their case. If it is decided to hear them, it will inject an entirely new feature into the investigation and one which was not expected at the time President Roosevelt created the commission.

NEW POSTAGE RATES

Madden Favors Four Cents a Pound on Publications.

NEWSPAPERS TO BE EXCEPTED.

Change Urged Because of Abuse of Second Class Privileges—A One Cent Rate For Letters Not Likely.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Edwin C. Madden, third assistant postmaster general, in his annual report now made public recommends the establishment of the following new postage rates:

A new rate at 4 cents a pound for all publications now admitted to the second class mail except daily, triweekly, semiweekly and weekly newspapers in the general understood sense of the word "newspaper." This rate is to be paid on the bulk weight without regard to the number of pieces, the same as is now the case under the pound rate.

The consolidation of the third and fourth class of mail matter and that the postage thereon be at the rate of a cent for each two ounces or fraction thereof, to be prepaid by stamps affixed.

Congress also is asked to authorize the postmaster general to accept under suitable regulations mailings of large quantities of identical pieces of printed matter and small articles of merchandise without the necessity of affixing postage stamps to the individual pieces.

The recommendation for the 4 cents a pound rate is an outgrowth of the investigation into the abuses of the second class mail privileges. Mr. Madden says that many of the cheaper class periodicals would be given away if the law would permit. The practice, it is said, is to maintain the fiction of a subscription price and to give back its equivalent in a premium. The solution of the whole problem, he says, is that a new postage rate be created and applied to all publications now admitted to the second class except daily, triweekly, semiweekly and weekly newspapers in the sense in which the word newspaper is generally understood. Mr. Madden says: "No one will question the public benefit of genuine newspapers, and for these an absolutely free rate might be granted if the privilege could be properly confined, but I am constrained to say that it is unjustifiable to longer tax the people for any part of the cost of distribution in the mails of any other class of periodical publications."

Concerning the public impression that one cent postage is probable in the near future Mr. Madden says it is altogether too soon to consider a reduction of the letter rate of postage.

Edward Has Another Royal Guest.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The king of Portugal has arrived at Windsor from France to pay a visit to the king and queen of England. King Edward, who had come directly from Sandringham, met him at the station. The two monarchs embraced one another most cordially and then drove off to the castle, accompanied by the cheers of the crowds which gathered outside the station and along the route. A great banquet was given at Windsor castle in honor of the royal guest. As the present is the first occasion on which King Edward has visited the town of Windsor since his illness the inhabitants of the royal borough gave him an elaborate reception.

Irish Landlords Favor Conference.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—A poll of the Irish landlords, which was undertaken by a committee composed of the Earl of Mayo, Lord Dunraven, Captain Shawe Taylor and other gentlemen interested in the Irish agrarian question, on the proposal to call a conference of landlords and tenants with a view to the sale of the land to the latter has resulted in a vote of 1,128 to 578 in favor of holding the conference, for which arrangements will be immediately proceeded with. A circular announcing the result of the poll has been sent to 4,000 Irish landowners who possess 500 acres and upward.

Americans Get Russian Contract.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 18.—An American firm has been awarded a $1,000,000 contract to construct a system of telephone conduits in this city. The contract provides for the laying of twenty miles of underground tubes in 1903. The city of St. Petersburg is preparing to install a model telephone system. A Chicago firm has secured the contract for the switchboard.

Mrs. Molineux In South Dakota.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Nov. 18.—Great surprise has been occasioned by the appearance at this place of Mrs. Roland B. Molineux, wife of the man recently acquitted in New York of the charge of murdering Mrs. Katherine J. Adams. Mrs. Molineux absolutely refuses to state why she has come here, but there is a persistent report that it is for the purpose of seeking a divorce.

The Adder's Good Showing.

GREENPORT, N. Y., Nov. 18.—During her submerged run of three hours in Peconic bay the submarine boat Adder struck the bottom while going seven knots an hour. No damage was done, the boat rising to the surface when one ballast tank was blown out. The Adder ran fifteen miles under water without rising. She also fired a torpedo successfully.

New Trial Refused Taylor.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 18.—The court of errors has refused to grant a new trial to George Taylor, who has been convicted in Hudson county of murder in the first degree for the killing of his aunt, Minnie Taylor.

FAREWELL TO CHAMBERLAIN.

The Colonial Secretary Praises His American Wife.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Colonial Secretary Chamberlain received a great ovation last night at Birmingham, where a farewell banquet on the occasion of his departure for South Africa was held in his honor. Members of all parties joined in the demonstration, as the affair was of a nonpolitical character. Mr. Chamberlain was accompanied by his wife and his son, Austen Chamberlain.

Responding to a tremendously enthusiastic welcome, the colonial secretary paid an affectionate tribute to his American wife, who, he declared, had sustained him by her course and cheered him by her sympathy. He had found in her his best and truest counselor. Referring to his approaching trip, he said it was to be a matter of business and not a mere parade. He could not expect that all the bitterness in South Africa would die out, but he could say this for the government—that they would relieve all suffering.

He was bound on a new venture, and there was a possibility of failure. The government's desire was to make South Africa one united nation—united in heart as well as in name. Greater differences, he said, had been healed, and he mentioned Canada as an instance in this connection.

He took a very optimistic view regarding the future of South Africa.

On the conclusion of Mr. Chamberlain's speech a torchlight procession and a fireworks display were held.

PRESIDENT UNLUCKY.

Bears In Mississippi Seem to Avoid the Famous Hunter.

SMEDES, Miss., Nov. 18.—The bears in the swamp country around the president's camp on the Little Sunflower seem to have effected a successful combination to prevent the president from having a single shot at one of them on the [illegible]ition. The only one the dogs start[illegible]sterday fled in a northeasterly direction at the first cry of alarm and did not stop running until he reached the canebrakes about nine miles from camp. There he was overtaken by Mr. McDougal, one of the managers of the Smede plantation, who killed him at seventy paces. The president, who had started in the rain with Holt Collier, did not hear the dogs after they first struck the trail.

The president takes his ill luck good naturedly. He says it is simply the fortune of the chase and that he will have a last try today.

The bear killed yesterday weighed 225 pounds. Judge Dickinson is the only other member of the party except Mr. McDougal who has fired a shot. The judge missed a swamp deer at 100 yards. Mr. McElheney also had a chance at a deer, but his gun refused to go off.

Nationalists Control Cuban House.

HAVANA, Nov. 18.—As a result of a combination with the Radical element the members of the Nationalist party now control the house of representatives and are proceeding to elect new officers. Speaker Pelayo and his associate Republicans on the executive committee having resigned in view of their being now in a minority. The controlling element is not considered antagonistic to President Palma, but there is reason to believe that a strong campaign against the Platt amendment will be begun and that an attempt will also be made to rescind all the military orders.

Stromboli Still Spouting Lava.

ROME, Nov. 18.—A fresh eruption of the volcano Stromboli has occurred, accompanied by a terrific explosion and a great flow of lava. It formed a magnificent spectacle, which was visible from all the northern part of Sicily, the flames rising from the volcano illuminating the surrounding sea. The situation of the few inhabitants of the island of Stromboli is precarious. They are especially frightened by the washing ashore of great quantities of dead fish, which have apparently been killed by a submarine disturbance.

Funds For Bolivia's Defense.

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Nov. 18.—Congress has authorized the banks to issue notes representing 150 per cent of their capital in order to assist the government in the work of national defense. It has now been decided that President Pando and War Minister Montes will accompany the expedition to Acre. Vice President Velasco refuses either to go with the expedition or resign his post. Several members of congress have enrolled themselves in the expeditionary forces.

Earthquake In Salt Lake City.

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 18.—Two distinct shocks of earthquake have been felt in this city. Clocks were stopped in various parts of the city, but no serious damage is reported. The shock was felt at a number of points in southern Utah. Pine Valley, in Washington county, reports five shocks heavy enough to damage chimneys and throw crockery from the shelves. The vibration was from north to south.

Minister Wu Says Farewell.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Minister Wu has said farewell to Secretary Hay and officials of the state department and has left Washington on his return to China. He had previously taken leave of the president.

"A HELPING HAND."

Is Gladly Extended by a Plainfield Citizen.

There are many enthusiastic citizens in Plainfield prepared to tell their experience for the public good. Testimony from such a source is the best of evidence and will prove a "helping hand" to scores of readers. Read the following statement:

Mrs. Valentine Utzinger, of 75 Grandview avenue, says: "I suffered from kidney complaint for six years; I doctored and used various kinds of medicine with little or no result. I had almost a constant sharp, darting pain across my back, and if I ever exerted myself or took cold I suffered severely. I always felt it most when the weather was damp. While in this condition I saw Doan's Kidney Pills recommended and my son bought me a box from L. W. Randolph's drug store. I started to use them at once, following directions closely. They helped the pain in my back, and relieved my other difficulty. I give all the credit for this relief to Doan's Kidney Pills for they are beyond a doubt a grand medicine for kidney trouble."

HORSE SHOW BEGUN.

Society Also on Exhibition at New York's Eighteenth Annual.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—When a dapper little bugler, wearing a frog green coat and tight white breeches with boots that had patent leather tops, stepped to the center of the tan bark ring in Madison Square Garden at 9 o'clock this morning and blew "Boots and Saddles," the eighteenth annual horse show of the National Horse Show association was formally opened. All previous first day attendance records were broken.

The real work of the show, at least so far as the horse is concerned, began an hour later, when the judges got to work picking blue and red rosette winners.

The garden itself presented a most delightful aspect. Festooned from end to end, around boxes and high up among rafters hung the black and gold colors of the Horse Show association, while here and there gayly caparisoned grooms, buglers and pink coated huntsmen added the dashes of color that enlivened the scene, for society in its beautiful gowns and hats and furs that are later to outshine the noble beasts on parade in popularity did not appear during the early hours. The crowd was small, but earnest. In the evening the garden was well attended by social leaders and thousands of persons who paid for the privilege of walking about and gazing at the beautiful women in the arena boxes. The promenade was so jammed it was almost impossible to walk, and it was utterly impossible to get a peep over the rail at the horses.

Those who went early saw a little of what was going on from the seats back of the boxes. The large attendance of the smart set showed plainly that they have not this year paid their huge sums for boxes to be let go to waste.

The ring in which the horses are shown is almost a half city block in length and probably eighty feet in width. With the exception of the promenade space around it it takes up the entire arena space of Madison Square Garden. On Saturday last it was covered with a heavy layer of rich loam, making it at once solid and easy, and on top of the loam were spread a score of wagon loads of tan bark.

The fence around the ring is a few inches more than four feet high and is solid and substantial enough to keep the most balky horse within its confines.

The promenade of white pine boards twenty feet wide and running entirely around the Garden is between this fence and the first tier of boxes. Here society will parade every evening for a week, courting scrutiny from the occupants of the boxes and with the consciousness that it can stand criticism.

Held For Murder.

GREENWICH, Conn., Nov. 18.—John Matthew Boudion of New York has been held without bail for the superior court on the charge of murdering Michael Brennan, a town contractor. Boudion said in the borough court that he had no intention of killing Brennan or of shooting him, as he considered Brennan "one of the best men that ever lived." Brennan and a neighbor, John Ramsey, were conversing in the street near Ramsey's home when Boudion, who had been drinking, it is said, approached and had some words with Ramsey. Boudion drew a revolver, and in attempting to wrest it from him Brennan, who had but one hand, was shot in the temple. Ramsey received a bullet in the arm. Boudion said in court that he pulled the revolver because he saw Ramsey make a movement as though to draw a knife from his pocket.

Counterfeiters Captured.

TAMAQUA, Pa., Nov. 18.—Secret service men have unearthed a gang of counterfeiters here, and part of their outfit was found in a room in a hotel which had been occupied by two men who gave their names as Joseph Parnell of Harrisburg and William Day of Steelton. Day is under arrest, and it is said has made important disclosures. The detectives say the gang is composed of six men and that they have been operating in the eastern part of the state for the past six months, during which time they placed a great deal of the bad coin in circulation. It is expected that others of the gang will be captured within a few days.

Ashes of Columbus Moved.

SEVILLE, Spain, Nov. 18.—The ceremony of depositing the ashes of Christopher Columbus in a special mausoleum was carried out in the cathedral here yesterday with befitting solemnity. The coffin containing the ashes of the illustrious navigator was borne on the shoulders of a party of naval seamen, and behind it walked in procession the archbishop of Seville, the cathedral chapter, the minister of marine and a number of other dignitaries. After mass had been performed the captain general of Cadiz and the archbishop took the coffin into their charge, and it was deposited in the mausoleum, where it will remain permanently.

Better Pay For Trolley Men.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 18.—The Philadelphia Rapid Transit company has announced that, beginning Dec. 1, the wages of the conductors and motormen in their employ will be increased from 19 to 20 cents an hour. The company controls all the street railway lines of this city, and nearly 7,000 men are affected by the increase.

Wesleyan Divine Dead.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, the celebrated Wesleyan preacher, has just died suddenly in this city. Mr. Hughes was one of the leading spirits of the social purity movement and Antigambling league in England. He was president of the Wesleyan conference from 1888 to 1890.

THE FIGHT RENEWED

Trouble With Shaffer and Gompers Will Not Down.

A COMMITTEE IS TO INVESTIGATE.

Convention at New Orleans Stirred by a Resolution Bringing Up the Old Feud Between the Labor Leaders.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 18.—Either Theodore Shaffer, president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, or Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, is destined to pass under a cloud. The eclipse may be temporary and the man who goes under may emerge at some other time, but an eclipse there will be for one or the other. It is a fight to the finish, and present conditions favor Gompers. The trouble which so suddenly came to a point in the convention of the American Federation of Labor is an echo of the great strike against the United States Steel company which was fought and lost last year by the Amalgamated association under the leadership of Shaffer. After his association had been defeated President Shaffer did not hesitate to utter charges of a serious nature against President Gompers as well as against John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers, and Frank Sargent of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. He asserted that the organizations over which these men presided had, while listening to the advice of their leaders, refused to lend a helping hand to the Amalgamated association and had even fought against it in the dark.

The convention was dragging along slowly, there being but few committees prepared to report, and an adjournment was imminent, when Delegate Sheridan of the Amalgamated association, a colleague of President Shaffer in the convention, threw a bomb by asking unanimous consent to introduce a resolution calling for an investigation of the charges. Both parties announced that they courted the investigation, and it will be referred to a special committee of five, two to be selected by President Gompers, two by President Shaffer, and the court to choose the fifth.

May Rescind Boycott Order.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 18.—Latest developments indicate that tonight the trades assembly will probably rescind the order boycotting the Schenectady Railway company. Forty-two out of 305 members of the trades assembly have signed a petition for a meeting, the call expressly stating that the purpose is to reconsider the action taken last Wednesday night when the boycott was declared. The request of only five members is needed to have a meeting called. At first President Jackson stated emphatically that the meeting would declare the boycott off. Later, after an exciting meeting of the boycott committee, he was not so emphatic, saying that it was probable that such action would be taken. The sentiment of the members of many of the unions is so strongly against the boycott and its failure was so marked that there is great probability that a resolution to rescind will be carried.

Destruction In Guatemala Confirmed.

PANAMA, Colombia, Nov. 18.—Passengers from Central America who have arrived here report the complete destruction of the territory surrounding the volcano of Santa Maria, province of Quezaltenango, Guatemala, in consequence of the recent eruption. The adjacent villages, the rich coffee plantations, with over $300,000 worth of coffee stored in bags, and hundreds of lives were lost. Refugees are arriving at the port of Champerico. Over 200 fugitives sailed for San Jose de Guatemala on the Pacific Mail steamer. The exchange is rising by leaps and now stands at 1,200 per cent, without buyers. The very strict censorship which has been established in Guatemala makes it impossible to get the exact news regarding the situation there.

Bad Railway Wreck.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Nov. 18.—A disastrous accident occurred here at the crossing a half mile west of the Seaboard Air line depot. The Carrabelle passenger train came in. Its engine was detached and sent back for a transfer case, and just on the crossing the eastbound Seaboard freight ran into the Carrabelle-Tallahassee engine, which later exploded. Flagman Gwaltney of the Carrabelle, Tallahassee and Gulf was killed, and Engineer F. W. Hutchinson and Fireman Jack Horn were severely scalded and bruised. Conductor Rogers of the Seaboard was quite seriously hurt and Leo Costa, a young man of Tallahassee, had a leg broken.

Boys Wreck a Train.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Nov. 18.—Three boys, the eldest ten years of age, caused a freight wreck on the New York Central railroad at this city by placing a stone on the track, and two passenger trains, including the southbound Twentieth Century limited, had a very narrow escape. The boys, on their way to school, wanted to see the stone break when the cars ran over it. They were arrested and locked up.

Earthquake In Algeria.

ORAN, Algeria, Nov. 18.—A shock of earthquake occurred here at 9:30 o'clock last evening. The disturbance, which lasted six seconds and was accompanied by loud rumblings, caused the commencement of a panic among the inhabitants.

GETTING READY.

There is pretty good indication that Senator Joseph Cross, of Union county, will not be the presiding officer of the upper house of the State Legislature this winter. Senator Hutchinson, of Mercer, was the early bird in this case and secured the pledges of sufficient senators, it is claimed, to land him in the coveted place. While United States Senator Kean would undoubtedly like to see Mr. Cross as president of the Senate this year, Mr. Cross would undoubtedly be of more value to the United States Senator in the chair when Mr. Kean comes up for re-election. The general opinion seems to be that Mr. Kean will not put forth any strenuous efforts this year but will prefer to see Mr. Cross get the place in time for the election of a United States Senator in 1905.

As Senator Cross is undoubtedly the most powerful opponent of Senator Hutchinson for the presidential chair, the fact that his candidacy is not being urged as strongly as it might be can be taken for a sure sign that to Mercer will go the honor of having the presiding officer. Senator Edmund W. Wakeley, of Bergen, will probably be the majority leader in the Senate.

Union county is not likely to figure at all in the race for the speakership of the Assembly. From the present look of things, Assemblyman Robert M. Boyd, Jr., of Essex, is likely to win for that place with John G. Horner, of Burlington, as majority leader. Of the Union county Assemblymen, William Newcorn, of this city, will undoubtedly play the most important part. He showed himself a hardworking member last year and it seems likely that he will be appointed to some important committees this winter. Edward S. Coyne, of Elizabeth, is likely to be well-liked by his associates and may get some important berths. Assemblyman William F. Hall, of Cranford, is not likely to be prominently heard from in the legislative halls.

The postponement of the opening of the Plainfield Amateur Basket Ball League for a week was regrettable but could hardly be otherwise when the present disorganized condition of the Hope Y. M. A. team is taken into consideration. That organization has never had a regular team before and there was great trouble in regularly organizing it for play. Another week it is expected will put it into shape for effective play. While the Y. M. C. A. team will undoubtedly defeat it, the Hope boys will try hard to make a good showing. According to present plans, the local basket ball season will open next Monday evening.

The citizens of Asbury Park are trying to compel Mayor Bradley to disgorge. The city wants to secure control of the beach front and it's planning all sorts of up-to-date things to be done when it gets into power. But the Mayor says it will take a long and tiresome legal suit to do it.

At hunting at least, old Hunterdon has become remarkably progressive. Two of its young men have been out after the cotton tail and quail in a fast gasolene automobile belonging to one of them.

The famous Linden racetrack, near Elizabeth, is to be disposed of at auction. Horse racing has not thrived in New Jersey of late years.

SOME OF ATTRACTIONS TO BE FOUND AT LOCAL STORES.

A Few Interesting Items Concerning Greater Plainfield's Merchants

For this week the Rogers' Seafood Company is quoting extra low rates on fish, oysters and clams. All are guaranteed to be strictly fresh. Breakfast orders will be delivered early.

There is a sweetness about the tone of the pianos sold by G. H. Kenyon, of West Front street, that is hard to find in most instruments. They are also noted for their strength and durability of finish and workmanship.

The best place to get watch repairing done is at a first class repairers. L. Moraller & Sons on Park avenue make a specialty of this kind of work. They also carry a full line of silverware suitable for wedding presents.

Good dressers always like to have their linen ironed with the domestic finish. The best place to get that finish is at a hand laundry. G. Meissner's laundry on Watchung avenue makes a specialty of this finish on all their work.

Pretty shrubbery and neatly trimmed hedges add greatly to the attractiveness of residential grounds. Let the Belleview Avenue Nursery furnish you what you want in this line. The firm will gladly quote rates on all kinds of shrubbery.

A more complete stock of fresh fruit and vegetables is not to be found in the city than that at T. L. Walsh's market on North avenue. Proprietor Walsh is a careful buyer and his patrons always reap the benefit. He delivers orders free of charge.

Of all the goods shown in Plainfield none are more attractive than those at Peck's store. Your money can be turned into the best values at this store and the goods will give the best possible wear. A dainty assortment of laces, embroideries and handkerchiefs are among the few specials.

The oil prints, 16x20, which E. S. F. Randolph, of the Watchung Pharmacy at the corner of Watchung and North avenues, is presenting to each purchaser of his Honey, Horehound and White Pine Syrup are a very attractive vinair; and the cough syrup has proven very satisfactory in the last four years while it has been on the market.

It is hard to understand why so many people are satisfied to drink inferior coffee when for the same price they can secure they very best. F. H. Firstbrook has just received a new shipment of coffee which is the best procurable. He also has some Imperial flour which makes baking a pleasure. Watch for his ad in The Daily Press next Saturday.

Woodhull & Martin, notwithstanding their cramped condition of affairs at their store, are doing a good business in fall and winter goods. The stock is complete and a very attractive line of goods is being shown in all departments. There are many specials offered which it will be worth your time to inspect. Mr. Johnston, of the carpet department, reports a rush of business. Last week a large and handsome carpet was furnished for the Friends' meeting-house on Watchung avenue.

over with a concrete covering.

Into the roughing beds the sewage rises by gravitation after passing through the septic tanks. This is formed of beds of gravel which are arranged under a large ventilating chimney and from there the sewage flows through the gravel and the gases there contained are liberated and are carried off up the chimney where they may be burned. From these roughing beds the sewage falls through a thin film over a dam where the consequent aeration prepares it for the next stage of purification.

From the roughing beds the effluent flows to beds of gravel and coarse sand where purification, a natural process, takes place. These beds, four in number, are designed to cover half an acre each and are 4 feet deep.

The surfaces of the beds are to be covered with loam and seeded to grass, this treatment being rendered possible by means of subsoil aeration provided.

The beds are so arranged that two may be used for a first contact, the effluent flowing thence to the otber two by gravity, for the second or final contact. The effluent from the system will be acceptable to the State Sewage Commission of New Jersey for discharge into Green brook.

After the sewerage reports had been read and acted upon at the adjourned meeting of the Borough Council last night the matter of the new fire engine house was brought up for discussion when, after taking a recess during which the question of reducing the cost of constructing the building was discussed, it was decided to reject all bids received before and to have the architect modify his plans by cutting off the addition in the rear as proposed and to again advertise for bids on the proposed new building in order to make the cost of the building come within the appropriation of $10,000.

When the clerk, Frank Rowley, read over the bids as published in The Daily Press last week it was found that the sum total of the lowest bidders amounted to $4,500, over the appropriation. It was suggested by some of the members of the Council whether it would be more advisable to have the people vote on an appropriation for more money or whether it would be best to exclude the addition at the rear and have the bidders figure on the main building alone, retaining the outline and finishings of the building at the front which will be of yellow brick and dressed stone.

A petition was presented asking for an electric light at Grant avenue near Green brook which was referred to the committee on fire, water and lamps, which committee granted the petition, and also ordered that a hydrant be placed at or near the corner of Rockview and Rock avenues.

The meeting then adjourned until Friday night, December 5.

Given Up Package Sale.

In view of the fact that the Corporation Counsel has informed Charles E. Vail, the Park avenue jeweler, that the package sale planned by him for Thursday might be termed a lottery, Mr. Vail has decided to declare the sale off. BOY SWINDLER GETS TEN YEARS

Borrowed Money on Real Estate He Did Not Own.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Ronald F. Brennan, the "boy real estate swindler," has been sentenced by Judge Crane in Brooklyn to ten years, the limit in the penitentiary on charges of grand larceny and forgery.

Brennan's operations were about as daring as any with which the banks and title companies have been made acquainted. From an office boy at $7 a week in two years he became the president of a busy trust company of his own, having extensive offices in Brooklyn and Manhattan and doing a large business.

Brennan's plan was to search the records of the register's office and find a valuable piece of property on which a mortgage had been filed. He would then file a "satisfaction piece" with the register, purporting to show that the mortgage had been paid and that the title to the property was clear. To do this it was necessary for him to forge the signature of the person who had loaned the money on the property.

Then, representing himself as the agent of the man in whose name the title stood, he would borrow as much as possible on the property. In one instance he secured $35,000 from a Brooklyn bank on a piece of property worth $100,000 and to which he had no title and did not even know the real owner.

Sherman Not Candidate For Speaker.

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 18.—Congressman James S. Sherman has sent a letter to all of the Republican members of congress from New York state saying that he is not a candidate for speaker. The letter reads as follows: "The newspapers have during the past few days stated without authority from me that I am a candidate for speaker of the Fifty-eighth congress. I am in receipt of a letter from Mr. Payne stating that he is a candidate. Past experience has demonstrated that with two candidates from New York state for that office neither could be successful. I should very much like to see this important position again occupied by a New Yorker after a lapse of seventy-five years. I am not willing that New York's opportunity should by any possibility be jeopardized by my candidacy, and I write this letter to inform you that I am not a candidate for speaker. I am mailing a duplicate of this letter to each Republican member elect from New York state."

Seaport Town Taken From Rebels.

CARACAS, Venezuela, Nov. 18.—A tugboat has arrived at La Guayra from Carupano, bringing the news that Saturday the government troops under the command of General Velutini attacked and reoccupied almost without fighting the seaport of Cumana, which has been in the hands of the insurgents. The Dutch governor of Curacao has notified General Matos, who reached that island Nov. 13, that he must observe a strictly neutral attitude and conduct, otherwise he will be asked to leave Curacao. General Matos has shut himself up in his private house at Willemstad with his family, not wishing to be seen.

Engineer and Fireman Hurt.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 18.—A safety plug on the engine of a northbound passenger train on the West Shore railroad blew out just after leaving here, horribly scalding Andrew Geigelman, the engineer, and Joseph Heitzman, the fireman, and wrecking the engine. Engineer Geigelman was blown out of the cab window, falling twenty feet away. Five of his ribs were broken, and his head was crushed. Both men will probably die.

CROWN PRINCESS MARIE.

Young Matron Who May One Day Be the Queen of Roumania Is Popular in London.

It isn't every European country with a queen so genuinely popular as "Carmen Sylva" which is lucky enough to possess as promising a successor to her as Roumania does in its crown princess.

Prince Ferdinand's handsome wife, who was Princess Marie of Edinburgh, came to London with her husband to represent Roumania at the coronation, and her beauty, cleverness and general "style" have confirmed the belief of those who prophesied when the princess was a young girl in England that she would one day be a prominent figure among European royal women. She has reigned as one of the belles of the season.

CROWN PRINCESS OF ROUMANIA. (She May One Day Succeed the Famous "Carmen Sylva.")

When the princess and her husband arrived famous old Chesterfield house, which Lord Burton loaned to the king for the coronation season, was placed by his majesty at their disposal.

The crown princess and her greatest rival have been in London at the same time and they must have met often, for both of late have frequently been the guests of Queen Alexandra. The other lady in this case is the beautiful Helene Vacaresco, the queen of Roumania's lady in waiting, whose enslavement of Crown Prince Ferdinand made such a to-do in King Charles' domain several years ago.

Dress is a great weakness with the crown princess of Roumania. At the reception recently given by the marchioness of Lansdowne to the Indian princes Princess Marie was the most noticed of the women. When she was married the crown princess trousseau was the most sumptuous ever provided for an English princess.

Besides being the niece of King Edward, Princess Marie of Roumania bears the same relationship to the czar of Russia, her mother, the duchess of Edinburgh, having been one of the Russian royal princesses.

The crown prince and princess have an annual income of $150,000.

This is by no means a regal sum, but it is spent lavishly.

ALTON BROOKS PARKER.

Distinguished New York Jurist Who Is Coming to the Front as Presidential Candidate.

Judge Alton Brooks Parker, whom some of the leading democrats of New York are quietly pushing to the front as a candidate for the presidential nomination in 1904, is the chief judge of the New York court of appeals and one of the most eminent and influential jurists in the entire east. Judge Parker is in the very fullness of his mature manhood. He has just passed the age of 50, has served in the supreme court of the state and has taken just sufficient interest in practical politics to put him into touch with the various strata of his party. A native of Cortland, Judge Parker has lived altogether in the state, although he is well known in the city. He has been chief judge of the court of appeals since 1898.

The Czar's Elaborate Kitchen.

The czar's kitchen in St. Petersburg is the finest in the world. Its walls are of black marble, and are lavishly ornamented. Some of the kitchen pots and pans are of solid gold, and originally belonged to the Empress Catharine.

Pillar of Cloud and Fire.

The "burning mountain" of Montet, in Aveyron, France, which is often mistaken for an active volcano because a pillar of cloud arises from it by day and a pillar of fire by night, is in reality a coal mine which has been burning for several years.

DRESS FOR SERVANTS.

What Maids Should Wear In a Well Conducted House.

The appearance of the servants shows the social standard of the household. If the maids are untidy and slipshod, it is usually the fault of the mistress. During the morning, when the hard work is being done, all the maids should wear wash dresses, preferably dark blue and white. These dresses should be plainly made and on no account should the skirts touch the ground. A white turndown linen collar and linen cuffs, together with a triangular cap, complete the morning costume. In the afternoon a plain black alpaca or wool gown is the correct thing. With this should be worn an apron of fine lawn, prettily trimmed, and a fluffy cap. Starched linen collars and cuffs are also necessary.

AFTERNOON COSTUME.

The children's nurse may wear the same style of cotton gown as the other maids, with the addition of a long plain white apron made with a high bib. Her cap is larger than that of a waitress, and for street wear she pins to it a large Alsatian bow, with streamers reaching far down in the back. Her street gown in winter is black and in summer may be of white duck or any other white material.

The cook's cap is sufficiently large to completely cover her hair. She has also a white apron of butchers' linen the length of her skirt and reaching completely around her.

The lady's maid should wear a soft dress of black material. Her apron is a dainty French affair, with a large pocket. Around her neck a soft lawn silk or lace neckband is allowable. When the maid accompanies her mistress shopping, she wears a plain tailor made dress, with nothing to indicate her position.

The mistress should always insist on neatness of appearance, on the maid's hair being properly brushed and the caps and aprons being scrupulously clean. BEATRICE MILLER.

A PEACOCK ROOM.

A Quaint and Up to Date Blue and Green Scheme of Decoration.

"The originality of treatment in this guest chamber will doubtless appeal to many who delight in quaint and pretty things. The furniture is of mahogany, inlaid with holly wood stained blue, and pewter, the latter being used for appropriate mottoes such as "Fine Feathers Make Fine Birds" on the wardrobe and "If This Is Vanity, Who'd Be Wise?" over the mirror of the dressing table. The idea of vanity is ingeniously illustrated throughout by means of peacocks inlaid in pewter on the various pieces of furniture, appliqued on the blue linen bedspread and prominent on the well executed frieze in the design of a garden with hedge and clipped yew trees. The plain, dull blue paper shows up to good advantage, and the coloring of the carpet, the settle, the short window curtains and the hearth tiles contribute to the harmonious scheme.

The fireplace is especially quaint and worthy of notice. R. DE LA BAUME.

Furs For Winter.

Mink is a handsome, refined and always fashionable fur, and many beautiful garments and pretty neck pieces, including stoles, are made of it. Mink, sable and skunk are all of the same family, the furriers tell us, but they are too thick for anything in the way of a tight garment, and so are mostly for capes, mantles, trimmings and fancy neck pieces. Nearly all the stoles are made quite flat around the neck and without any kind of attempt at a collar, storm or otherwise. Collars for children are made in the same way. Tails are put upon the neck pieces with a reckless disregard of natural history. Muffs are quite large, mostly plain, but there are some enormous ones to match long coats and also others with all sorts of fancy ruffles made of the fur.

A Woman of Enterprise.

Here is a little story. Read it: Some years ago a Miss Fanny Seabride went from Chicago to Texas as a governess. Four years ago she got the post of fence rider and cattle guard for Horseshoe ranch. She attended to her duties and likewise killed wild animals for whose scalps the state offered a bounty. She obtained $1,251 in this way and invested it in cattle. Now she owns over a thousand head.

Then Gielow thought of something else. He took off one of his white linen cuffs. He coiled it tightly, and tied it with a thread from the lining of his cravat. He believed he would be able to push it through the crack by a certain contrivance he had in mind. Then he paused to reflect, and finally decided that he would write some message on the cuff, some appeal to the world at large for help. But how to write it was the first thing to be decided, for, on going through his pockets, he could find nothing but his penknife. He believed he could, if his hand were strong enough, cut the letters into the linen, but would they be noticed by a casual observer? Then a thought came to him, which may have been suggested by an incident in some romantic novel he had read in his youth. He would write it in his own blood.

Gielow did not flinch as he thrust the knife blade into his wrist. Compared to the agony of his whole being, the slight pricking sensation was nothing. Then, when the blood had flowed out and stood in a big drop on his left wrist, he began to write his message with the knife blade. It was difficult work even for a skillful artist, for his hand shook as if with ague, and his strength was almost gone. Here is what he wrote, economizing in words, for his space was limited:

"Innocent. Confined by C. Bantinni I know not where. Send help. Starving. Take to police. ARTHUR GIELOW."

Then, rolling the cuff tightly and tying it with the thread, he hurriedly pushed it into the crack. He was afraid the couple would rise and walk on. According to his calculations the roll lodged just beyond the reach of his fingers and then he set about to complete his operation.

He tore his handkerchief into shreds and tying the ends together he made a long string. Then holding pieces of straw to his hand he tightly wrapped them with the strings till he had constructed a rod of straw about four feet in length. With this, after many failures, he finally pushed the cuff through the crevice. He saw it fall from the rock, strike something and leap into the sunlit space. For an instant it was lost to sight, and then he saw it roll into the roadway about 20 feet from the pair on the bench. They happened to be gazing into each other's eyes and did not see it. Then a carriage, the driver of which wore a high hat and a blue coat with brass buttons, whirled past. The hoofs of the horses knocked the blood-stained messenger out of Gielow's sight.

His heart sank within him. Trembligly he took off his remaining cuff, but the blood drop had become smeared and dry on his wrist, and his right hand shook pitifully.

"It's no use," he said, with a groan. Again he peered through the crevice. The sun seemed to be going down. The lovers had risen, and, arm in arm, were strolling away. For a few moments Gielow lay motionless on the straw, then he tried to replace the wedge of stone to hide the opening from Bantinni, but he was so weak that it fell from his nerveless fingers.

All at once it grew dark about him. He felt as if he were being tossed on the bosom of an angry sea.

Twenty-four hours later there was a hurried step outside. The door opened and Count Bantinni came in, holding a lantern over his head. He brought pen, ink, a pad of paper and an envelope. The darkness outside and the shine of his lantern prevented his seeing the crack in the rock.

Putting the lantern down by the artist, he shook him violently.

"Wake up," he said, gruffly. "I want you to write. Write! Write, I say!"

But Gielow did not stir.

The count swore sullenly and lifted the lantern so that its rays fell across the prisoner's face. He thrust his fingers into the bosom of Gielow's shirt.

"Breathing, but that is all!" he muttered. "Ah!" as his eyes noted the penknife and the bloody wrist, "he wanted to puncture a vein and get it over, but was too cowardly. Well, you are going fast enough, my boy. I can do without your penmanship."

He unlocked the manacles from the prisoner's wrists and ankles, kicked them aside and left the cell.

CHAPTER XIX.

The next morning after the visit to Kola Hendricks reached his office before his office boy. The first thing he did was to look through the Herald for his advertisement.

It was there, word for word as he had written it. Now he told himself that there was nothing to do but to hope for a reply to it. He busied himself writing letters until nine o'clock, and then Dr. Lampkin hurried in.

"Good morning," he said. "I couldn't go to work to-day with all this uncertainty on my mind, so I came right here to await developments."

"Glad you came," said Hendricks, cordially, as he bent again over his desk. When he had laid his pen aside Lampkin said:

"I hardly slept a wink last night. I couldn't get that wonderful performance of Kola's out of my head. It is in advance of anything I ever heard of.

Hendricks laughed and recounted what had occurred between him and his mother on his arrival at home.

"An, a trick, after all," cried the doctor, and then his face hardened under an afterthought, "but you certainly mentioned the Bible of your own accord."

"That's the point that kept me awake last night," confessed Hendricks, dryly.

For a moment both men were silent, then Lampkin said:

"There is only one way in which he could have done it."

"How is that?" asked Hendricks, deeply interested.

"Kola had the Bible ready, and when he told you to select some article at home I noticed that he gazed steadily into your eyes. Through telepathy and hypnotism combined he must have impressed the idea of the book on your mind."

"But he opposed me in that, he—"

"That was only for effect. The whole thing was most skillfully done. He suggested the Bible to you hypnotically, and forced you to demand that and nothing else."

"Can that sort of thing be done?"

"In the east it is considered mere child's play."

Hendricks stared at his friend for a moment, then he brought his hand down on his desk with a resounding blow.

"By Jove! that makes three!" he ejaculated.

"Three what?" asked the doctor.

"Three similarities between Kola and Count Bantinni."

"I don't follow you," said Lampkin, leaning forward eagerly.

"By Jove! it makes four," cried Hendricks, his eyes sparkling. "Listen. As he lay there last night and grew whiter and whiter, I remarked a little indentation on each side of his nose, which must have been made by a pair of pinch-nose glasses. Now, as Kola never, to my knowledge, wore glasses, and as Bantinni was never seen without them, that similarity occurred to me. Next my glance wandered to his long finger nails, and their grewsome points, and Bantinni popped into my head again. Then what should enter my mind but that it was Kola himself who had often used that foreign idiom, contained in the letter to Miss Huntington. And now we know that Kola is a hypnotist of rare ability, and so is Bantinni."

An exclamation of wonder escaped the doctor's lips.

"Do you really think Kola and Bantinni are identical?"

"Oh, no," laughed the detective. "If I did I should act at once. The similarities are there, but they may mean nothing at all."

At this juncture the door opened, and Sergt. Denham entered. His whole manner was that of a man who had suddenly met with great disappointment.

"Good morning, Capt. Hendricks," said he, respectfully, and he made a careless sign of greeting to Dr. Lampkin.

"Oh, it's Capt. Hendricks, eh?" said the detective, lightly. "What has come over the spirit of your dream, my boy?"

The sergeant sat down awkwardly. A flush was rising in his cheeks.

"I have come to beg for advice," he said. "As you are not concerned in the Caruthers affair, I thought you might be willing to give me a pointer. You see, the chief trusted the whole business to me, and I was so confident of the reliability of certain information I had—"

"In the shape of a letter from Gielow?" broke in Hendricks, smiling broadly.

"Yes," admitted the sergeant, in astonishment. "How did you know?"

"A letter that every known expert declared was no forgery?"

"Yes."

"Well, go on. I'm listening."

For a moment the young officer hung his head in embarrassment, then he pulled himself together and concluded:

"But in following the letter up we met with nothing but failure. Mr. Hendricks, I am at the end of my rope, and it really looks as if I am going to be set back. Capt. McRae is furious at me."

"Ah, that would be too bad!" said Hendricks, with a touch of genuine sympathy in his voice. "You have the ingredients of success in your make-up, and, above all, you have enthusiasm, which, when it is well curbed, is the main thing. Your egotism will rub off. I see exactly how the land lies, and I want to help you. In fact, I will, if you will join me."

"I'll do anything in God's world you suggest, Mr. Hendricks," said the sergeant, warmly, a hopeful note coming into his voice.

"Well, just let it be known at headquarters that you have become associated with me in the case, and together we will get what we can out of it. I am no fool, and I know that for a young detective to join me will be no discredit to him, especially if we win."

"It will be the making of me," said Denham, beaming all over. "But I can't see what can be done."

"I can," answered Hendricks, with a glance askance at Lampkin. "Sergeant, I have been hard at work on this case since the night the affair was discovered."

"You have!"

"Yes, and never got any substantial clew till you gave it to me. That's why I am willing to help you now."

In Other Countries Than Our Own

THE DOINGS OF THE PEOPLE OF MANY LANDS CHRONICLED IN SHORT CORRESPONDENCE.

The Ivory Coast of Africa is a French colony lying on the west of the Gold coast. The boundaries between the two colonies were defined in 1898, as the result of a convention which was drawn by an Anglo-French commission. Since then both colonies have shown the usual tendency to push into the hinterland, with the inevitable result that more delimitation has had to be done. An Anglo-French commission accordingly landed at Axim, in the Gold Coast colony, last autumn, and is proceeding inland as far as the ninth parallel—that is to say, about 300 miles inland. The Ivory Coast became a separate French colony in 1893, it having previously been under the jurisdiction of the governor of Senegal. Towards the interior it included, as a protectorate, the Kong territory, and thus, like all other French colonies in this region, joins with the French Soudan, and now includes the districts of Odjenneh, Kong and Bonna, which formed part of that territory. The two principal French towns are Assinie and Grand Bassam. The latter town is on the coast, and was, until lately, the seat of government. Owing to the unhealthiness of Grand Bassam, the governor now resides at Bingerville, in the Bay of Abidjeau, an inlet on a lagoon communicating with the Comoe river. As there is no direct communication with the sea from here except through the lagoon to Grand Bassam, a short canal to be cut through the strip of land immediately opposite which shuts out the waters of the lagoon from the ocean—that is to say, at Little Bassam. This will enable seagoing steamers to come straight into the lagoon from Bingerville. There is also a scheme afoot to run a light railway from Bingerville northward into the Kong district. Roads are being rapidly constructed in the colony. The one leading to Bonduku, it is said, taps the Gold Coast Hinterland, and there is the beginning of the matter to be settled. Bonduku is fast becoming the center of trade between the French Soudan and the coast.

THE CHIEF OF BONDUKU ON HIS WAY TO VISIT THE FRENCH COMMANDANT.

The last British consular report draws attention to the trade of Bonduku, and goes on to say that French firms appear to be taking the place of those of other nationalities on the Ivory coast. Recent visitors to the Ivory coast describe the colony as one huge gold mine. The Ivory Coast colony possesses the peculiarity of being one of the few French colonies which receive no assistance from the home government, but, on the other hand, pays a small contribution to the mother country.

Foreign Commerce of German Southwest Africa.

The foreign commerce of German Southwest Africa made favorable progress in 1901. The exports increased from $214,200 in 1900 to $297,500. This increase consisted chiefly of guano, which is almost exclusively in the hands of a large English establishment in Cape Town. Ostrich feathers are rapidly becoming an article of export. In former years the natives were in the unrestricted possession of firearms, and it was their chief delight to shoot these profitable birds. To-day, the natives are permitted to have arms only in limited quantities, therefore the ostrich culture is beginning to revive. The imports into German Southwest Africa increased from $1,666,000 in 1900 to $2,380,000. The chief articles imported are railway materials, bridges, cement, lumber, beer and coal.

JOHN F. WENTER.

Government Control of Railways in Mexico.

The Mexican government has purchased the major part of the recent issue of the Interoceanic Railroad company's bonds, thus obtaining the controlling interest in the road.

The bonds were bought at 98⅛ per cent. of their nominal value, and bear interest at the rate of 4½ per cent. annually. Payment was made from the reserve fund of the national treasury.

In commenting on the transaction, the public press says that the president and secretary of the treasury have been actuated by motives of the greatest importance to the welfare of the industries of the country, not in seeking a profitable investment for the reserve funds in the treasury, but in trying to prevent the formation of "pools" and "trusts," with a view of controlling the import and export traffic of the republic. The Mexican government being in control of a railroad of the first importance, like the Interoceanic railroad, all freight discriminations to the injury of native manufacturing and commercial interests will be prevented.

The railroads of the peninsula of Yucatan, Mexico, with the exception of the Southern railroad, have recently effected a combination, to be operated under one general management, and this has now been joined by the company owning the general or "fiscal" wharf in the harbor of Progreso, there being left but one wharf, owned by the "Canton Wharf company," outside of the above combine.

At Merida, the capital of the state of Yucatan, there is an active movement on foot to organize a company for the purpose of establishing an electric power plant to furnish motive power for the street railway service in the city and suburbs.

J. GONZALES PAGES.

Industrial Conditions in Liege, Belgium.

The industrial outlook here has greatly improved in the past few months, and the backbone of the hard times for this part of Europe seems to be broken. The United States has done much to stimulate industries. Three steel plants here are working on a 50,000-ton order of steel rails for Mexico, and a contract has just been closed for 27,000 tons for a road in Maryland; many smaller orders for structural steel and rails have also been received.

During the past quarter, there was shipped through Liege $22,874.56 worth of structural steel and $77,367.56 worth of steel rails and accessories. There was also a decided increase in the value of glassware shipped, amounting to $57,171.74 for the quarter. A party from the United States is in the market for 50,000 tons of steel rails, and I am informed it is practically settled that the mills here will get it. Liege is coming to be known as one of the principal steel manufacturing centers of Europe.

The large increase of business between this district and the United States is not all on one side. There is more inquiry for American goods than ever before, and the people seem to be in earnest. The greatest demand is for farm and industrial machinery, electrical supplies, and canned and dried fruits. The openings for these lines are good, but the merchants here want to open direct connections with the manufacturer and producer.

ALFRED A. WINSLOW.

Lapse of Concession to Honduras Syndicate.

On account of the failure of the company styled the "Honduras Syndicate" to carry out the terms of its contract, the concession granted it by the government (to contract an interoceanic railway, settle the foreign debt, and establish a bank) has lapsed. The syndicate was composed of Americans, and the contract was entered into in 1897. The syndicate was bound by the contract to construct a bridge over the Ulua river within four years, and having failed to do so, it was expected that the government would, in May, 1902, take possession of the road. The syndicate has, however, asked for a prorogue; the request was presented to congress, which adjourned without taking action. It is expected that the matter will be settled at the next session, which will be held this winter.

German Capital in Foreign Countries

Until 30 years ago, the German empire was one of the weakest natibns financially; but now, instead of being in need of foreign capital, Germany is following the example of England and France, and is loaning and investing money in foreign countries. According to a recent semi-official statement, there are about $2,000,000,000 of German capital invested in the United States and Mexico. It is estimated that another $2,000,000,000 are invested in Central and South America, some $250,000,000 in Turkey, and about $1,000,000,000 in Africa, Australia and the far east. In addtion to this, it is claimed that $3,000,000,000 are invested in stocks and bonds in different countries.

Fish Not a Brain Food.

Some people think that to eat an enormous quantity of fish will give them an enormous quantity of brains, but, according to a medical paper, this is a great mistake. The dwellers by the sea—the Eskimo and the fishermen of Labrador—have not shown any preponderance of brains. And because stale fish shine with phosphorescent light in the dark we must not think it particularly rich in phosphorus. As a matter of fact there is more water than phosphorus in fish.

Maillard's Candies—Fresh!

ERECTED TWO STACKS AT ELECTRIC PLANT

Steel Chimneys Placed in Position Yesterday Afternoon and This Morning.

WAS A DIFFICULT TASK

CHIMNEYS WERE FIRST PUT TOGETHER IN THE STREET.

Then Hoisted Into Place by Means of Tackle and Windlass—A Large Crowd Watched the Chimneys Go to Their Places.

A large number of people stood at the corner of Madison avenue and West Second street, yesterday morning, and courted stiff necks and severe colds in the cool November air while watching some men erecting a tall chimney on the roof of the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company's power station.

A large metal chimney, weighing about seven tons and seventy five feet long, was picked up from the center of the street and in the short space of three hours was placed in position on the roof of the building and was ready for the boiler to be attached. The work is being done by Harden Brothers, of Williamsburg, Brooklyn, and is being supervised here by Harry Olssen who has been in the business fifteen years.

The chimney was brought to the spot on heavy trucks in sections ten feet long which were then riveted together on the street. When the entire number of pieces were joined so as to make one great tube, a lash was placed about the center of the chimney and a heavy rope was let down from the large crane on the roof and then, by means of a windlass and horse, the great piece of iron was slowly hoisted to a dizzy height above the sidewalk.

A block and tackle was rigged to the top of the chimney and, when the chimney was almost in position, a man tied a rope about his waist and then slowly hoisted himself to the top so that from the street the fellow looked like a spider dangling from the side of the huge pipe.

When the fellow had reached the top of the chimney he fastened a guy to the topmost rim of the chimney and then the huge tube was slowly lowered into position on the collar of the boiler. It was only the work of a few minutes to fasten the permanent guy ropes in position and the task was complete.

It required in all just one hour and fifty minutes to place the chimney in position after it was lifted from the sidewalk on Madison avenue. Another pipe, the same size as the one set up yesterday, was placed in position this morning and even better time was made, as the last one was put up in ane hour and forty minutes.

Although the twin chimneys appear io be about a foot or a foot and a half in diameter from the sidewalk, they are considerably larger as they measure four and a half feet.

These two new chimneys are being put in to secure enough draft for the new furnaces which are being put in the plant to supply power for the new compound engine and dynamo which is now rapidly nearing completion.

Honeyman's Gettysburg Tour.

This is a great trip for teachers and others, who have never seen a real battlefield, nor heard a lecture upon the battle on the spot by some one who was present. The monuments, nearly four hundred in number, are the finest in the world. Whoever goes to Gettysburg once always desires to go a second time.

Remarkable Work in Reorganization of Railroads—Made Rapid Advance in Wall Street.

Last week's issue of Harper's Weekly contained the following sketch of the business career of Edwin S. Hooley, one of the best known citizens of Washington Park. Harper's Weekly says:

"Edwin Strange Hooley, broker and financier, was born in Jersey City, November 9, 1863. He is the son of Abraham and Lucy Hooley, of Macclesfield, England, and is descended from an old Saxon family. Abraham Hooley was a highly respected New York merchant, and was a leader in business circles. Edwin Strange was educated at Hasbrouck Institute, and on his father's death his family removed to Plainfield, New Jersey, where the boy was sent to the High School in that town. In 1879, when only sixteen years old, he started out to make his fortune, and he came to Wall street, selecting that as the arena on which he would fight the battle of life.

"His first venture was as a clerk for Pomeroy, Cox & Smith, and he worked hard in that position for three years. At the end of that time he was sufficiently experienced to take a higher position, and in 1882 he became cashier in the firm of Rolston & Bass, bankers and brokers, on Broad street. After six years of hard and unremitting labor Mr. Hooley was taken into the firm as managing partner, and in 1900 the name of the firm became Rolston & Hooley. In July of the same year the firm of Rolston & Hooley was succeeded by that of Edwin S. Hooley & Co., the partners being Edwin S. Hooley, Frank E. Rromley and Herbert Heinsheimer. Mr. Hooley has attained success beyond his most sanguine expectations, and he has firmly taken his place among the leading financiers of his time.

"Although not yet forty years of age, he has assisted in the reorganization of more railroads than any man of his age in Wall street. He is aggressive, and has the courage of his opinions, and that he is a fighter has been proved by the manner in which obtained the control of the Evansville and Terre Haute Railroad; and again, this year, in connection with W. L. Stowe, when he acquired control of the Des Moines and Fort Dodge Railroad. Mr. Hooley is president of the Evansville and Terre Haute Railroad, the Evansville and Indianapolis Railroad and the Evansville Belt Railroad. He is a director of the First National Bank of Plainfield, the Plainfield Traction Company of New Jersey, The Guardian Trust Company, and the Maiden Lane Safe Deposit Company of New York.

"Mr. Hooley is known intimately by all the ruling spirits of Wall street, and he is looked up to as one of the smartest business men in America. He resides at Plainfield, New Jersey, and he is a member of a large number of clubs and social organizations."

Green Goods.

Dr. Sparrow practices in South Chicago. She was one of the many witnesses called by Mrs. Benham's attorneys to prove that Dr. Julia Howe, who was a close friend of Mrs. Benham, was of good moral character. She testified that Dr. Howe had a good reputation.

"Did you know a man named Connors who lived at Mrs. Howe's?" asked Attorney Thompson on cross-examination.

"Yes."

"What did he do?"

"He peddled green goods."

"You don't mean green goods?"

"Yes. Green goods."

"What? Green goods."

"Yes, green goods — vegetables.—Chicago Journal.

Automobiles in the Holy Land.

Five hundred automobile carriages are now running in the city of Beirut, according to the report of our consul at that place. Hundreds more, he says, are in use in the Lebanon district and in Palestine. Two-seated automobile surreys of American manufacture are run to accommodate tourists between Haifa and Jerusalem. A new highway is in course of construction between ancient Sidon and Beirut, and as this is to be a level road, the consul thinks it will be well-suited for automobiles. Indeed, Syria and Palestine may relatively outstrip more modern countries in the development of automobile traffic because, while they lack railroads and street cars, their carriage-road systems are being rapidly developed.—Youth's Companion.

Ethical Properties of Words.

Nothing in language is more fascinating than the shades of meaning which grow up around a word and cling to it and then gradually fall away, making room for others. No conspirator will ever plead guilty to conspiracy. Call it some more acceptable name and he will not object. Words, that is to say, have a moral character, and the invidious term is the one we repudiate with scorn. The man who prides himself on his close-fistedness would never admit that he is mean. Tell the implacable that he is resentful and he will plead guilty; hint that he is vindictive and he will slam the door behind him. One word is invidious, the other is not.—Portland Oregonian.

In Japan.

A writer, describing scenes on Japanese railways, says when a native lady enters the carriage she slips her feet from her tiny shoes, stands upon the seat, and then sits demurely with her feet doubled up beneath her. A moment later she lights a cigarette, or her little pipe, which holds just tobacco enough to produce two good whiffs of smoke. All Japanese people sit with their feet upon the seat of the car, and not as Europeans do. When the ticket collector, attired in a blue uniform, enters the carriage he removes his cap and twice bows politely. He repeats the bow as he comes to each passenger to collect the tickets from them.—N. Y. Sun.

Deadlier Than the Fer de Lance.

One who has been over the world says: "Your Martinique friend fer-de-lance is not to be compared with the dukite snake of Australia. It is like the pictures you have seen of sin, a long, red snake, with eyes the living embodiment of evil. The dukites never go alone. If you are unfortunate enough to kill one without killing its mate the latter will follow your trail remorselessly, like death, or fate, and though you camp 20 miles from the spot it will kill you as sure as you killed its partner."—Chicago Chronicle.

PYTHIAN HALL MAY BE BUILT

Perseverance Lodge is Planning to Have a Building of Its Own Erected.

MAY START IN SPRING

Old Project Has Been Revived and Much Interest is Taken—Probable Site on East Front Street—Will be a Three-Story Structure With All the Modern Conveniences.

Emboldened by its prosperity in point of membership and finance, Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., has in contemplation an undertaking probably never attempted by a similar local organization. It is none the less than the erection of a handsome building exclusively for lodge purposes, but embodying all the comforts of the modern clubhouse. The matter was first broached several years ago and at that time plans were drawn for the structure, but disagreement over a suitable site led to its temporary abandonment. Now it has revived, stronger than ever, and before the close of the present year committees will be appointed to bring the scheme to a successful issue.

Perseverance is now one of the largest lodges in this city and the second largest of the order in this State. Through the careful selection of officers in its career of thirty years it has prospered steadily, the present term under the guidance of Chancellor Commander William N. Runyon capping the climax. Although its castle hall on West Second street is conceded to the be the best furnished of any in the State, the need of added facilities has long been felt and the members saw no other alternative but the erection of its own building. It has been no sponataneous suggestion but a careful forethought, viewed from all sides. Several pieces of property in the heart of the city which would answer the purpose of a site, have been looked over and one on East Front street seems to be the favorite. On approval from the entire membership it will be purchased.

As outlined at present the structure will be not less than three stories in height. In it will be an auditorium, a lodge room that can be used by any order, a banquet hall of unusual proportions with a kitchen annex, a reading room, bowling alley, plunge and shower baths, dancing floor and many others of a like nature. A janitor will be placed in charge and the running expenses will be met by revenue derived from rentals, not only of the lodge room, but from one or more stores on the ground floor. The cost of the contemplated structure will be met by the issuance of bonds to be retired within ten or fifteen years or else by selling shares to members, to be held by them or their wives.

City Judge William N. Runyon, who is the present head of the organization, has all along favored the plan and will call for action before the close of his administration which will be the first of the coming year. It is not at all improbable that actual construction will be commenced early in 1903.

Services Were Held From Hope Chapel Yesterday Afternoon.

Funeral services over the remains of Miss Laura Ayers took place yesterday afternoon in Hope Memorial chapel with a large gathering of relatives and friends in attendance. Rev. L. R. Two of the robbers, DeWitt C. Cave and John McDonald, were caught shortly afterward, and are now serving terms in State prison. Donnelly, who was formerly employed in the shops as a watchman, is a cripple. He and Gerwig today pleaded guilty to the robbery, and will be sentenced next Wednesday. ALL-DAY PARTY.

Progressive Euchre Given at Park Avenue Hotel for Benefit of Woman's Exchange.

Under the auspices of the Woman's Exchange and through the courtesy of Manager John D. Bailey, of the Park Avenue Hotel, a progressive euchre party was held at the hotel yesterday. The affair was held in the morning and continued throughout the day with social features. There were twenty-three tables, but those who did not play euchre passed the time in sewing and in other ways they had a good time.

In the progressive euchre there were several prizes. Mrs. Rapalje won first prize, Mrs. McManus second, Mrs. T. J. Minford third and Miss Florence I. Marsh fourth. Among those who spent the time in sewing and making useful garments, there was a drawing for a prize. This was won by Mrs. T. S. Davis. All of the prizes were donated and the expenses of the affair were trifling.

The women are very appreciative of Mr. Bailey's efforts in their behalf in offering them the use of the hotel. The Exchange will net about $90 and this money will be used to advance the interests of this worthy institution.

HE DOESN'T FEEL CRUSHED

JAMES E. MARTINE TALKS ON RECENT DEMOCRATIC DEFEAT.

Said the Democratic Party Made Decided Gains Even if Not Victorious.

James E. Martine was asked yesterday by a Daily Press reporter whether he considered the recent defeat of the Democratic party crushing.

"No! emphatically no," said Mr. Martine, "it was not what we liked or had reason to expect. The issues and our candidates deserved a better fate at the polls, but withal we made decided gains. The tariff and the trust question must be dealt with. There is no hope of a reduction of the tariff at the hands of the Republican party, hence the trusts will go on with their greedy avarice.

"The Democratic party has done much in the way of tariff reduction in the contest and too, we have martialled the Democratic hosts for the fight in 1904.

"All this being considered we are far from being crushed."

The Campbell residence in the borough has been sold by Edwin S. Hooley to Mayor N. B. Smalley who will raze the house and cart the lumber from the premises. The property was purchased recently by Mr. Hooley and he built a fine fish pond in the rear of the house and intended later to move the house away but owing to some difficulty with a house-mover he decided to dispose of it.

After the house has been taken away Mr. Hooley will have the cellar filled up and the surface graded and a grass lawn will be sown over the lot. It is probable that much of the house will be used in the erection of a new house by Mayor Smalley.

But Rumors of His Death Have Not Been Confirmed.

Bert Heinrichs, of this city, is reported to be critically ill in Denver, where he and Percy Sandford have been staying for some time past. Several days ago his mother, who was in Brooklyn, received word of his serious illness and she left at once for Denver.

The evangelistic services at Grace M. E. church are growing in interest. There were a number of requests for prayer last evening. Rev. Dr. W. H. Morgan, pastor of the Central M. E. church, of Newark, will preach tomorrow night. Rev. Dr. J. R. Bryan, of this city, will address the meeting Friday. The gospel singing by the congregation has been a most helpful factor in all the services.

BOARD WANTS NEW RAILROAD

Board of Trade Discusses the Need of Additional Railroad Facilities for Plainfield.

TALKED OF TROLLEYS

Committee Appointed to Investigate Chances of Steam Line to Perth Amboy—Talk of Trolley Lines From Metuchen and Over to the Passaic Valley—Board Active.

To those who attended the regular meeting of the Board of Trade, held last evening, it was plainly evident that the organization has awakened from its lethargy and is, at present, stronger and more active than ever. So many members answered the roll-call that the board's facilities for seating were over taxed and makeshifts had to be utilized.

More encouragement was added at the beginning of the session by the election as members of Henry Nischwitz, W. W. Warnock, D. C. Ivins, M. Leichtentritt, John Abbott, A. S. Giles and R. H. McCullough. It was reported, also, that many more of the city's leading business men would shortly tender their propositions.

Added railroad facilities for this city and vicinity was the chief topic for discussion and many opinions were brought out by remarks of James E. Martine, deploring the fact that all the railroads in the State run longitudinally and that none go directly across. This is felt more by those who wish to go to the sea shore and particularly to Perth Amboy, where many Plainfielders have interests. It was the opinion of most of the members that the New Jersey Central could be induced to build a spur from its tracks at a point near Rock avenue, to the Lehigh Valley road and use that to run trains to the present points reached now only in a roundabout way. A committee, composed of J. E. Martine, C. W. Runyon and W. F. MacDonald, was appointed to confer with Superintendent Besler in reference to the matter.

Trolley talk was also prevalent and the old problem of getting a line to run over the mountan into the Passaic valley was thoroughly gone over. Mr. Martine stated that Superintendent McCoy, of the Raritan Traction Company, which built the road from Perth Amboy to Metuchen, aspired to eventually extend the line to this city, and if so, he declared it would be an easy matter to have him go still further and terminate at Stirling.

The gap leading from the head of Somerset street was pronounced to be the best route but the "notch" at Scotch Plains was also suggested as a way to get through the mountains and William R. Stanbery offered to donate land for a private right of way to the foot of the range. It was decided to see Superintendent McCoy in regard to the extension and Messrs. Martine, Stanbery and President Woolston were selected as a committee.

An informal talk took place on the question of getting the local company to run its Elizabeth cars through to Dunellen, thus obviating the necessity of transferring passengers at Watchung avenue, when they wish only to reach the business center of the city. No action was taken.

The supper committee reported that it had been decided to hold the first of the proposed banquets in the Hotel Rosell on Wednesday evening, December 10. It will be limited to the members of the board but promises be an elaborate affair. The committee's report was accepted after which adjournment was made.

Plainfield Indorsement.

Don't miss this rare opportunity of having your old piano made new at a trifling expense by L. H. Battalia, 426 Watchung avenue. For two years our piano has been in a very bad condition. We called in several piano experts, and each one declared it beyond repair. We finally consulted Mr. L. H. Battalia and he said he could make it as good as new. It is now in as perfect condition as it was the day we bought it, twenty years ago, and we feel we cannot recommend Mr. Battalia too highly.

THEATRICAL.

For the last week in November, B. F. Keith provides a list of entertainers at his Union Square Theatre, New York City, that would be difficult for any other manager to duplicate. Heading the bill are the famous Rossow Midgets, Liliputian athletes and comedians. Eddie Girard and Jessie Gardner have second place with their immensely laughable one act farce "The Soubrette and the Cop." Mr. Girard is perhaps best known to the theatre going public in connection with "Natural Gas" in which he was starred so successfully, athough he will also be remembered as a member of the team of Donnelly and Girard. Janet Melville and Evie Stetson, the celebrated comediennes and vocalists, have an act unique in the varieties. W. H. Murphy and Blanche Nichols in their sketch "The Bifurcated Girl," a very successful novelty; LeRoy and Clayton in "Hogan of the Hansom," of which Geo M. Cohan is the author; The Bright Bros., European acrobats; Snyder and Buckley in a musical comedy sketch entitled "Blatz Wants a Drink:" Johnson and Wells, colored entertainers; Susie Fisher, the well known female baritone; Tommy and Laura Harris in a comedy sketch; Cadieux, who performs on the bounding wire; Frank Buoman, the conjuror, and a number of other "good ones" are on the programme, which also includes new pictures for biograph and stereopticon.

Cured of Piles After 40 Years.

Mr. C. Haney, of Geneva, Ohio, had the piles for forty years. Doctors and dollars could do him no lasting good. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cured him permanently. UTAH VOLCANO BREAKS OUT.

Had Been Extinct For Centuries. Many Explosions Have Occurred.

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 19.—According to D. A. Turner of Milford, Utah, an old volcano forming part of the Wasatch range in southern Utah between Beaver and Piute counties, which apparently has been extinct for centuries, has broken out afresh. Explosions apparently emanating from the crater have been heard for miles around, while at times columns of smoke and dust have arisen from the old volcano, and new lava formations, all very hot, have been found on the sides of the mountain.

"There has been a number of slight earthquakes in that vicinity recently," said Mr. Turner, "and we have heard explosions for a distance of twenty miles from the crater. Not long ago I ascended one of these old volcanoes and found a small quantity of lava that had apparently recently overflowed from the crater, for it was still very hot, and several times of late smoke and dust in considerable quantities have been seen arising from the crater. Monday's earthquake, which was quite severe in that locality, was fresh evidence of the renewed volcanic activity in the Wasatch range."

CROWDS AT HORSE SHOW.

President's Daughter Attends and Attracts Much Attention.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—The second day of the annual horse show at Madison Square Garden brought out a large gathering and presented a diversified programme. The morning was principally devoted to judging hackney and trotting breeding classes, neither of which was very well filled. The hackneys were generally acknowledged to be of a poorer class than usual. The principal winners were Frederick C. Stevens of Attica, N. Y., and E. D. Jordan of Boston. In the trotting classes Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Bain of Poughkeepsie were very successful.

James Hobart Moore of Chicago continued his victorious career, winning in the four-in-hands over the entries of Joseph E. Widener of Philadelphia, Harry Payne Whitney and A. G. Vanderbilt.

In the afternoon Miss Alice Roosevelt, the president's daughter, was an attendant at the show, sitting in James W. Hyde's box. Miss Roosevelt was also present at night and was the center of attraction.

La Soufriere Menaces Entire Island.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The governor of the Windward islands has sent a dispatch to Colonial Secretary Chamberlain in which he says the prospects of the inhabitants of the island of St. Vincent are blacker than they have ever been. He believes that Georgetown will have to be abandoned, while it is doubtful if any part of the island is out of the range of danger of La Soufriere, which he describes as "this terrible volcano." The dispatch adds that the southeastern end of the island, to which the inhabitants of the district around La Soufriere have fled in the hope of safety, is badly off for water, and "if more people are crowded there they will not be able to exist. No term can be fixed to the action of the mountain, and the people cannot go on like this indefinitely."

HAVANA, Nov. 19.—The house of representatives has elected Senor Portuondo president of the chamber, Senor Garmendia first vice president, Senor Cardenal second vice president and Senors Perez and Acosta secretaries of the chamber. Senor Garmendia is a pronounced radical.

Salvation Army Citadel In Cleveland

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 19.—The Salvation Army is building a large citadel in this city for institutional work. Its total cost will be about $90,000. Already $30,000 has been paid on the building and site. An appeal to John D. Rockefeller for assistance has brought forth the response that if by May 1, 1905, $80,000 has been paid on the entire cost he will make the final payment of $10,000. The offer was made to Colonel Holz, the local commander.

DIGG'S UPRIGHT FIRE EXTINGUISHER.
The Best on Earth! We Challenge the World!

The Extinguishers that turn up-side-down to discharge are good of their kind, but this is far better. Read the following reasons:
Points of superior merit of the Diggs-Upright over any other machine—
1—A sealed acid bottle and an air-tight tank. No change in the conditions of the chemicals possible.
2—Can never be discharged by accident; absolutely under the control of the operator.
3—A 3-gallon machine of this type contains ONE QUART more of liquid than a reversible, because it does not require a handle underneath.
4—It does not need inspection and recharging as required for the reversible with its loose stopple.
5—The acid being released at the top of the tank, and the outlet being at the bottom, the mingling of the chemicals is so thorough before the acid reaches the outlet that it is completely neutralized, and no harm can be done to flesh or fabric. In the reversible type the acid is released within the two inches of the outlet.
6—Convenience in handling. The machine stands on its bottom, and all the operator has to do is to turn the screw in the cap, and the flow begins instantly.
7—The bottle is not broken, and no nuisance of broken glass.

FOUR DAYS ON STAND

President Mitchell Wearied With Long Cross Fire.

ARBITRATORS GETTING RESTLESS

The Attorneys For the Various Coal Roads Each Take a Hand, but Fail to Tangle the Miners' Leader.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 19.—President Mitchell for the fourth successive day occupied the witness stand during the two sessions of the strike commission and was cross examined by three attorneys for as many coal companies. While a considerable amount of information for the enlightenment of the commissioners was brought out, the day was a rather quiet one compared with those which have preceded it.

The arbitrators are growing restless in consequence of the long cross examination, which apparently does not bring out the facts as quickly as the commission would like to have them presented. Several times during the course of the day's session Chairman Gray reminded the attorneys of the value of time and suggested that cross examination be limited to new features of those questions that have already been gone over. The lawyers assured the commission that they, too, were anxious to expedite matters and would do everything possible to hurry matters along without injuring their own case.

Mr. Mitchell has been on the stand since last Friday morning and is showing signs of weariness from the strain of four days' cross examination. Thus far his attorney, C. S. Darrow, and David Willcox for the Delaware and Hudson, Wayne MacVeagh for the Erie, Francis I. Gowan for the Lehigh Valley and W. W. Ross for the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western company have examined the miners' president.

Mr. MacVeagh, who began his cross examination of Mr. Mitchell on Saturday, concluded at 11 o'clock. The distinguished attorney centered most of his energies in trying to break down the miners' reasons for asking for a yearly agreement with the companies on hours of labor, wages and other conditions, which, if made, would be recognition of the union. Mr. MacVeagh's principal aim throughout his questioning of Mr. Mitchell was to show that the mine workers' union, because of alleged acts of intimidation, violence and the use of the boycott by its members, proved itself unfit to be a party to a contract. Mr. Mitchell would not admit nor even assume for the sake of illustrating points that a reign of terror existed in the anthracite fields during the last six months. The recognition of the union is looked upon as the most important question before the commission, and it is quite evident from the trend of the proceedings thus far that the companies will oppose it to their utmost ability.

Mr. Gowan and Mr. Ross questioned Mr. Mitchell principally regarding conditions existing at the collieries of the companies they represent. These questions were more or less technical. Mr. Mitchell's answers as a rule differed very little from the reasons given in his preliminary statement to the commission for improved conditions for the mine workers. Interest in the proceedings is not waning. The large crowds which have been wedged in the courtroom in the preceding days of the hearings were in evidence. Neither is there a falling off in the attendance of attorneys, of whom there are almost two score present at each session.

Killed by Train In Strange Manner.

PORTCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 19.—A well dressed young man in order to make a short cut to catch a train and save himself two minutes' walk tried to climb over the fence separating the express tracks of the New Haven railroad here. He was half way over when one of his trouser legs caught on a nail. The Washington express, running at the rate of a mile a minute, came along just at that time and tossed him high in the air and then cut off his head.

Will Not Deal With Union.

OSWEGO, N. Y., Nov. 19.—The Corn Products company, owning the Oswego starch factory, has refused the petition of union employees for an increase of wages from $8 and $9 to $10 per week. The company states that it is ready to deal justly and fairly with the men as individuals, but declines to recognize an application from the union. It is not known whether or not the employees will strike. Several hundred men are involved.

Has Slept Three Weeks.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Following a partial asphyxiation on Oct. 27, Della Mulligan, a servant in the family of F. C. Smith, 516 West One Hundred and Eighty-fifth street, has been unconscious for twenty-two days and shows no indication of returning to consciousness. The most puzzling feature of the case is the fact that her pulse and temperature are normal.

Killed by Falling Plank.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 19.—Frank Loson, a boss carpenter employed on the new car barns of the Schenectady Railway company in this city, fell from the roof. Two planks followed him, and one of them struck his head after he landed on the ground, killing him instantly.

BEARS OUT OF SIGHT

President's Hunt Ended Without a Trophy.

FAST RIDE OUT OF THE WOODS.

Deer and Bear Shot by Other Members of Party to Be Sent to Washington — Negroes Greet the President at Smedes.

SMEDES, Miss., Nov. 19.—President Roosevelt's bear hunt in Mississippi is ended, and he has not had even a shot at a bear. The last day of the chase was simply a repetition of the three preceding days so far as his luck was concerned. Try as the hunters would, they could not get a bear within range of the president's rifle.

The dogs got a fresh trail early in the morning, and the president and Holt Collier followed it half a dozen miles to the Big Sunflower river. The bear crossed a mile below the ford. They went to this point, and, believing it was making for the canebrake on the other side, they endeavored to head it off. When they got into the brake, however, they were disgusted to find that the bear had doubled on its tracks and crossed the river still farther down. It was then 1 o'clock, and as arrangements had been made to break camp at 2:30 o'clock the president was reluctantly compelled to abandon further pursuit of the elusive quarry.

While the president was out after bear Major Helm, Dr. Lung and Secretary Cortelyou had a more successful deer drive on this side of the Great Sunflower river. They jumped up a buck and a doe. Major Helm killed the latter from his horse at about forty yards.

Although the president has failed to kill a bear on this expedition, he has enjoyed his outing and speaks in high praise of the hospitality that has been accorded him. He philosophically attributed his ill fortune to the traditional hunter's luck and says the next time he goes after bear he will arrange to stay long enough for the luck to change.

The deer killed yesterday and the bear killed Monday will be taken to Washington on the special train. Old Remus, the greatest dog in the pack, whose last hunt was ahead of the president of the United States, was badly used up and, with several of the wounded dogs, was put in one of the wagons.

When all was in readiness, the president and the members of the party mounted their horses and rode into Smedes, leaving the wagons to follow. The president is a hard rider, and the pace was rapid in spite of the bad trails. The distance, which is fully twelve miles, was covered in less than an hour.

Upon the president's arrival here he found fully 500 people, practically all the negroes from the surrounding plantations, assembled to greet him. He thanked them for their demonstrations, but made no remarks. They waited around his car on the siding until dark, hoping he would make a speech.

Mr. Fish gave a dinner in his private car to the president and members of his party. At 9:30 o'clock the special train started for Memphis, having added the record of a presidential bear hunt to the fame of Smedes, which first became known to the outside world through the story that here the experiment of teaching monkeys to pick cotton was to be tried.

Seeking Porto Rican Franchises.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Nov. 19.—Three applicants who represent American capitalists have applied to the executive council for a franchise to develop the natural water power of the island. One of these applicants is William Yeager, who acts on behalf of a Philadelphia concern and who also asks for a concession to build an electric road from San Juan to Ponce in connection with the water power scheme. The estimated cost of this electric road is $2,800,000.

Wants Funds For Pole Hunt.

VICTORIA, B. C., Nov. 19.—Captain Bernier, the Canadian explorer, who proposes to make a dash for the north pole, has written to the local city council to the effect that he will build his vessel in Victoria if the city gives him financial assistance. He says the Dominion government has promised $60,000, and he has collected $30,000. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

Carnegies Poisoned.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Andrew Carnegie is ill at the Langham hotel from the effects of ptomaine poison. A physician is in constant attendance upon the great ironmaster, and, although his condition is not regarded as serious, he has been obliged to postpone his departure for the United States for at least a week. Mr. Carnegie and his wife and daughter were to have sailed today.

Salaries of Labor Officials Raised.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 19.—The salary of the president of the American Federation of Labor yesterday afternoon was increased from $2,100 per annum to $3,000 and the salary of the secretary from $1,800 to $2,500. The increases were voted only after a long debate.

A Business Man's Sarcasm.

"My dear sir!" exclaimed the man who is painfully accurate in his use of language, "that sign in front of your shop is improperly punctuated."

"You don't tell me!" exclaimed the prosperous merchant.

"Yes, sir. You have omitted a comma—"

"Don't tell me any more. I can't bear to think of it. Here I've made only two or three paltry millions out of this business. When I think of the billions I might have made if that comma had been present I am overwhelmed with remorse.—Washington Star.

Curious Marriage Custom.

In some parts of Brittany a curious marriage custom prevails. On certain fete days the marriageable girls appear in red petticoats, with white or yellow borders round them. The number of borders denotes the portion the father is willing to give his daughter. Each white band denotes 100 francs per annum; each yellow band represents 1,000 francs a year.—London Mail.

His Titles.

"I don't understand," said the grocery clerk, "why Mr. Publico writes four capital XXXX's after his name. What do they mean?"

"Mean a lot," replied Uncle Jim from the cracker barrel, "he's ex-justice of the peace, ex-mayor, ex-senator, and ex-perienced in politics."—Cincinnati Comercial Tribune.

Unsafe Transportation.

Traveler (in Ireland)—Hi, pull her up, man; don't you see the mare is running away?

Paddy—Hould tight, yer honner. For yer life don't touch the reins. Shure they're as rotten as pears. I'll turn her into the river at the bridge below here. Shure that'll stop her.—London Tit-Bits.

It Was Up to Him.

Mr. Williams (Fanny's admirer)—Is your sistah going to the seaside this summah, Tommy?

Tommy—That all depends on you. I heard ma say if you and Fanny were engaged before the season opened there wouldn't be any sense in her going.—Stray Stories.

Vice Governor of Philippines Reaches Home.

CITIZENS OF MEMPHIS ENTHUSIASTIC

At the Formal Ceremonies Today the President Is In Attendance—An Interesting Programme Arranged.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 19.—The home coming of General Luke E. Wright after a three years' absence in the Philippines was made memorable by the citizens of Memphis. Cannon boomed a salute of seventeen guns, bonfires were lighted on the principal thoroughfares, and the streets were lined with people who shouted an enthusiastic welcome to the vice governor.

The train bearing General Wright and party arrived a few minutes after 9 o'clock in the evening. A committee of representative citizens was on hand to meet and greet the general and his party, which was composed of himself, Mrs. Wright and Frederick Heiskell, private secretary to the vice governor.

The committee escorted the party to carriages, and the start was made to the Gayoso hotel. The line swung into

GENERAL LUKE E. WRIGHT.

Main street, where four companies of state militia were in waiting as an escort of honor. When the parade down Main street began, a cannon boomed, announcing to the people that General Wright had arrived. Immediately bonfires were kindled on street corners and red fire was burned. Main street had been gayly decorated for the occasion. Thousands of people lined the streets, and everywhere General Wright was received with enthusiastic acclaim.

The party was driven to the hotel, where an informal reception was held. Hundreds of friends grasped the hands of General and Mrs. Wright and welcomed them on their return to Memphis. General Wright was much affected and said he was glad to be at home again. His remarks were very brief, and after the reception he was escorted to his residence on Jessamine street.

Today is a busy day for the vice governor. President Roosevelt and his party arrived from Mississippi at 9:30 o'clock this morning. The president headed the parade to the Gayoso hotel, where General Wright was in waiting to receive the chief executive. At noon a breakfast was given the president and General and Mrs. Wright by the ladies of Memphis.

The programme for this afternoon is as follows: At 2 o'clock the party will be conducted to the Auditorium, on Main street, where a public reception will be held lasting until 4 o'clock. The party will next go to a pavilion on Beale street, where an interesting programme of an hour's duration has been prepared by the negroes of the city. After the Beale street meeting the party will return to the Gayoso hotel, where they will remain until 8 o'clock, when a banquet will be given in honor of General Wright at the Peabody hotel.

PRESENT NEEDS.

One of the needs of the borough fire department was brought prominently to public notice by the fire at the residence in Washington Park early yesterday morning. The engine house on Somerset street was called by telephone and only by the chance passing of a policeman was the call heard. Had Marshal Adelmann not been in that immediate neighborhood, the hurry call would not have been heard. As it was, much valuable time was lost and the fire was enabled to gain such headway that even the best efforts of the department could not quell it until the residence was practically destroyed. A municipality the size of North Plainfield ought to be able to afford to keep a man on duty at fire department headquarters all night.

Under the present arrangements, no one spends the night at the Somerset street fire house. The horses are there ready for duty but any telephone call is useless unless, as happened at this fire, a policeman is in the neighborhood and heard the ringing of the bell. It would be a greater expense but, it would seem, a perfectly justifiable one. There is much valuable property in North Plainfield and a department which stands well among the volunteer departments of the State. The department is useless, however, unless it happens to know that there is a fire and a man on duty at headquarters all night would serve to put the department in much closer touch with the public than under the existing conditions.

Then there is another trouble which will have to be remedied sometime. The present bell, which gives the alarm, cannot be heard all over the borough unless the conditions are remarkably favorable. In summer, when windows and doors are open, it was not so bad but now many of the borough firemen do not hear it at all. Plainfield's whistle is an ideal way to sound the alarm but the bell lacks its penetrating qualities and fails to be heard any where near the distance that the sound of the city alarm reaches. The time is not far distant when the borough will have to provide an alarm which can be heard more effectively than the present bell.

QUESTION OF SEWERS.

It is only a question of time when there will be a sewer system in operation in North Plainfield. It must come. Every year it is delayed the progress of that community is held back. The present movement toward that end seems to be going along the right lines. A commission, composed of men who are known to have the best interests of the borough at heart, has the subject under careful consideration. It has already made a partial report and will present a more elaborate one in the near future. Then the Borough Council will have to act in the matter. This careful investigation ought to get to the heart of the question and discover the best means to adopt.

Two plans have been suggested. One is the sewer to tide water and the other is a sewage disposal plant conducted on lines very similar to the Plainfield plant. The commission was able to give more facts about the latter than about the proposed sewer to tide water. That the latter is possible, no one questions, the only point being its cost. When the city authorities investigated the subject it was found that a sewer from Plainfield to tide water would cost so much as to preclude the possibility of its construction. If North Plainfield can find a means of disposing of its sewage at tide water and keeping the cost of such a sewer within the bounds of reason, it will be a discovery of great importance, not only to North Plainfield, but to the residents of the city as well.

Every youth in the country with a spark of Americanism in him will read with regret of the death of G. A. Henty, the noted English correspondent and author. He had written over seventy books for boys, mostly of travel and adventures in wars, every one of them clean, wholesome and instructive. They are to be found in every library in civilized communities and have done more to cultivate a taste for reading than many of the so-called standard works.

Every visitor to Plainfield is surprised when he learns that Plainfield possesses no theatre and that its houses of amusement are confined to several comparatively small halls. It looks now, however, as if the long talked-of project of remodelling the Stillman Music Hall is going to be a reality and that it will be ready for use shortly after the beginning of the new year. The credit for the deal, which has made this possible, rests with Charles H. Hand.

Pennsylvania has the vanguard of the coming army of advertising bankers, remarks the Philadelphia Record. At Franklin the Lamberton National Bank is advertised exclusively in the daily newspaper. Without any other form of publicity or solicitation the bank has gained an average of 186 new depositors every two months. Considering the population of Franklin this is great as an evidence of the value of newspaper advertising.

THEATRICAL.

The Central Theatre was crowded to the doors last night to witness the second appearance of the Ethel Dyffryn Company. The play, "The Outcast of a Great City," was greeted with applause from the rise to the fall of the curtain. This is a company of first-class artists and the specialties are better than ever. The Dyffryn trio, W. D. Reed in humorous songs, Waldo Whipple, bone soloist, Ethel and Master Tom pleased everyone. Tonight "The Light Keeper's Daughter," will be produced.

LITERARY.

The December (Christmas) number of "Success" seems to anticipate and meet the wants of a large number of readers. No one who has followed "Success" closely for the past year can fail to have noticed the progressive appearance of the periodical, from a literary as well as a pictorial point of view, and now it seems to be worthy of its claim to the "first home publication in America." The current issue contains six really good stories. One of them, by Samuel Merwin, who may be called America's industrial fictionist, is entitled "B. Carter," and it is a fine picture of modern hustle. In "The Stuff That Stands," Cy Warman gives a success sketch of a prominent Western railroad man. This issue contains two full-page illustrations: "Is Santa Claus True?" by Herman Heyer, accompanied by a charming sketch by Marion Foster Washburne, and "Washington Irving and His Friends at Sunnyside," which contains some of the best known faces in American literature. Henry van Dyke, Susie M. Best, Roy Farrell Greene, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Christire Terhune Herrick, Henry Wallace Phillips, William J. Lampton, and Joseph Blethen are among the other contributors. Two important features are, "A Memory of the Boer War," by the late Adolph De Wet, and the first of the "Success" series of a college course at home, entitled, "If You Can't Go to College."

Surprised by Friends.

Thirty friends of Mrs. Winfield Schomp, of West Front street, gave her a pleasant surprise party, last evening. The hours, until shortly after midnight, were quickly passed with games and vocal and instrumental music. The affair was arranged by Mrs. James Neal.

Hand Was Crushed.

—Quality is everything in coffee. It is possessed in the superlative degree by Neuman Brothers' Mocha and Java or Old Government Java.

A Thanksgiving Dinner.

Heavy eating is usually the first cause of indigestion. Repeated attacks inflame the mucous membranes lining the stomach, exposes the nerves of the stomach, producing a swelling after eating, heartburn, headache, sour risings and finally catarrh of the stomach. Kodol relieves the inflammation, protects the nerves and cures catarrh. Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia, all stomach troubles by cleansing and sweetening the glands of the stomach. L. W. Randolph.

SOME OF ATTRACTIONS TO BE FOUND AT LOCAL STORES.

A Few Interesting Items Concerning Greater Plainfield's Merchants

Now is the time to have your dolls repaired for Christmas and the place to have it done is at Harper's Doll Hospital, 411 Park avenue.

One of the most attractive showings in women's suitings, cloaks, furs, etc., is now to be seen at the Paris Cloak Store on West Front street. It equals those to be seen in New York and the prices are much lower.

Out of such a large assortment of pretty hats it is no wonder that the women of Plainfield find it easy to get suited at Bonn's millinery on West Front street. There is a hat to please every one and all goods are the best quality and strictly up-to-date.

People who have visited the drug store of B. J. Schreiner, at the corner of Park avenue and Second street, have noticed the attractive display of Foss' celebrated chocolates in his store. A new consignment has just arrived at Mr. Schreiner's store and is meeting with a heavy sale.

Few people know what a great variety there is in the quality and texture of sponges. Some are cheap and others are very expensive. It all depends on the usages to which the sponge is to be applied. At T. S. Armstrong's apothecary, at Park and North avenues, a very full line of Mediterranean and Nassau sponges are always kept in stock.

As coffee is one of the greatest and most popular beverages, too much care cannot be exercised in its selection. An inferior bean makes an inferior drink and the result is not at all beneficial to the user. All doubts as to the strength and purity of coffee is removed if it is the Java and Mocha or Old Government Java sold by Neuman Brothers. This firm guarantees it and the fact that they sell hundreds of pounds monthly speaks well of its quality.

A Little Loss

of flesh and strength, little barking, obstinate cough and a little pain in the chest may not mean galloping consumption, but they are signs that prudence will not neglect. A few doses of Allen's Lung Balsam cause a free discharge of mucus and so loosens the cough. It heals the inflamed air passages and all its beneficent work is accomplished without a grain of opium.

THE HALF NOT TOLD.

Further Disclosures Regarding the Indiana Grave Robberies.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 19.—Mayor Bookwalter and Rufus Cantrell, the grave robber, had a conference in the grand jury room yesterday. The mayor went to see Cantrell in answer to an appeal from a mother who feared that her son's body had been stolen. Before he left Cantrell made a confidant of him.

"If what Cantrell told me was true, half of this grave robbing business has not been disclosed," said the mayor.

Minnie Weddell of St. Louis had appealed to the mayor to find out whether the body of her son Walter had been stolen from Mount Jackson cemetery. Cantrell immediately recalled the date of the lad's burial and the location of the grave.

"But we did not take that body," he said. "It was too small. I could only sell four bodies of children in a year, for the colleges only needed that many."

"Are you sure of this case?" the mayor asked.

"Sure? Well, I should say I am," answered the grave robber. "If you will go to Mount Jackson, you will find a lump of coal at the head of the grave. That is to notify any one in the business that the body is undesirable. The night after the body was buried I went to Mount Jackson to get another body. I took the coal along as a marker. It is a sign understood by all grave robbers."

Cantrell was before the grand jury for more than an hour.

American Sailors Behaved Badly.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The Daily Mail reports that during the recent visit of the United States training ship Hartford to Madeira a hundred of the crew were allowed to go on shore for five hours, and some of them became intoxicated and indulged in riotous behavior. They interferred with a passing wagon drawn by bullocks and assaulted a well known local gentleman with sticks, severely maltreating him. This incident led to bottles being thrown at the sailors from the windows of a hotel, and some among them sustained nasty cuts. Later the populace assumed a hostile attitude toward the American seamen, and several fled into a church to escape from the angry mob. The Hartford fired half a dozen blank shots, and subsequently the captain came ashore and decided to stop all further leave while in port.

Peace Assured Glass Men.

MUNCIE, Ind., Nov. 19.—Local window glass men have received word that all danger of further fights between the combines and the American Jobbers' association is at an end, as all have reached an agreement on contested points. This condition, it is declared, will last through the present widow glass fire and will insure stable values until next June.

Glut In Cocoanut Market.

MOBILE, Ala., Nov. 19.—There is a great glut in the cocoanut market, caused by unprecedented arrivals here. There are at present housed and in boats 7,500,000 cocoanuts, and four more vessels are due that will add 800,000 to the number. There has been a material slump in prices.

Long Wait For Perry.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 19.—On continuance the case of George L. O. Perry, charged with the murder of Clara A. Morton at Waverley Nov. 1, came up in the Third district court of eastern Middlesex, and under an agreement between counsel was continued until Feb. 16, 1903.

BOYCOTT GOES ON.

Riotous Meeting of the Schenectady Trades Assembly.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 19.—The boycott against the Schenectady Railway company will continue. The Trades assembly held a long and stormy meeting last night, at which a resolution was offered to reconsider the resolution ordering the boycott, but a forgotten clause in the constitution to the effect that any action taken at a regular meeting could not be reconsidered at a special meeting was produced, and so no action whatever was taken. At the conclusion of the meeting, which lasted about two hours, the press committee, composed of President Henry V. Jackson, Secretary Edward Utting and William Martin, the three men who are recognized as the leaders of the radical element, absolutely refused to give out any information whatever, declaring that the newspapers of this city and the entire country were opposed to them in their fight.

From individual members, however, it was learned that the meeting was almost a riot. When it was called to order, with 270 members present, a resolution was offered that the resolution ordering the boycott be reconsidered. Instantly the representatives of the Metal Polishers' union arose to their feet and yelled that if the boycott was declared off the entire metal polishers body would withdraw from the Trades assembly. Hardly were the words out of their mouth when the delegates from the Molders' union, one of the most powerful bodies affiliated with the assembly, sprang up and announced that they would withdraw if the boycott was continued. The representatives of the Machinists' unions, which have a membership of several hundred and are especially conservative, announced that they would side with the molders and withdraw if the Trades assembly did not rescind its action.

The result of the meeting was practically a riot. It was evident that a large majority favored calling the boycott off, but any attempt at argument was met with hisses and yells of disapproval from the radical element. Cries of "Traitor!" and "Scab!" greeted every conservative speech, while the advocates of continuance drowned each other's voices in their efforts to be heard.

A crowd of 300 or 400 workingmen, with dinner pails in their hands, was standing outside the hall waiting for the decision. When the delegates came out and told what was done, the crowd hissed and groaned, indicating unmistakably what is the general feeling of the men toward the boycott.

Missionary Conference Adjourns.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 19.—The conference of the Methodist general missionary committee which has been in session here for one week has concluded its labors. Appropriations for the Women's Home and Foreign Missionary society were approved as follows: Home missions, $426,319; foreign missions, $429,628. The missionary work in Africa was declared by Bishop Hartzell to be in a flourishing condition. He said that the Methodists are fighting a hand to hand battle with the Mohammedans and that they needed substantial financial assistance. On motion of Bishop Fowler the appropriation was fixed at $40,000.

Iron Cars For Newfoundland.

OGDENSBURG, N. Y., Nov. 19.—Seventy-three all iron flat cars have arrived here for transfer through Canada to Newfoundland. They were made at Berwick, Pa., the iron for their manufacture being imported from Newfoundland in pigs, paying a duty of $4 a ton. Now that this iron has been made into cars the manufacturers are entitled to an export drawback of $3.96 a ton. The cars weigh 30,000 pounds each and are consigned to the Northumberland Railroad company, Newfoundland.

British Strongly Opposed.

PESHAWUR, India, Nov. 19.—The British expedition to put down the uprising of the Waziri tribesmen on the Afghan frontier is meeting with a determined opposition. Colonel Tonnochy, in command of the fourth column, has been mortally wounded in an engagement with the insurgents, and Major Beresford, the next in command, has asked for re-enforcements.

Fire In Clark's Mine.

BUTTE, Mont., Nov. 19.—Advices received in this city say that a fierce fire is still raging in Senator Clark's famous United Verde mine in Arizona. Carbonic acid is being forced into the depths in great volume, but it has not yet had any appreciable effect upon the flames. With the mine openings closed, it is thought that this gas will finally quench the fire.

New York County's Vote.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—The board of county canvassers has finished the official count of New York county. The vote shows that Odell received 106,111 votes and Coler 192,658. This gives Coler a plurality of 86,547 in New York county.

TWO NATIONS CLAIM AN ACRE.

That Much Ground in South America Is in Dispute Between Brazil and Bolivia.

There is a region in northern Bolivia known on the maps as Acre—although it comprises many acres of fertile lands which has been disputed territory between Bolivia and Brazil for nearly 50 years. The little country has come into public notice recently because Bolivia leased a part of the Acre region to an Anglo-American syndicate. Brazil objects to this business arrangement, and has threatened to break off diplomatic relations unless the contract is recinded.

Except that the country is rich in rubber, little is known about it. It occupies a triangular space between the boundaries of Brazil and Bolivia and Peru and Bolivia, with the Beni river as the base. The position of the sides of the triangle as interpreted by the two countries is the cause of the dispute. A traveler recently returned from Acre says of the natives that they are in many respects like the Bolivians, but that that there are among them tribes of a lower class than can be found elsewhere in that part of the world. Some of them are said to be cannibals, and all are shy and averse to the invasion of their country by the whites. They are experts in the art of using darts, spears and javelins, and delight in practicing with these from the bush on intruders, whom they usually attack from behind.

They wear no clothes, but have elaborate headdresses made of feathers and beads, and the younger ones wear strings of coins and metal disks around their necks and wrists. There are no horses or mules in Acre, and the llama is used as the beast of burden.

CRUSHED BY MONOPOLY.

Pawnbrokerage in France Is Entirely in the Hands of the Government.

A recent French trial shows how monopoly works even in the pawnbroking business. The police authorities brought suit in the eleventh correctional court of Paris against a group of persons who acted as agents for various moneylenders and pawnbrokers established in London. The action was in the interests of the Mont de Piete de Paris, the French Pawnbroking association, which is a monopoly and under government supervison, says the New York Post. Persons desirous of pledging their jewels and other valuables found that they could obtain much better terms for loans with well-known London firms than at the state supervised establishments in France, and, to meet the situation, a number of agencies were created in Paris, which undertook the business of pledging the articles in England. The Mont de Piete complained of this competition, and their plea that it was an infringement of their monopoly was upheld by the court. The defendants were six in number. Two were sentenced to three months' imprisonment and 10,000 francs fine each and the other four to fines of 30,000 francs each. Another defendant, who did not appear, was sentenced by default to two years' imprisonment and 5,000 francs fine. The Mont de Piete was awarded the franc damages which it claimed as civil parties to the case. The fines thus inflicted amount to about $30,000. It is understood that some of the defendants are Englishmen.

WORRY AND INDIGESTION.

Through Close Alliance of Nerves, Mental Depression Quickly Affects the Stomach.

Worry is a cause and source of much unhappiness, says a medical authority. It seams the face with lines and furrows and has a most depressing effect upon that hypersensitive organ, the stomach, which at such times, becomes a most unwilling and laggard servant. Indeed, it is safe to say that unless encouraged by a cheerful temper and bright or, at least, hopeful thoughts, the stomach will play truant, or sulk, or do no good work. The physiological explanation of this is the close alliance of the great sympathetic nerves, which are worse than the telegraph for carrying bad news; the work and anxiety which depress the brain cause simultaneously a semi-paralysis of the nerve of the stomach; gastric juices will not flow — and, presto, there is indigestion. One sign of mental health is serenity of temper and a self-control that enables us to bear with equanimity the petty trials and jars of life, especially those arising from contact with scolding, irascible, irritable persons. Serenity of mind comes easy to some and hard to others. It cannot be acquired.

Marconi's Sense of Humor.

Mr. Marconi, unlike many of his scientific brethren, has a sense of humor, says the London Express. He said that wireless telegraphy was as old as the world. When first an aboriginal Indian lit a fire on an aboriginal hill to signal to another aboriginal Indian some miles away then the principle of wireless telegraphy was initiated. In a recent lecture Mr. Marconi, referring to the fact that he can send messages so much more easily by night than by day, said that he hoped no one but those interested in cable companies would class his labors among the works of darkness.

Of Interest To the New Woman

ELIZABETH BRYANT JOHNSTON and her two nieces are examples of how talent nowadays often runs in several women of one family. Miss Elizabeth Johnston herself is known best as the author of the textbook, "George Washington Day by Day," and the recent volume of old Kentucky sketches entitled "Days That Are No More." Miss Johnston has two brothers, Anderson and Judge Sanders Johnston. These each have one daughter. Judge Johnston's daughter Mary early developed exceptional power as a singer, which was cultivated abroad, and the young lady became professionally known as Marie Decca, the soprano. She now lives in New York city, where she is established as a singer and instructor in vocal music. Meantime her cousin Frances, daughter of Anderson Johnston, showed a strong bent toward drawing and painting. She went to Paris and studied art two years, even as her cousin had studied vocal music; then she returned to her home in Washington. It was her intention to devote herself to illustrating. As an aid to the accomplishment of her purpose she learned photography, not dreaming of making it other than subsidiary to her picture making by hand. She became so fascinated by the picture taking that she decided to give herself to art photography. She opened her studio in her father's Washington home, and that is her headquarters. But she travels all over the country photographing interesting objects for magazine articles which she herself writes. Thus she has pictured and described coal mines and salt wells and much else of interest. Lately she photographed Booker Washington's school at Tuskegee. She it was who photographed Miss Alice Roosevelt on the debut of that young lady. From the money obtained from the sale of the photographs Miss Johnston built the Alice Roosevelt wing to her studio.

If a majority of the women of your club fail to see things as you do, don't you pop up in meeting, tear off your club badge, fling it at somebody, resign your membership and dash out of the meeting with the grace and celerity of an infuriated cow, making of yourself, of women's clubs and of all womankind a laughing stock in the eyes of gods and newspaper reporters. If you must disagree seriously with your sisters, and most of the time this is quite unnecessary, rise and express your disapproval in a cool, ladylike way. Then, if you decide that you must resign, send in a letter, dignified and calm—always that—expressing your regret that you must leave the club.

Don't become excited and sputter, whatever the provocation. Scolding and sputtering are marks of a feeble mind.

May Hopkins, who herself established a most successful business in New York city, says that when she worked for other people she was never afraid of doing more than she was paid for.

If you must do something you don't like, don't make a noisy, scolding, impotent fuss over it. Go and do it cheerfully and don't say anything about it, and by and by you will come to the point where nothing you have to encounter is really very disagreeable to you.

* *

A writer, speaking of Lida Rose McCabe, the journalist, says that, "for a woman, she is full of exceptionally bright humor." Dear, dear! The conceit of a certain sex, which shall be nameless, is monumental.

The women's dog show in Madison Square Garden, New York, proved that the breeding of fashionable canines is profitable. Many animals of the popular breeds sell for from $50 to $500 apiece. Besides, here is a field of industry in which women can be as successful as men. For generations English ladies of the highest social standing have kept kennels and reared blue blooded dogs.

In the recent political campaign in New York one of the legislative candidates, Morris Byk, was vigorously aided by his four pretty sisters. They made a house to house canvass of the district, sent letters to wavering citizens, helped their brother in giving stag dinners and made telling little arguments for him. Now, if women had the ballot in New York the four pretty Byk sisters could not only have done all they did do for their brother, but could have deposited four plump, round tickets to his count also.

One of the most pathetic and tragic stories I ever heard is that recently a farmer's wife killed herself by drinking carbolic acid because her husband drove her to incessant labor like a beast of burden. She was forced, or thought she was forced, to do a man's work in the fields and a woman's work in the house. So one day, after finishing the harrowing of a field, she went home and at one stroke put herself beyond the reach of her slave driver forever. But she would have done vastly better just to sit down flat and say to her master that he might chop her into mincemeat, but she would not work in the field. He would not have harmed her.

ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER.

COPYRIGHT 1898 BY A. N. KELLOGG NEWSPAPER CO.

"I gave it to you?" said Denham, his brow contracted.

"The cuff with the bloody message on it," exclaimed Hendricks. "It was written by Gielow, and he is now starving, if he is not dead, somewhere in confinement. He is in the power of a certain Count Bantinni—you read it 'Bantam'—who was a rival of his for the hand of Miss Huntington."

Denham's astonishment was too great to admit of expression.

Hendricks passed a copy of the Herald over to him. "You see," he said, indicating with his finger a place among the personals. "I am trying to find the man whom you sent away without taking down his address. If we knew where he picked up that cuff we would be on the road to success."

Denham crossed his legs and folded his arms awkwardly. Apparently he had a struggle with his pride.

"As far as that is concerned," he said, sheepishly, "I can help you on that point. I remember now that my assistant, who talked with the fellow, told me that he said he had picked up the cuff on the new road which has been cut by an old colonial house above Fort Lee, on the Palisades. I could have told you then, but I was an ass. I was so full of my own importance that I simply lied to you."

Hendricks raised his open hand in the air, all the fingers apart. He was gazing into Lampkin's astonished eyes.

"Five!" he exclaimed. "Kola and Count Bantinni are one and the same. Gielow is confined somewhere about the old house."

The sergeant was more than mystified.

Hendricks sprang up.

"Explain it all to him, doctor," he said, pointing to the officer. "I must formulate a plan of immediate action."

He stood at the window, his hands locked behind him, while Lampkin was explaining the matter to Denham, and just after the doctor had finished, he whirled into the adjoining room, routing the astonished office boy from a seat near the telephone.

"We must prepare Kola for our coming," he said to Denham. "If he sees our turn-out approaching he may give us the slip. I think I can fix him by calling him up a moment."

"Good idea," remarked the sergeant, and he and the doctor drew near the telephone.

Hendricks rang and in a steady, unconcerned tone asked for the desired connection. For a moment he stood perfectly still, holding the receiver to his ear, then he laughed.

"Hello, Kola! I know your voice. I say, my boy, you played me fine last night. I never closed my eyes once. Oh, you needn't laugh. There's no fun in that sort of thing.

"What? Yes, he's upset too. He was in my office as soon as I was, anxious to talk it over. He lost sleep, too, I think. But, I say, Kola, I am in a dilemma about this murder case. I want your advice. When I tell you what I half way suspect I think you may advise me to go ahead. If you have no objections I'll come out with Lampkin and give you my views and then if you still hold that I ought to drop the matter I will do it.

"What's that? A little louder, please?

"Oh, yes, a thorough convert at last. I shall never make sport of your philosophy again. Then we may come out at once?"

And then, although the doctor was within reach of his hand, Hendricks raised his voice as if speaking to some one in the next room.

"All right, doctor, he says we may come. I'll send down for a cab."

Imposing silence with a gesture of the hand, the detective led them into the other room and closed the door.

"He's completely off his guard, and tickled to death over my credulity. He'll be the worst surprised individual that ever looked down the barrel of a six-shooter. Now, to business. We'll all three take the elevated to One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street. I'll telephone for a carriage to meet us there. Doctor, make out an order for some restoratives. In case Gielow is alive we will need them."

Dr. Lampkin penciled a perscription, and sent the office boy to the nearest drug store.

"I hope," he remarked to Hendricks, "that you are sure of your ground in believing that Kola and Bantinni are identical."

"Oh, that's all right," grunted Hendricks. "You see, the count didn't cause Gielow to disappear the very night I got back without a reason. He must have been keeping a close watch on my movements and knew when I returned. My mother tells me that Kola called to ask about me every afternoon during my absence, and he never let a day slip during that time without dropping in this office. Why, every time he came he saw his letter to me lying unopened on my desk. Oh, the whole thing bears the imprint of the Indian, and I could make it clear to you if I had time. In his role as psychic adviser to the rich set he got acquainted with their ways, and, being desirous of getting rich suddenly, he resorted to the Italian nobleman ruse. He felt that I knew him better than anyone else in New York, and tried to blow me out of his path. Failing in that, he may have decided to let me exist awhile longer, but when he had stained his hands with human blood he became shaky and made another trial at my windpipe."

At this juncture the office boy returned with the parcel for the doctor, and they saw that he was accompanied by Miss Huntington.

"I do hope you will pardon my intrusion," she said, humbly, to Hendricks, who had hastily risen to meet her, "but it seemed impossible to wait longer at home. Won't you tell me if you have made any progress?"

"We've made some in the right direction," said Hendricks, reflectively. "Come, sit down a moment. You look awfully cold. You have met Dr. Lampkin, and this is Sergt. Denham, of the detective bureau. We are all working for you."

"You say you have done something?" faltered the young lady, as she sat down near the radiator. "Oh, I do hope—I am almost afraid to ask—"

In her agitation she seemed unable to conclude her remark.

"We know where Bantinni is," explained Hendricks, "and, as you know, we have reasons—strong reasons, in fact, for believing that Mr. Gielow was in his power only a few days ago. You must not be too hopeful, however, for you must realize that it would be against Bantinni's interests to allow your friend to live and be a witness against him. Pardon me for not being able to put the situation before you more delicately, but I do not want to raise false hopes."

They saw her shrink under the words like a flower placed before the open door of a furnace. She said nothing. Hendricks bit his lip and pulled his beard as if angry at himself. He tried to throw a more hopeful ring into his tones as he went on:

"We are going out to Bantinni's place at once. It is just above Fort Lee, on the Jersey side. If we are fortunate enough to find Mr. Gielow still alive, everything possible shall be done for him. Dr. Lampkin has already sent for the necessary medicines. We were just getting ready to start."

"Have you yourself any hope that Mr. Gielow may be found alive?" asked the young lady as she rose.

Hendricks looked down.

"It may sound paradoxical," he said; "but I base my hopes in regard to his fate on his statement, made perhaps two days ago, that he was starving."

"Oh, don't say that!" cried Miss Huntington.

"You see," went on Hendricks, as they all moved towards the door, "Bantinni placed him in confinement for a purpose. If he had not desired that Gielow should be kept alive for awhile he would have put him out of the way at once. It looks as if the count intended to let him live for awhile and has forgotten to give him attention."

Miss Huntington laid her hand on Hendricks' arm.

"I am going to ask a great favor," she said, tremulously. "I want to go with you. If he is—dead, I should like to be there at once, you know, and if he is alive, I could help!"

Hendricks' face fell. He glanced dubiously at the sergeant and Dr. Lampkin, then his face slowly cleared up.

"I really don't see why you couldn't go," he said. "I have ordered a closed carriage to meet us at the elevated station. You could remain in the carriage till we went in and made the arrest and then you certainly would come in handy."

"Oh, you are so good!" she exclaimed. "Please do not lose any time."

PEACH STONES FOR FUEL.

They Have Been Utilized by a Baltimore Family as a Substitute for Coal.

The strike and the increased cost of coal incident thereto has directed much attention to other materials for fuel, and a Baltimore man says a good substitute for the black diamond is dried peach stones. The only objection to their use is their scarcity, which depends entirely on the size of the peach crop. Frank Hall, the Baltimorean referred to, says his family had used peach stones as fuel for years until about three or four years ago, since which time the supply has appeared to have decreased.

"We used to get the dried peach stones from Mr. Noel, who got them from the different packing-houses and dried them on his place," said Mr. Hall. "I think we paid $2.50 a load for them, the load containing about 45 bushels. The fuel was used in the kitchen and gave good results. The stones will make a quick, hot fire, and one that will last. One and a half or two buckets of the peach stones will last as long as a bucket of coal. One has to be careful not to fill the stove too full or there will likely be an explosion similar to a gasoline explosion. The proper way to keep the fire going is to put in a shovelful at a time.

"Peach stones thrown into a damp cellar," said Mr. Hall, "are said to have a peculiar effect on a person. After the stones are in the cellar for some time gases arise, and the fumes will go to one's head and give the same effect as if the distilled product of the peach had been imbibed."

LIVES BY SELLING CANDY.

Business of a Bright Young Syracuse Girl—Customers Help Themselves.

How to make money by selling bonbons and trusting to the honesty of purchasers is a problem that a bright young girl of Syracuse has solved. Her place of business is a little booth where the customer enters and helps himself to what he wants, leaving the price in the till, where he makes his own change. In six months she has sold 16,000 boxes of candy and her losses have been less than five pounds of candy and less than five dollars in cash. She finds that people are generally honest.

Rev. F. H. Towns, Maplewood's newsdealer, has been testing the honesty of Maplewood people in somewhat the same way for several years and has never lost a copper. He leaves the papers on the window sill in his little shop near the Maplewood depot, with instructions for anyone to take a paper and throw the money in the open window onto the floor. He has sold hundreds of newspapers in this way and has always found his cash equal to the number of papers taken.

This recalls the sociologist who, to test the question of popular honesty, asked in succession a large number of persons if they had lost half a dollar which he pretended to have picked up on a street in New York. Every one disclaimed ownership. Honesty is not so rare a virtue as some suppose.

COLOR-MAKING BACTERIA.

Large Numbers of the Micro-Organisms That Produce Various-Hued Matters.

The micro-organisms are interesting out of all proportion to their size, and not the least interesting phase of their existence is that described in an article in La Nature by Henri Coupin. M. Coupin treats especially of the coloring matters produced by bacteria, some of which are noteworthy for their brilliancy and others for their chemical or physiological peculiarities. Says M. Coupin:

"A large number of bacteria produce coloring matter, sometimes very vivid. * * * * *

There are two cases. In one, the most numerous, the pigment remains inside the elements that manufacture it; thus the bacteria themselves are colored. In the other the pigment spreads, as it is produced, into the surrounding medium, and this has the characteristic color, while the bacteria themselves are pale or even colorless. Thus the bacillus fluorescens and others are nearly white, while they color the culture medium green."

Every species, we are told, has its particular color; one is citron yellow, another golden, many are brilliant red, one at least is pink, the bacillus of blue milk is sky blue; others are respectively greenish blue, violet and brown. The characteristic discharges of many diseases owe their color to the microbes that produce them.

A Brave Woman.

Millie Hennius, the Indian woman, of Vancouver, who recently received the medal of the Royal Humane Society, was going with her husband, her three small children and a woman friend, in a boat to the north arm of Burrard Inlet. The boat was overturned in a storm. The husband, weighted by a cartridge belt and heavy rubber boots, sank, and was followed by the woman. Mrs. Hennius took her 4-year-old child in her teeth, and ordering each of the others to cling to one of her shoulders, swam, keeping the heads of all three above the icy water for an hour, until rescue came.

Mustaches in Alaska.

Mustaches are not worn by men exposed to the severity of an Alaskan winter. They wear full beards to protect the throat and face, but keep the upper lip clean shaven. The moisture from the breath congeals so quickly that a mustache becomes imbedded in a solid cake of ice, and the face is frozen in a short time.

ORDERED THEIR HAIR CUT.

What Happened to Two American Newspaper Correspondents in St. Vincent.

The large corps of newspaper correspondents which went down to the West Indies after the volcano disasters brought back any number of interesting stories of their adventures at St. Vincent and Martinique. The best of these, perhaps, is one concerning two well-known correspondents who started to explore the streets of St. Vincent town, says the Washington Star. One of them went into a hat shop and the other waited outside for his companion to emerge. While basking in the hot sunlight a great six-foot West Indian negro came up to him and inquired if he was from the United States steamship Dixie. The correspondent replied in the affirmative, whereupon the negro informed him that he represented the St. Vincent board of health, and that the correspondent must have his hair cut immediately or return to his ship. The newspaper man smiled scornfully. The negro did not, but firmly told him that he must take him back to his ship if he refused to lose his back locks. And the negro looked as if he could do it. At this juncture the correspondent's friend came out of the hat store and joined him. The big negro presented the same ultimatum to the newcomer, and finally both correspondents were escorted down the street by the alleged health official.

As they turned into an intersecting thoroughfare the trio met with a policeman, and in a twinkling the stalwart negro had become but a flying black streak away down the avenue. The two men told the story to the guardian of the peace, who smiled sardonically. "Why, that man is a barber," he said, "and keeps a shop right down on the next corner."

HAS AN N AS BEATEN.

A Philadelphia Boy Who Takes the Laurels from the Ancient Prevaricator.

One of the two boys who figure in this tale should get along in the world. His ability to get results with small provocation would seem to be great. Evidently he has little affection for the smaller denominations of figures, says the Philadelphia Times. When told by a gentle playfellow that the latter had been made a paternal present of a goat, he replied:

"Huh! My pop has a whole flock of goats down in his office."

The other boy seemed amazed, but went on with his joyful narrative.

"My papa bought me a wagon, too," he said.

"Well, what of it?" he was asked.

"My pop had so many wagons he had to burn a lot of 'em, because he had no room for 'em."

The gentle boy did not believe this. Moreover, to hear it pained him; for he had faith in what he learned in Sunday school.

"Don't you know what happened to Ananias and Sapphira?" he asked. "They were struck dead for lying."

Patently, this was not information to his companion, who responded—impatiently, perhaps, but without bravado:

"I know it. I saw them struck."

THE CLOCK STOPPED.

And When It Did It Scared the Burglar Almost Out of His Senses.

"Ever hear a clock stop in the middle of the night?" said the retired burglar, according to the New York Sun. "I did, once, and I never was much more scared by anything for a minute, in my life.

"I'd just picked up a watch that was lyin' on the top of a bureau in a house that I was in when all of a sudden there seemed to drop right down, somehow, a stillness that was like death; and I found myself standing there holding that watch and looking around in the dark in all directions, expecting something terrible to happen; and scared?

"Why, for a minute I was scared almost out of my senses. And then all of a sudden it struck me that a clock that I'd been hearing ticking away good and strong up to that minute in the room back of the one I was in had stopped.

"That's all, but that was enough for me, and I just slid out.

"I like a quiet house, but I don't like one with that kind of stillness in it; and then, sometimes folks are woke up by a clock stopping just about as quick as they would be by the firing of a gun."

The Panama Hat.

According to a New York dealer the market is flooded with Peruvian Panamas. They are woven in Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador from the fibers of the palm, which are kneaded like flax before they are woven. Then the hats are shipped to Paris, where they go through a process which gives them stiffness and gloss. After journeying to Paris the hats are shipped to New York and sold for $1.75. Some of them are rebleached and generally Americanized, in which case they are sold for five dollars. A really good Panama can be purchased in the shops this year for $15, whereas one's pocket was made $25 lighter by the same article last year. The modish persons in New York, it is said, are not purchasing Panamas this year, however. The Panama is growing too cheap to be exclusive any longer, and the swagger set has dropped it.

Paris Population.

Paris, according to the latest census returns, has a population of 2,650,000 persons, of whom 1,200,000 are either foreigners or provincials.

ON THE GRIDIRON.

The North Plainfield A. C. football team will journey to New York this afternoon where it will give battle to the Osceola A. C. A large crowd of local rooters will be in attendance.

The Alis A. A. football team will play its biggest game of the season on Hope Common Thanksgiving morning at 10:30 o'clock, when it will play Bergen Point. While the Alis hope to have the heaviest team this season on the field on that day they will be outweighed by about twenty pounds to the man. Pond, who has played with the Alis once this year, is expected home from Princeton to take part in the game and Cuming, Davis and Wilson, who were disabled in previous games, will be able to take part in the game again. The Alis boys have not lost a game this season and the Bergen Pointers have a record almost as good. This game promises to be the greatest event of the local football season.

An interesting game of football is scheduled to take place Saturday afternoon at 33:0 between the Orange Field Club and the Alis A. A. football team. The game will be played at Alis Common. A practice game will be played this evening and Friday to get the men in trim for the game. The Orange Field Club has made a record for itself this season by winning all but two games. The Alis claims the championship of Union county for teams averaging 150 pounds, while the Orange Field Club claims it for New Jersey for teams of 130 pounds. Manager Smith announces that this will be the last game for the season for the Orange Field Club team. They will organize a hockey team soon and expect to have club rooms by the first of the year.

ODD FELLOWS MEET AT TRENTON TODAY

Sixty-Ninth Annual Meeting of Grand Lodge of New Jersey Now in Session.

OPENED THIS MORNING

FULL REPORTS OF THE OFFICERS WILL THEN BE PRESENTED.

Substance of What the Officers Will Have to Say—The Progress of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows in This State.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, Nov. 19—For the sixty-ninth time the grand lodge of New Jersey, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, met in annual session this morning. The sessions are being held in the Masonic Temple, and will doubtless continue for two days, adjourning Thursday afternoon.

The report of Grand Master Harry S. Pine, of Camden, will be a complete review of his administration. The question of paying over to the board of managers the amount contributed by the lodges in the form of ten cents per capita, which was ordered levied at the grand lodge session of 1901, will be given considerable attention. The grand master will show that three regular lodges and one Rebekah lodge were instituted by him.

Official notice will be given of the resignation of Frank W. Tussey as representative to the sovereign grand lodge and the appointment of Past Grand Master James W. Trenchard, of Cumberland Lodge No. 35, of Bridgton, to fill the vacancy. The grand master will give a detailed sketch of each district meeting and public installation of officers held during his term, and will devote a paragraph to each official visit made by him. These visits numbered 122 out of a total of 143 arranged for the year. Mr. Pine refers to the fact that he travelled 10,165 miles in the interest of the order.

Grand Secretary Lewis Parker, of Trenton, will submit a brief, but comprehensive, report along statistical lines. It will tell of the surrender of charters by four lodges, viz.: Monmouth No. 20, National No. 102, Humane No. 127, and Joseph Wood No. 247. The totals of the membership tables will be as follows: Number of members January 1, 24,879; initiated during 1901, 1,640; admitted by card, 61; reinstated, 97. The losses for the year were: Errors in last report, 15; withdrawn by card, 69; expelled, 9; deceased, 357; suspended for cause, 13; dropped for non-payment of dues, 1,049, leaving 25,165 members on January 1 last, a net gain of 286. The money paid out in relief forms one of the principal items in a lodge's disbursement. During last year the combined lodges in the State relieved 3,210 members and 93 widowed families. The number of weeks for which benefits were paid was 28,280. The amount paid to relieve members was $98,737.88; to relieve widowed families, $1,190 50; for the education of orphans, $291; for the burial of the dead, $36,093.86, and for special relief, $3,720.32. These figures show a total of $140,033.56 paid out for relief during the year. The total receipts of the lodges amounted to $296,207.22.

Henry J. Melosh, of Jersey City, and James W. Trenchard, as representatives to the recent session of the sovereign grand lodge, will present a report covering ninety-two printed pages. Among many interesting items are shown these figures taken from the records for the time commencing in 1830 and ending December 31 last: Initiations in subordinate lodges, 2,544,120; members relieved, 2,565.907; widowed families relieved, 256,606; members deceased, 252,354; total amount paid out for relief of all kinds, $92,665,314.47, and total revenue, $240,430,422.21.

The lodge members number 1,002,272, of whom 145,138 are also members of the encampment branch of the order; 233,826 women belong to the Rebekah lodges, making 1,236,098 persons under the jurisdiction of the order.

The officers of the grand lodge are: Grand master, Harry S. Pine, of Camden; deputy grand master, Chester Tomson, of Clinton; grand warden, Edmund L. Ross, of Cape May Courthouse; grand secretary, Lewis Parker, of Trenton; assistant grand secretary, George N. Nutt, Jr., of Trenton; grand treasurer, Joseph R. Deacon, of Bordentown; grand representatives, Henry J. Melosh, of Jersey City, and James W. Trenchard, of Bridgeton; grand chaplain, Rev. S. T. Jackson, of Perth Amboy; grand marshal, Samuel P. Jones, of Camden; grand conductor, Edward W. Hicks, of New Brunswick; grand guardian, E. L. Pearsall, of Newark; and grand herald, Chauncey V. Brunnell, of Jersey City.

SUIT OVER MARKET.

Beef Company-Hummer Case Up in Chancery Court Yesterday.

In the case in Chancery tried at Newark, yesterday, before Vice Chancellor Emery of Union Beef Company against Irma G. Hummer, Lewis A. Hummer and Charles M. Hummer, at the adjournment, the court intimated that Mrs. Hummer was entitled to be paid what money she had loaned to her husband before the judgment creditor, the Union Beef Company, could recover anything and that Charles Hummer's deed, which it was sought to set aside, should stand. Mrs. Hummer made a proposition before the suit was commenced to the complainant, the Union Beef Company, offering to deed the property if they would pay her the amount she had loaned her husband. This they refused to do, but the court holds she is entitled to receive it.

Robert M. Clark represented the beef company, while Codington & Swackhamer represented the defendants, Hummer.

WON RENOWN.

Hero of the Merrimac is Coming to Plainfield Monday.

Captain Richmond P. Hobson, who is to lecture at the Casino Monday night, is one of the brilliant lights of the American Navy. No history of naval warfare will be written in the future that does not devote space to Captain Hobson. At Santiago he won imperishable renown.

It is not necessary to recount that thrilling feat it is not necessary to tell how Hobson steered the collier Merrimac into the mouth of the harbor at dead of night, sunk it to the bottom and with his comrades jumped into the stream. His capture, imprisonment and subsequent liberation are too well known to need recounting.

But a personal recital of these facts will be of great interest, and Capt. Hobson will undoubtedly be greeted by a large audience Monday. Tickets and reserved seats are on sale at Armstrong's.

GAMES AND MUSIC.

Chief Features of Surprise Party for Miss Viola Stites.

A pleasant birthday party was held last evening at the home of Miss Viola Stites, of Whitewood avenue, in celebration of her sixteenth birthday. A reception was given to Great Wenonah Mrs. Estella B. Ragan, of the Degree of Pocohontas, at Paterson, last evening. The affair was given by the Board of Great Chiefs of Red Men and Degree of Pocohontas. Among those present from this city were Great Pocohontas Mrs. Lavinia Holstein and Assemblyman William Newcorn, who is a past chief of the Red Men.

Going to Wedding.

The wedding of Miss Jean R. Watterman and Lieutenant Duncan, U. S. N., both of New York, which is to take place this evening, in the Central Presbyterian church, on Broadway, will be attended by a large party of Plainfielders. Miss Watterman is very well-known in this city, having visited here for the past five years as the guest of Miss Lelia Howard.

Little May Canning, of Watchung, Swallowed Some Carbolic Acid for Fun.

WAS THREE YEARS OLD

Played With Medicine Bottles at Her Grandmother's Home and Tried Contents of One—Died a Few Hours After Despite Dr. Buchanan's Best Efforts.

Little May Canning, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Canning, of Watchung, tripped across the fields yesterday morning to visit her grandmother, who lives a short distance from the Canning house. The grandmother left the house for few minutes and left the child in the sitting room. While alone the child began to play with some medicine bottles on a shelf. One of these bottles contained some carbolic acid and from this bottle the child took a draught of about two ounces. When the child's grandmother returned to the house she was horrified to find the child writhing in pain on the floor of the room. Seeing the half empty bottle lying on the floor it was very plain that the child was suffering from carbolic acid poisoning.

The grandmother, aged and infirm, called to the child's mother and she came hurrying across the field. When she realized that her child had swallowed poison the distracted mother picked the child up in her arms and ran down the street crying out hysterically.

She met Dr. Buchanan coming up the street. He stopped her and taking the child in his arms rushed into the house of Francis Bartells where for three hours the doctor worked over the child until she had recovered consciousness and was apparently free from danger.

After the physician left the house the child went to sleep and while the mother watched beside her sleeping daughter the little spark of life went out. It was two hours that the mother sat beside her child and then she noticed that there was deathly pallor about its features and that the child was dead instead of being asleep.

She picked up the body of her child and paced up and down the room crying hysterically. Her husband was unable to pacify her and Dr. Buchanan was again sent for on a report that the mother had become insane from grief. She was only hysterical, and was soon quieted down.

The child would have been three years of age on December 30. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon from the residence of its parents at Watchung.

The funeral will be held Friday morning at 10 o'clock at the Wilson Memorial chapel, Watchung. The interment will be at the cemetery at Watchung.

WHAT THEY SAY.

Reading, (Pa.,) Herald Commends Captain Hobson's Lecture.

Capt. Richmond Pearson Hobson, U. S. N., who will be heard at the Casino, Monday night, lectured at Reading, Pa., recently, and The Herald of that city, said of him:

"Capt. Hobson in the war displayed a fine tact and a wonderful physical courage which will be exploited in history for all time. On Wednesday night in Reading he lectured upon a theme in the highest degree patriotic and showing a mastery of technical detail.

"That a man so thorough, so strong, so sincere, should have been traduced by the miserable pettifoggers of yellow journalism seems fairly pitiful. The Herald is more than glad Capt. Hobson came to Reading to forever dispel from our people the absurb fancy that he is but a conceited flirt."

In his lecture here Monday night, Capt. Hobson will recount some of his adventures at Santiago. Tickets and seats on sale at Armstrong's.

MADE HOME IN PLAINFIELD

GEORGE JOHNSTONE, WHO SHOT HIMSELF IN NEW YORK, LIVED HERE.

Employed by the American Express Company and Commuted to New York Every Day.

Word has been received in this city of the death, by suicide, of George Johnstone, a former well-known Plainefild resident. His lifeless body was found in Morningside Park, one of New York's small breathing spots, last Sunday, with a pistol clutched in the stiffened fingers. He had sent a bullet crashing through his brain. Owing to the fact that the police reported the suicide as a man named Snow, from cards found in the clothing, it was so mentioned in the metropolitan papers Monday morning. It was not until yesterday that friends here and elsewhere learned the true details and the identity of the man.

Johnstone, who was a young man, lived for a long time at South avenue and later at 431 East Fifth street. He was employed by the American Express Company in New York and commuted. During his residence here he mingled with the young people of the town and was quite popular. He possessed an excellent voice and sang in the choir of Grace Episcopal church.

A few months ago he left suddenly and but very little was heard from him until news of his death came. The people with whom he boarded or his friends know little of his antecedents. Funeral services over the remains were held in New York, yesterday.

COUGHED PICKETS OFF.

Sharp, crackling sounds, like the report of pistol shots, attracted the attention of Roundsman Flynn as he was passing near Richmond street and South avenue, last night, and hastening to the vicinity of the Scott Press Works, came upon William Brown, colored, smashing pickets belonging to the shop fence. There seemed to be no apparent cause for it and Brown was locked up.

This morning he told City Judge Runyon his strenuousness was due to a heavy cough which caused him to hold on to something. The court advised him that such an affliction was best cured by staying home nights and let him go on depositing $5 in the city treasury.

Last year the children filled fifteen barrels this way and sent them to the home. There have been received a number of requests for supplies from the hospitals but as there are a number of the children at the home who attend school across the brook and so the provisions will be sent to the home. GENERAL MANAGER BESLER ANNOUNCES THAT IT WILL COME.

Increase to Bring Wages Paid Up to New Standard Set by Other Railroads.

"The management of the Jersey Central intends that its employes shall be treated as well as those of its neighbors, and where recent increases made by railroads in this territory make the average rate of wages higher than those paid by the Jersey Central the wages of such classes of its employes will be equalized to meet the prevailing rates paid."

WILL KEEP AWAY.

Hunterdon County Freeholders Offended at Flemington's Stand on Freeholders Question.

The Hunterdon County Board of Freeholders will not meet at Flemington when they assemble again on the second Wednesday in December but will meet at West Portal instead. This change from the regular place of meeting at the court house in Flemington is due to the fact that Flemington voted by a large majority at the recent election to abolish the present system of Freeholders and substitute three. The present system will not be legislated out of business until January 1, 1904, and it is proposed to hold the meetings in different parts of the county in the meantime. The only meetings which they are obliged to hold at Flemington is the one for organization in May and it is probable that this will be the only one held there.

Mrs. Evelyn DuBois Benton read the poem, and those who took part in the various scenes were Miss Evelyn M. Lewis, Miss Mildred Green, Miss Mary St. John, Miss Cornelia Miller, W. C. Hubbard, J. POLICE SLEPT.

Such is Charge Made by Chief Tenney Against Two Members of Elizabeth's Police Force.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Nov. 20—Chief of Police Tenney, of Elizabeth, has made a public charge to the Board of Aldermen against Policemen John Murray and E. H. Sauer. The chief accuses them of sleeping on their post. As a result they will have to be tried by the board. This is the first time such a thing has been done in Elizabeth, and is owing to a law passed by the last Legislature.

Heretofore the Fire Committee tried all such offenses, but owing to the neglect of the aldermen to take advantage of a clause in the new law giving them power to designate a committee to privately try such cases, the board must now perform this duty publicly itself.

Great preparations are being made by the members of Lincoln Hose Company, No. 4, of the Somerville fire department, for a fair which is to be held during Thanksgiving week. These fire laddies have done much toward making the Somerville department one of the best in the State and liberal patronage is due them. Several contests are under way at present, and the company is grateful to the women who have volunteered their services to help the cause along. When the fair opens Monday evening, November 24, it is likely that several prominent State and county officials will be present and during the week there will be visiting firemen from various nearby places.

NEEDS OF CHILDREN'S HOME

VACANCIES AMONG SUSTAINING MEMBERS OUGHT TO BE FILLED.

Twenty-Fifth Year of Work is Completed—No Public Observance of the Event.

One of Plainfield's generous women, a constant friend of the Children's Home for many years, has at her own expense finished a room in the third story of the Home that will give space for four small beds and has also provided for the kitchen a fine new range that was greatly needed. It is hoped that some friends would like to provide a coal fund.

The Needlework Guild has sent to the Home 203 new garments, a most timely and much-appreciated addition to the wardrobe. Since August last the Home has lost by death and removals from the city, six sustaining members, paying $10 each and five paying annual sums from $1 to $5. It is also hoped that there will be friends ready to fill these places.

October brought to close the twenty-fifth year of work for the children, but circumstances prevented a proper celebration of the silver anniversary. However, gifts are in order. Checks or cash donations may be sent to Mrs. Horace Kimball, 326 Central avenue, and all other articles to the Home, 146 Jackson avenue, North Plainfield. The reports covering the work of the Home since May 1900 are in the printer's hands. They will give a brief review of what has been done and of what it is hoped to do in the future.

Cutting Costs on American Rugs.

PAST SALES are in no way to be compared with this one in point of assortments involved or low prices quoted. Thousands of dollars worth of the handsomest and best rugs ever brought to Newark will be sacrificed—room is at a premium on our big fourth floor, and we adopt this method of securing more space for incoming holiday lines. An opportunity to buy a single rug for less than wholesale quantity cost is unusual enough to insure tremendous selling activity during the next two or three days. Whatever else you do, don't underestimate this sale's money-saving importance.

FOR SINGLE UNION.

Mitchell Opposes Separation of Hard and Soft Coal Men.

NONUNIONISTS' COUNSEL ADMITTED.

Investigation of Coal Strike Proceeds Slowly at Scranton—Cross Examination of Miners' Leader Ended.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 20.—After being on the stand for four and a half days President Mitchell of the miners' union completed his testimony at noon yesterday before the anthracite strike commission. During his ordeal he was examined by his own attorney and those of the Erie company, the Delaware and Hudson, the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, the Lehigh Valley and the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company and also by the attorneys of the independent operators. He was followed on the witness stand by the Rev. Peter Roberts, D. D., of Mahanoy City, Pa., a Congregational minister, who has studied the anthracite coal industry and has written a book on the subject. He was still on the stand when the commission adjourned for the day.

One of the most important things brought out during the cross examination of President Mitchell was his emphatic declaration that the miners were opposed to separating the bituminous miners from the anthracite workers, thus creating two organizations.

Commissioner Wright, as head of the department of labor, in his report to President Roosevelt on the coal strike, dated June 20, suggested among other things as "reasonable and just" to prevent industrial conflict in the anthracite fields that the "anthracite employees should organize an anthracite coal miners' union in its autonomy to be independent of the United Mine Workers of America," but might be affiliated with it. There has been some gossip among the small army of attorneys at the hearings that the commission may possibly suggest such a separate union. What effect Mr. Mitchell's declaration will have on the attitude of the commissioners if this phase of the labor question is taken up by them is, of course, not known.

The nonunion men—that is, those who remained at work during the strike—were made a party to the arbitration plan by their counsel agreeing to make public the names of the men who petitioned the commission. When the attorneys for the "nonstriking" workmen, as Chairman Gray designated them, and who number about 2,000, made a demand to the commission for a 20 per cent increase in wages with no reduction in hours, their attorneys desired to withhold the names of the persons they represented. The commission, however, decided they could not be a party to such a plan of secrecy.

In connection with the nonunion feature of the investigation Mr. Mitchell announced that he is also representing thousands of nonunion men who struck with the unionists and that all the workmen would abide by the award of the arbitrators "or get out of the union."

Mr. Mitchell's testimony contained little that was new to the commissioners, and that of Mr. Roberts was of a general character, regarding the economic and sociological conditions in the anthracite coal country.

The commissioners, while regretting they have to do so, are still reminding both sides that they would like to have the submission of testimony expedited.

Schley In Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 20.—Rear Admiral Winfield Scott Schley was the guest of honor last night at the annual banquet of the Commercial club, held in commemoration of the signing of the John Jay treaty. The affair was a notable one, and Admiral Schley was given an ovation, the climax of a day of enthusiastic greeting to the naval hero. The banquet was most elaborate. Plates were laid for 500 guests, and among them were Captain A. Rowan, U. S. A., of Atchison, Kan., who "carried the message to Garcia," and General John C. Bates, commander of the department of the Missouri.

New Mail Train West.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 20.—Beginning next Sunday a new mail train west from Cleveland will be put in service on the Lake Shore. It will leave Cleveland at 4:40 p. m., arriving in Chicago at 1:55 a. m. The train will make the same time between here and Toledo as is made by the Twentieth Century limited. It will carry passengers as far as Elkhart. Connection will be made at Toledo with the Michigan Central for Detroit, the latter city being reached at 8:25 p. m.

Charged With Attempted Extortion.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Four men have been arrested in Hoboken on a charge of complicity in an attempt to extort money from Cappel Rubens and O. K. Van Ojen, both wholesale grocers of Jersey City, who had received through the mail letters purporting to have been written by anarchists demanding money and making threats. The arrests were brought about by a decoy registered letter.

Cigar Makers Strike.

HAVANA, Nov. 20.—The cigar makers at all the factories are out, and it is estimated that a total of 30,000 employees are now on strike. Several demonstrations were made by the strikers and [illegible] arrests, but the disturbances were not of a serious character.

Weather Forecast.

Fair; light northerly winds, becoming variable.

DIGG'S UPRIGHT FIRE EXTINGUISHER.
The Best on Earth! We Challenge the World!

The Extinguishers that turn up-side-down to discharge are good of their kind, but this is far better. Read the following reasons:

Points of superior merit of the Digg-Upright over any other machine—

1—A sealed acid bottle and an air-tight tank. No change in the conditions of the chemicals possible.
2—Can never be discharged by accident; absolutely under the control of the operator.
3—A 3-gallon machine of this type contains ONE QUART more of liquid than a reversible, because it does not require a handle underneath
4—It does not need inspection and recharging as required for the reversible with its loose stopple.
5—The acid being released at the top of the tank, and the outlet being at the bottom, the mingling of the chemicals is so thorough before the acid reaches the outlet that it is completely neutralized, and no harm can be done to flesh or fabric. In the reversible type the acid is released within the two inches of the outlet.
6—Convenience in handling. The machine stands on its bottom, and all the operator has to do is to turn the screw in the cap, and the flow begins instantly.
7—The bottle is not broken, and no nuisance of broken glass.

BIG DAY IN MEMPHIS

City Honors Favorite Son and Welcomes President.

ROOSEVELT LAUDS GENERAL WRIGHT

Governor Candler and General Joseph Wheeler in Attendance. Presidential Party Starts For Washington.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 20.—Although the festivities in this city celebrated the homecoming of General Luke E. Wright, vice governor of the Philippines, it is no reflection upon the warmth of the welcome extended to him to say that President Roosevelt's presence was the overshadowing feature of the day. Excursion trains were run into the city, and a number of distinguished people were present to participate in the celebration. Among them were Governor Benton McMillan and General Joseph Wheeler. The programme was a long one. Immediately after the president's arrival there was a parade through the streets to the Gayoso hotel, where a breakfast was tendered the president and General Wright jointly by the ladies of Memphis. In the afternoon the president attended and spoke at two receptions given in honor of General Wright—one at the Auditorium by white citizens, the other at a hall in the black section of the city by colored people. Later there was a Colonial Dames tea at the Gayoso, and the festivities closed at night with an elaborate banquet, at which the president delivered a speech. Including some brief remarks at the breakfast, the president spoke four times during the day.

Mayor Williams and Governor McMillan made addresses of welcome, and the audience was very enthusiastic when General Wright delivered his response. He was greatly touched by the compliment paid him by the president's presence and with the demonstration in his honor. General Wright did not go deeply into the situation in the Philippines in his remarks, but he emphasized the fact that the administration of the islands under both Presidents McKinley and Roosevelt had been of an absolutely nonpartisan character.

The reception tendered by the colored people was truly remarkable. General Wright earned their undying gratitude during the two yellow fever epidemics twenty years ago by remaining here when most of the whites had fled and seeing that the sick were cared for. The hall was packed, galleries and pit, to the point of suffocation, and the whole spirit of the proceedings breathed admiration for their friend.

The president's reception beggars description. The colored people became almost frantic, jumping up and down in their enthusiasm and yelling themselves hoarse. At the conclusion of the president's remarks the entire audience of more than 3,000 united in singing "God Be With You Until We Meet Again."

The events of the day closed fittingly with a banquet, which was one of the most elaborate affairs ever given in this city.

The president's address in part was as follows:

It is a real and great pleasure to come to this typical city of the southern Mississippi valley in order to greet a typical American, a citizen of Tennessee, who deserves honor not only from his state, but from the entire country, General Luke E. Wright.

We have a right to expect a high standard of manhood from Tennessee. It was one of the first two to greet a typical west of the Alleghany mountains, and it was in this state that the first self governing community of American freemen was established upon waters flowing into the gulf. The pioneers of Tennessee were among the earliest in that great westward march which thrust the nation's border across the continent to the Pacific, and it is eminently fitting that a son of Tennessee should now play so prominent a part in the further movement of expansion beyond the Pacific. There have been presidents of the United States for but 113 years, and during sixteen of those years Tennesseeans sat in the White House. Hardihood and daring and iron resolution are of right to be expected among the sons of a state which nurtured Andrew Jackson and Sam Houston and which sent into the American navy one of the most famous fighting admirals of all time, Farragut.

There is another reason why our country should be glad that it was General Wright who rendered this service. General Wright fought with distinguished gallantry among the gallant men who served in the armies of the Confederacy during the civil war. We need no proof of the completeness of our reunion as a people. When the war with Spain came, the sons of the men who wore the blue and the sons of the men who wore the gray vied with one another in the effort to get into the ranks and face a foreign foe under the old flag that had been carried in triumph under Winfield Scott and Zachary Taylor and Andrew Jackson.

General Wright's work has been as difficult as it was important. The events of the last four years have definitely decided that whether we wish to or not we must hereafter play a great part in the world. We cannot escape facing the duties. We may shirk them if we are built of poor stuff, or we may take hold and do them if we are fit sons of our sires, but face them we must whether we will or not. Our duty in the Philippine Islands has simply been one of the duties that thus have come upon us. We are there, and we can no more haul down our flag and abandon the islands than we could now abandon Alaska. Whether we are glad or sorry that events forced us to go there is aside from the question. The point is that as the inevitable result of the war with Spain we found ourselves in the Philippines and that we could not leave the islands without discredit. The islanders were wholly unfit to govern themselves, and if we had left there would have been a brief period of bloody chaos, and then some other nation would have stepped in to do the work which we had shirked. It cannot be too often repeated that there was no question that the work had to be done. All the question was whether we would do it well or ill, and, thanks to the choice of men like Governor Wright, it has been done well.

The American flag stands for orderly liberty, and it stands for it abroad as it stands for it at home. The task of our soldiers was to restore and maintain order in the islands. The army had the task to do, and it did it well and thoroughly. The fullest and heartiest praise belongs to our soldiers who in the Philippines brought to a triumphant conclusion a war small indeed compared to the gigantic struggle in which the older men whom I am addressing took part in the early sixties, but inconceivably harassing and difficult because it was waged amid the pathless jungles of great tropic islands and against a foe very elusive, very treacherous and often inconceivably cruel both toward our men and toward the great numbers of peace loving Filipinos who gladly welcomed our advent.

Cruelties were committed here and there. The fact that they were committed under well nigh intolerable provocation affords no excuse for such cruelties, nor can we admit as justification that they were retaliatory in kind. Every effort has been made to detect and punish the wrongdoers, and the wrongdoing itself has been completely stopped. But these misdeeds were exceptional, and their occurrence in nowise alters the fact that the American army in the Philippines showed as a whole not only splendid soldierly qualities, but a high order of humanity in dealing with their foes.

There is no question as to our not having gone far enough and fast enough in granting self government to the Filipinos. The only possible danger has been lest we should go faster and further than was in the interest of the Filipinos themselves. Each Filipino at the present day is guaranteed his life, his liberty, the chance to pursue happiness as he will so long as he does not harm his fellows, and a way which the islands have never known before during all their history.

At midnight the presidential party left for Washington over the Southern railroad. Colonel L. S. Hunton, general agent of the Southern, was in charge of the train. No stops will be made on the way. The train will reach Washington at 6 o'clock Friday morning.

JEALOUSY CAUSED DEFEAT.

Enmity Between Rebel Leaders In Venezuela Favored Castro.

WILLEMSTAD, Curacao, Nov. 20.—The enmity existing between General Mendoza and General Rolando is alleged to be responsible for the defeat of the revolutionists at La Victoria. It is said that the former is jealous of General Rolando, who is constantly making some effect in the operations and whose troops are bearing the brunt of the fighting. Generals Riera and Solagnie have also disappeared, but there still exists in the country numerous guerrilla bands which, formidable one day, disappear the next on the approach of the government troops.

President Castro is quoted as saying, "I have the situation well in hand and shall vigorously pursue my advantage." Since the battle of La Victoria the government troops have occupied Coro and Cumana, and they are preparing to immediately attack Barcelona, where the revolutionary general Pablo Guzman is stationed with 1,000 men. They will then march on Ciudad Bolivar, which is held by General Ferrera with 400 men. Barcelona will be probably the last place along the coast to resist.

Meanwhile the Germans are preparing to collect their claims against Venezuela, and she has four warships in Venezuelan waters.

Oberlin Selects President.

OBERLIN, O., Nov. 20.—At the annual meeting of the board of trustees of Oberlin college Dr. Henry Churchill King was elected to the presidency of that institution to succeed Dr. John Henry Barrows, deceased. Dr. King was born in Hillsdale, Mich., Sept. 18, 1858. Most of his college experience has been connected with the institution of which he is now president. In 1879 he received from Oberlin the degree of A. B. In 1883 Harvard gave him the degree of D. D. From 1879 to 1882 he was professor of Latin and mathematics in Oberlin. The following two years were spent in study at Harvard. For two years Dr. King was a student in Berlin. Since 1897 he has been directly connected with Oberlin.

General Bliss In Cuba.

HAVANA, Nov. 20.—President Palma sent his aid-de-camp to meet General Bliss on his arrival here yesterday and placed at the latter's disposal his private launch and carriage. General Bliss afterward paid a visit to Minister Squiers and then called in his official capacity on President Palma in company with the American minister. President Palma convened a special meeting of the cabinet, at which it was practically decided to form a commission consisting of one representative each of the several economic societies and the secretary of state to confer with General Bliss. These conferences will begin as soon as possible.

Royal Hunters Busy.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Both the German emperor and the king of Portugal spent the day shooting, the former with the Earl of Lonsdale and the latter in company with King Edward in the royal preserves near Windsor. The emperor distinguished himself on the last day of his present visit to England by bringing down eighty-four rabbits in twenty minutes. An authoritative statement is issued saying the German emperor is highly gratified at the friendliness with which the English people have everywhere received him, and his majesty will leave the shores of England today with the most agreeable impressions.

Irish Leader at Home.

DUBLIN, Nov. 20.—John E. Redmond, M. P., reached this city on his return from attending the convention of the Irish League of America in Boston. He received an enthusiastic welcome, being met at the station by William O'Brien, M. P., the leader of the Irish party; a number of his colleagues and members of the Irish league and an enormous crowd. The lord mayor of Dublin drove in the carriage with him to the league's offices in Sackville street, a torchlight procession in a double line escorting the party. Continuous cheering greeted the progress of the procession.

Jockey Maher Made Fine Record.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The American jockey Danny Maher, who sailed on the Celtic for New York, has the record for the highest average of wins in an English turf season. "I have been more or less restricted by physical conditions in securing mounts which I believe would have increased my average," said Maher to a press representative, "but I am quite satisfied with 106 wins out of 400 mounts."

Internal Revenue Receipts.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20. — The monthly statement of the collections of internal revenue show that for the month of October, 1902, the total receipts were $20,040,499, a decrease of $3,719,408 as compared with October, 1901.

BOYCOTT A FIZZLE.

Radical Leaders at Schenectady Are Downcast.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 20.—There was no quorum at the meeting of the boycott committee last night, and the gloom that was visible in the faces of the agitators indicated how complete has been the collapse. President Henry V. Jackson said that he was awaiting other developments, but he refused to state what the developments might be.

The barbers' union has decided to withdraw from the Trades assembly if the boycott is not declared off. A representative of that union addressed several labor organizations, requesting them to take similar action, and was enthusiastically received. The coremakers and punch press operators will follow the lead of the barbers, and prominent labor men say that a majority of the unions will withdraw unless the Trades assembly complies with their wishes and lifts the embargo.

Labor men generally are very bitter, saying that the individual unions existed before the Trades assembly and have prospered not because of that body, but in spite of it. Even if the Trades assembly is not disrupted entirely it is probable that it will be reorganized and that the men who are responsible for the boycott and the expulsion of Potter will occupy a minor position, if they are admitted within the fold at all.

The boycott has been so ineffectual as to become a laughing stock, and the only ones who heeded it were the members of the carpenters' union and a few others scattered throughout the different unions who are in sympathy with the radical element. The bulk of the trades unionists disregarded it entirely.

Strengthening London's Defenses.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Efforts of a far-reaching character have been set on foot to fortify the metropolis against a possible attack in case of war, from which, judging from statements made last night, it has hitherto been quite inadequately protected. An announcement to the effect that extensive buildings have been completed at Woldingham, Surrey, eleven miles south of London, for use as a mobilizing center in the scheme for the defense of London reveals for the first time the existence of important war office operations. It is stated that when Lord Roberts took over his post of commander in chief of the British army he personally investigated the defenses of London and found them to be very imperfect. Since then powerful batteries have been mounted on elevations commanding the principal roads between London and the south coast. New fortifications are being rapidly constructed along the banks of the Thames, and Woldingham has been fitted up as a center for mobilization.

Granddaughter of Lafayette Dead.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—The Marquise de Chambrun is dead. She was the last granddaughter of Lafayette, and her life was notable for her constancy in maintaining the family's cordial feeling for America. Her oldest son, the Marquis de Chambrun, who is a member of the chamber of deputies, becomes the ranking representative of the Lafayette family. He was formerly counselor of the French embassy at Washington and married a daughter of Mrs. Bellamy Storer. The second son of the deceased marquise also has an American wife. Her third son represented the Lafayette family at the recent Rochambeau exercises at Washington, and her only daughter is the wife of Count Savorgnan de Brazza, the explorer of the Kongo.

No Case Against Gompers.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 20.—The special committee appointed to consider the charges made by President Shaffer of the Amalgamated Association of Steel, Iron and Tin Workers against President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor will report this afternoon. As an investigation it will terminate in the exoneration of President Gompers and as a sensation it will probably wind up in the wet firecracker class. Mr. Shaffer has not only failed to substantiate his charges, but a member of the committee is authority for the statement that he has never made any, to that body at least. He has appeared before the committee, and when he came away declared he had presented his charges.

Cleveland Suddenly Gives Up Hunt.

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 20.—Ex-President Grover Cleveland and party returned to Norfolk yesterday afternoon from the preserves of the Back Bay Gunning club, where they had been ducking as the guests of Joseph Seelinger of this city, president of the club. Mr. Cleveland's return was unexpected, as he intended to remain at the marshes for a few more days. The president and party left for New York at once.

FLED FOR DEAR LIFE

Guatemalan Refugees Reach Frisco With Sad News.

COUNTRY LAID WASTE BY VOLCANO

Thousands of Lives Lost During the Recent Eruptions, and Starvation Now Threatens the People Driven From Their Homes.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 20.—The first of the refugees from the devastated lands of Guatemala have arrived on the Pacific Mail steamer City of Para. They came from the districts from the inland sea and traveled over a country laid waste by sand, ashes and pumice before reaching a railway station. From the latter places they made the journey by rail to Champerico and there took the steamer to San Francisco.

They sailed on Nov. 7, when the volcano was still smoking, and rumbling of thunder and flashes of lightning gave evidence of more eruptions to come. These people fled from their plantations in fear for their lives. They escaped to the seaside with little more than the clothing they wore, transportation being so difficult as to preclude carrying off baggage. The refugees confirm stories of the loss of life. They say that the victims for the most part are Indians. They had not heard of any white people being lost. Thousands of Indians were asphyxiated or buried in the sand. Miles of plantations are under ashes, and absolute ruin is the lot of many planters, whose all was invested in the Fincas. One refugee comes from within a half hour's ride of General Barillos' and brings information that the general and his family are safe.

A cablegram received here when the first eruption occurred stated that General Barillos had been asphyxiated. The refugees say that it is not the crater of Santa Maria that is in action, but a smaller mountain rising from one of the western slopes of Santa Maria, called El Fosaio.

Bands of robbers are now swarming the desolated sections, robbing and murdering refugees on the road and looting the abandoned and desolate plantations.

The people left behind on the plantations, it is said, are in danger of death from starvation, for the food supply has been cut off, and there is no way to send in supplies to the afflicted districts.

The steamer City of Para met evidences of the volcanic eruption soon after leaving Odos. Great quantities of pumice were found floating on the water. When the vessel came off the coast of Guatemala, the shore was seen to be covered with light ashes. At Champerico there was about half an inch of ash over the roofs of the houses, and the ground was covered as by a snowstorm.

Ashes were then falling, although it was sixteen days after the first eruption of the mountain. During the night of Nov. 6, a few hours before the City of Para sailed out of the port, loud rumblings of the earth were heard, and heavy reports, as of distant thunder, came from the direction of the volcano.

Word had been received from Mazatenango, on the outskirts of the ruined territory, that on Friday, Oct. 25, at about 5 o'clock in the evening Santa Maria opened a crater on the west side near its base and not far from Helvetia, and all that night it belched forth volumes of ashes and lava over Tolhu. It was noted on Saturday morning that several more craters in the neighborhood of the mountain had opened up, and all were spouting volcanic debris over the plantations of the district. These new craters were farther to the west, and for more than twenty-four hours they were in constant eruption. The earth was in continual commotion, shaking down buildings and causing much destruction. All the territory about Palmer, San Felipe, Pueblo Nuevo and Retalquies was buried under ashes. Many of the plantations were buried under from five to seven feet of debris and all hope of ever reclaiming them had been given up.

At Mazatenango, on the south side of the volcano, only ashes had fallen and not to such a great depth that it was not possible to save some of the plantation property.

Wolf In Sheep's Clothing Sentenced.

LANCASTER, Pa., Nov. 20.—A. G. Glasgow of Millersville, who cloaked his extensive horse stealing operations under the guise of a Bible agent, an energetic worker in church work and the organization of Sunday schools, has been found guilty on four indictments for horse stealing and eleven indictments for felonious entry and larceny of buggies, harness, etc. He was sentenced to five years and nine months in jail and to pay a fine of $1,400 and costs.

Sleepwalker Took Fatal Cold.

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 20.—Jacob Gengel, aged twelve years, arose in his sleep a night or two ago and went, barefooted, to the home of a neighbor on an imaginary errand. He was returned to his home, a cold developed, and he has choked to death.

IT LIVES.

There are signs of life in the Board of Trade. They have not the appearance of a few fleeting gasps of a dying man. On the contrary, they seem to indicate a renewal of a healthy growth. For the first time for many moons, the meeting room, Tuesday evening, did not furnish sufficient accommodations for all the members who turned out. Instead a long and weary wait for a quorum, there were more members present than the officers knew what to do with. Furthermore, applications were received from a number of local business men who were only too glad to lend their aid to any scheme to advance the interests of the city.

Plainfield is now enjoying a season of unusual prosperity. It has come despite some local conditions that have rather worked against it. The Board of Trade might have had a very powerful influence in helping it along and have advanced it even further than it has gone. But Plainfield possesses natural attractions which are bound to win out in the end. While the Board of Trade cannot make up for its lethargy of the past, it can and seems likely to be up and doing now. Prosperity is here and the city is growing but there is room for more prosperity and more growth and it ought to come with even less effort.

Plainfield has many advantages but every additional one will count. There are plenty of ways by which the city's best interests can be forwarded. The question of transportation, both by steam and electric power, offer some splendid opportunities for good work on the part of the Board of Trade. Then there is the old question of bringing the advantages of the city before the outside public in some way that will be sure to attract attention. There are scores of other subjects in which the board can use its influence and with success. There is need for just such an organization and it should have the support of every good citizen. The greater the number that are thus banded together, the greater will be the influence.

One of the largest of the New York department stores, according to the Philadelphia Record, has added a savings bank to its business, and "by advertising liberally in the newspapers it has already more depositors than some of the long-established savings banks can boast." Printers' Ink considers this a proof that "success awaits the savings banks that will advertise actively."

The construction of several factories in the western end of the city have made it mandatory to give that portion of the city better fire protection and additional hydrants are being placed in that neighborhood. It is only another sign of the steady growth of the city.

Having succeeded in conquering the Princeton Tiger, the Yale cohorts will try conclusions with the gridiron representatives of Harvard Saturday afternoon at New Haven. In this match as in last Saturday's, the bulk of the local sympathies will go with Yale.

It has been suggested to us that the fence at the North Avenue station would be improved with another coat of white paint. There is much truth in that suggestion although the fence is not as bad as it was once.

The past experience of municipalities of this part of the State has been that the only successful way to carry sewage to tidewater is to combine efforts and build a trunk sewer which several communities may use.

It is well enough to announce that a man is dead politically but that does not always make it so.

The horse show is open again and, as usual, the horse is a secondary consideration.

THEATRICAL.

A large audience greeted the Ethel Dyffryn Company at Central Theatre last night to witness "The Heroine of the Light House." The play has a number of realistic climaxes and is full of comedy situations and dramatic sensations. Little Ethel as "Chick, a wild flower," was very interesting and pleasing. She is becoming more popular every night. Tonight "Pinkerton Grey, Detective" will be played. This is one of the best farces this company plays and Little Ethel will be seen in one of her best parts, "Bessie Sheldon."

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 23, "Thanksgiving and Thanks Living"—Text, Ps. cxvi, 12-17; Jas. i, 27.

The oldest forms of worship are connected with the recognition of some power superior to man in the giving of harvests. No people of any considerable degree of intelligence have been without harvest festivals. In these there have been elements of merely human gladness that there was abundant provision for bodily needs for some time to come. But mingled with the feasting and riotous rejoicing there have been rites of worship, rational or superstitious, in adoration of a beneficent Giver or in propitiation of one who could injure.

Our Thanksgiving season gives occasion for recognition of our blessings of the One who has given them and searching of His will as to what we shall do with His gifts.

It is well at this time for each one to go apart by himself and in quiet reckon up where he stands. If there has been prosperity of any kind and degree, look it fully in the face and recognize the change which has been made in your condition. Years back you knew the worth of cents; they came with such toilsome effort. Now you have dollars more easily coming. Some of it is due to your skill, diligence and frugality, but not all is to be credited to you. Much has been due to fortunate circumstances, to God's immediate blessing.

What then?

You owe it to yourself, to your God and your fellows to use your means, whether great or small, in the best possible way. You should be heart glad for God's favor and also you should be humbled by it. Who are you that God has so favored you? Are you big enough, strong enough, great hearted enough to carry the load and not be humbled by it?

Your real thanksgiving will be shown by the way you live.

You cannot end the matter by a good big subscription to church finances, to the missionary cause or education or to any other benevolence. God requires more. Your own soul and your fellow men need more. They need not your money half so much as they need you. Are you a better man this year than you were a year ago? You young people, how is it with each of you? You have gained something the past twelve months. Has it been worth getting? Is the possession such as to gladden you and ennoble heart and life? Do you know God nearer and your associates dearer, yourself more devoted and determined for the right and true and less careful for the merely pleasant things of life?

Bless God for His benefits and live higher up in life because of them from this time onward.

The Neighbor.

Our first thought of the neighbor is of him who is near to us in space, in social position or in blood relationship, and our first impulse of neighborliness is toward these personally. Our first thought of doing good to the neighbor is to supply the natural wants and to guard from natural harm. But to have this thought of the neighbor alone may lead to doing evil and not good, since to love the person only is to love the evil as well as the good which makes up the person and to supply the wants of those naturally without deeper thought may be to give them means to do evil to others. Hence it is easily seen that we really love the neighbor and do good to him only as we love the good which is in him and foster and cherish that. Love to the evil disposed may properly be shown by denying them the gratification of their evil loves or by punishment for their evil doing.—Helper.

Personally Responsible.

The harvest may seem a long way off, but it will most assuredly come with its burning realities and tremendous consequences. There have always been seedtime and harvest, summer and winter, since the world began. So is it in human life. As summer follows spring and autumn follows summer and dreary winter comes at last, even so will it be with all who neglected God's overtures of mercy in Christ. With them the harvest will soon be past and the summer ended, and their condition will be eternally hopeless. "He that observeth the wind shall not sow, and he that regardeth the clouds shall not reap." Every man is personally responsible for his sowing and reaping.—Episcopal Recorder.

Home and Society.

Our home and our society are to us what the world is to a great man—the sphere we may fill with work that cannot die. The statesman molds a people into order and progress partly by the force of character, partly by great measures. We are the statesmen of our little world. Every day mother and father stamp their character upon their children's lives, mold their manners, conscience and future by the measures with which they direct the household.—S. A. Brooke.

Won by Prayer and Toil.

Perfect patience is a jewel which is won only by years of prayer and toil.—Lutheran Observer.

The Dawning Light.

Keep working on for what is right,
And God will shed around His light,
As daylight follows after night.
Then all at last the dawn shall see
And know the will of God shall be
To make our souls sincere and free.

While only truth and love shall stay
To usher in life's glorious day
And teach mankind the heavenly way
To find God's kingdom, bright and fair,
Where souls are free from mortal care
And find sweet peace beyond compare.
—Philadelphia Ledger.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 23—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Thanksgiving and thanks living.—Ps. cxvi, 2-17; Jas. i, 27.

No more appropriate Scriptural selection could have been made for this subject than the One Hundred and Sixteenth Psalm. The psalmist here gives thanks unto God for special and general blessings and declares practically that he will live his thanks. "What shall I render unto the Lord for all His benefits?" he asks and then answers his question by saying, "I will pay my vows unto the Lord now in the presence of all His people." This is equivalent to saying, "I will live my thanks unto the Lord for all His blessings."

1. Thanksgiving to God is most fitting and appropriate. The psalmist on this occasion had much to thank God for. He had been sick—yea, nigh unto death. "The pains of death got hold upon me." Then he cried unto the Lord, and the Lord heard him. He was healed. His life was saved. Little wonder that he would cry out unto God in gratitude and thanksgiving. But who has not many things to be thankful for? Every day there are blessings in our lives. Sometimes they are conspicuously great—unusual prosperity, escape from danger, restoration from sickness to health. Do we thank God as we ought for these special blessings? And then there are the innumerable common blessings of life. Let us count our blessings and in gratitude thank God for them, for they all come from His hand.

2. Thanksgiving to God should be accompanied by thanks living. Words to be effective must always be accompanied by deeds. Not those who merely say, "Lord, Lord, I thank Thee," are the thankful ones, but those who do the will of their Father who is in heaven. The psalmist recognized his indebtedness to God for His goodness. A spared life put him in debt to God, and he declared that he would pay it. "I will pay my vows unto the Lord." All sick vows are not paid, but the psalmist evidently intended to pay his. Thus, best of all, he could show his gratitude to God. "Actions speak louder than words." But thanks to God can be expressed by deeds of kindness toward His people. "Pure religion and undefiled before God the Father is this—to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction and to keep himself unspotted from the world." How can we better thank God than by helping and caring for those who are the special objects of His love and care?

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. xxxiv, 1-8; i. 14, 15; c, 1-5; ciii, 1-5; cvii, 1-16; Mark v, 18-21; Acts iii, 1-10; II Cor. ix, 1-11; Phil. iv, 6; Col. ii, 6, 7; Rev. vii, 11, 12.

A Sure and Safe Refuge.

The day may be one of calamity. Dark clouds may be over us and a terrible storm about to break upon us. Where shall we find safety? The providence of God may fill us with alarm, and we may feel ourselves left destitute and helpless. Where may we hide ourselves from the pending evil? Or, while all is peace about us, while others are rejoicing because of great good we are depressed in spirit and in the thought of ourselves see only sin and judgment. How shall we escape? The Spirit of God has given us the answer, "God is our refuge; a help in trouble most readily to be found." He is at hand, and His ear is open to our cry of distress. He is the Almighty, and within His loving care we are safe. He is the faithful, unchanging one, and therefore will not forsake us. Hasten to the open door and to the outstretched arms of Him whose love infolds you and whose arm will guard from every harm.—United Presbyterian.

Dreading the Future.

The most of our trouble is caused by dread of coming ills. Many of them never come at all, or, rather, when the trial that we have been dreading does come it proves to be far more easy to bear than we expected. In fact, we are almost disappointed when we get over some long expected trouble so easy and immediately look for something else to worry over. We have abundant grace given for every need today; let us thankfully receive the blessing and leave tomorrow, with all it may bring, in His care. After all, what He expects of you and me is faithful trust in Him, a trust that remains firm in the face of every possible calamity. Such faith as this is the only remedy for dread of the future, and such faith is the rightful heritage of every saved soul.—Presbyterian Journal.

GARDENING SCHOOLS.

Where Women Learn to Raise Fruit, Flowers and Vegetables.

The Rock Island Railroad company has a woman landscape gardener, Mrs. Annette McCrea. It is the duty of Mrs. McCrea to visit station after station of the road and plan the decoration of the grounds around each, likewise superintending the planting of flowers, trees and grass and seeing that all are kept in perfect order. This appointment is an eminently fitting one. It is only the beginning of what is to follow. Women will more and more become gardeners of all kinds. Fruit, flower and vegetable raising is well suited to woman's delicate perception and gift of patience in small things. In England a society of ladies some years ago established a school of horticulture for women, and it throve from the beginning. Its pupils are regularly graduated after they have learned horticulture and landscape gardening. In Great Britain the women landscape gardeners soon find good places. They are useful aids to village improvement societies.

One or two of these trained English women gardeners have migrated to the United States and found employment. In the planning out and superintendence of the work of parks, cemeteries, fair and country casino grounds, as well as of villages laid out on the park system, women succeed perfectly. There are now so many large ornamental estates in America that here is a field of itself for the landscape gardener, and here, too, women have been tried and proved themselves entirely capable.

If, however, a city woman, born and bred, with a few hundred dollars should essay to make a living in this to her untrodden field, the first thing she would be almost dead sure to do would be to lose all the money she had and still be ignorant of her trade. The right thing in such a case would be first to attend a school of practical gardening, even spending all her money in getting the necessary knowledge. At the end she would at least know how and be ready to go to work.

Here again, though, there is difficulty, for the United States is almost destitute of schools of horticulture. At some of the state universities and agricultural colleges are gardening courses for both sexes, and these are better than any other kind. At the same time it is beyond doubt that if a school of horticulture for women were started in every state in the Union it would prosper from the beginning.

Enterprising and up to date farm women who know the practical part of gardening might everywhere earn a good sum annually by taking a few boarding pupils into their homes and instructing them in this sure way of earning a good living.

One gardening school for women has been established at Groton, Mass. It is called the School of Horticulture and Landscape Gardening For Women and was founded and is conducted by a woman, Mrs. Edward Gilchrist Low. The seat of the enterprise is an old farm with a good orchard on it. Greenhouses have been built around the home structure. The successful gardener near a good market now gets profit all the year round. The raising of radishes, lettuce and cucumbers in greenhouses is pleasant work and as easy as flower culture. There is a woman near Boston who has a handsome income from the culture of winter cucumbers.

The southern states constitute an especially favorable region for the exploiting of women's schools of horticulture and landscape gardening. The northern market for southern grown fresh vegetables is a good and constantly increasing one. Southern women, with their habitual outdoor activity, make excellent gardeners.

Meantime women at home on farms and in villages can make profit from this industry to a much greater extent than they do. They can learn from a reliable gardening book and from experience. Few women have knowledge of the use and beauty that can be got from even one acre of ground. A German woman who knew her business has this season filled 100 cans with fruit that grew in her own yard of less than one acre. Besides the fruit she raised all the vegetables the family wanted. Anywhere in the northern states a lean-to greenhouse for growing winter things may be attached to the home dwelling without great expense, particularly if the dwelling be of brick. In a good local greenhouse violets and carnations yield an enviable profit in winter. MARCIA CAMPBELL.

CHAPTER XX.

As the carriage was ascending the gradual incline of the rugged road through the woods surrounding the old mansion, the four occupants agreed that, to prevent any suspicion of their intentions entering the mind of Kola, the sergeant and Miss Huntington were to remain inside the carriage with the blinds down while Hendricks and Dr. Lampkin went in. And just before getting out, when the door was reached, Hendricks said to the sergeant:

"Keep a good look-out, and if he should escape us and make a break for the front, stop him."

"All right," agreed the officer, and he smiled apologetically at Miss Huntington as he took out a big revolver and laid it on the seat between them. Lampkin and Hendricks had their revolvers cocked ready for use in the pockets of their overcoats. It had been agreed that they were to take Kola by surprise, get him well under fire and then calmly demand the restoration of the prisoner.

Going up the steps, Hendricks and Lampkin found the big front door open, and as no one came to answer their ring they were hesitating as to what course to pursue when Kola thrust his cowled head through the curtains and called out, cheerily:

"Oh, hello! Come right in, gentlemen."

When they went into the room in which Kola had entertained them the night before, they found the windows darkened and the same dim lights burning overhead.

"I have just got up," said the Indian, with a smile. "That performance last night took all the strength out of me. I hope I'll never have to go through that sort of thing again to convince anyone of my ability in that line."

"You won't have to, my boy," replied the detective. "But I want to have a talk with you."

"I know—I know, sit down," and Kola waved his hand at the lounge on which he had reclined the preceding night, but it had been moved against the wall. He sat down in a chair at a table. Hendricks and Lampkin both obeyed. The former thrust his hand into the pocket of his overcoat and grasped the butt of his revolver.

"Kola," he began, "I have reasons for thinking Gielow is alive and—"

"Hold on!" the Indian broke in, with a laugh. "Listen to me, Hendricks. What if I should tell you that you are absolutely in my power—you and your friend—that simply by pressing the electric button under my hand I could hurl you both into eternity?"

A startled look flashed into the face of the detective. He looked above him and then down at his feet.

"I should believe you," he said. "My God, doctor, he has trapped us!"

"Don't move a muscle or raise a finger if you want time to say your prayers," chuckled Kola, "for as sure as you sit there you will be dead in a minute. The rug under your feet covers some thin boards over a cavern 200 feet deep. With all your shrewdness you have never suspected me, but you do suspect Count Bantinni, and it does not suit me to have you prying further into his affairs. I have tried twice to get you out of my way, and I do not intend to fail this time. Now, get ready. I assure you it is a genuine delight to see that expression on your face. I'd get you a mirror, Hendricks, but to do so I'd have to take my hand off the button."

"YOU WILL BE DEAD IN A MINUTE."

"I can ask only one thing," said Hendricks, calmly, and a perspiration broke out over his face.

"What is that?" asked Kola, with a smile.

"My friend here is not responsible for what I have done, and I hope—"

"Oh, there is not a ghost of a chance for him!" broke in the Indian. "You can see that, Hendricks."

Lampkin was speechless with surprise. He had been slow to grasp the awful seriousness of their predicament, but when he did it completely unnerved him.

Kola glanced past them at a little clock on the wall.

"I'll give you just a minute," he said. "It's as much time as I can afford to allow. My Indian pal has become shaky and threatened to desert me if I sprung the trap on you. I must pacify him and show him how safe we are. I could explain to your driver out there that an accident had happened, and no one would think of blaming me."

Then, although their eyes were glued to Kola's sinister face, they observed the silk curtains behind the Indian stir as from a breeze, then the curtains parted cautiously, and Sergt. Denham peered in. They saw from the wondering gaze of his wide-open eyes that he was mystified by their unexpected silence, their white faces, and the half-crouching attitude of the Indian as he leaned over the table, his stiff fingers on the button. Like a flash a plan of action came to Hendricks, and its subtility was worthy of his great intellect. The words he called out the next instant he hoped would stay the death touch of the murderer and furnish a key to their predicament to Denham.

"Hold one second!" he cried. "I know something you ought to know, Kola. We are completely in your power. I know that when you press that electric button we shall be hurled into the pit below, but you must listen."

Kola's enjoyment seemed intense.

"I don't want to hear anything from you," he laughed. "Get ready."

Hendricks drew a deep breath. The most startling feature of the situation was that Denham did not seem to comprehend their peril. He half smiled as if he thought Hendricks were playing one of his practical jokes on his man before arresting him.

"Time's up," announced the Indian.

"Denham, jerk him backward!" yelled Hendricks, and, in the sudden shock of astonishment over the puzzling command, the Indian involuntarily raised his finger from the button, and the situation seemed to flash upon Denham. Like a projectile hurled from some powerful destroying machine he sprang at Kola. He caught him by the throat and pulled him over the back of his chair. Hendricks sprang from the rug, dragging the almost inactive doctor with him. Kola wriggled in Denham's clutch and managed to get on his feet. But, with his fingers digging into the Indian's throat, the sergeant bore him backwards over the table. In the struggle Kola's shoulder pressed down on the electric button. There was a crash of timbers under the lounge just vacated, and with a dull, subterranean rumble the flooring over that spot disappeared in a yawning black hole.

Hendricks was beside himself with rage as he towered over the now passive Indian.

"Oh, you dirty scamp!" he ejaculated. He took a pair of handcuffs from his pocket and fastened them on Kola's wrists.

The Indian's face was the color of ashes.

"Downed me, after all," he said, resignedly.

"You dirty puppy," was all that Hendricks seemed able to say, but in a moment he was perfectly calm.

"Kola," he said, firmly, "we want Gielow."

The Indian sat down in his chair. He had grown calmer, and now a sort of dogged smile played over his face.

"Oh, you do!" he said, almost with a sneer.

"And we are going to have him," added Hendricks.

"Never," said Kola. "It doesn't suit me to give him to you. I know I am good for the electric chair, anyway, so why should I tell you where he is? There is not another man alive that knows the secret entrance to his cell. You would have to blast away this whole hill of stone to get at him, and then you'd not find him alive. The last time I saw him, two days ago, he was dying of starvation. Huh! Gielow's suffering and death is all the satisfaction I shall have out of the business. You will find enough of my electrical appliances down below to amuse you, but the secret vaults can be entered by no one besides myself. I learned the secret from the sole survivor of the old gang of counterfeiters, and leased the place for that reason."

Hendricks proposed to Lampkin to go with him downstairs.

"Get your gun ready," he said. "He has a dark-skinned assistant somewhere about here."

"I think he has skipped," said Denham. "I saw a fellow in foreign clothes run out of the side door. I was afraid it was your man giving you the slip, so I came in to see about it, and happened to get here in time."

"Oh, he's gone," said Kola, grimly. "He is a coward. He knew what I was going to do in regard to the dead-fall and was too chicken-hearted to face it."

"Kola," said Hendricks, "it can do you no possible good to keep back information in regard to Gielow's whereabouts."

"You will never know that from me," answered the Indian.

Hendricks' face fell. He signaled Dr. Lampkin to follow and led the way downstairs.

In the basement they found nothing of note except a trunk bearing the initials of Weldon Caruthers.

"That's what he brought the body in," said Hendricks.

"A HELPING HAND."

Is Gladly Extended by a Plainfield Citizen.

There are many enthusiastic citizens in Plainfield prepared to tell their experience for the public good. Testimony from such a source is the best of evidence and will prove a "helping hand" to scores of readers. Read the following statement:

Mrs. Valentine Utzinger, of 75 Grandview avenue, says: "I suffered from kidney complaint for six years; I doctored and used various kinds of medicine with little or no result. I had almost a constant sharp, darting pain across my back, and if I ever exerted myself or took cold I suffered severely. I always felt it most when the weather was damp. While in this condition I saw Doan's Kidney Pills recommended and my son bought me a box from L. W. Randolph's drug store. I started to use them at once, following directions closely. They helped the pain in my back, and relieved my other difficulty. I give all the credit for this relief to Doan's Kidney Pills for they are beyond a doubt a grand medicine for kidney trouble."

For sale by all dealers; price 50c a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no substitute.

MEXICAN ROBBERS EXECUTED.

Murderers of Robert Remmet Pay Penalty of Crime.

CITY OF MEXICO, Nov. 20.—The three Mexican robbers who murdered Robert Remmet, an Englishman, in 1901, have been legally shot upon the spot where the tragedy occurred. Others who were concerned in the murder were sent to prison for long terms.

In June, 1901, Robert Remmet, an Englishman, manager of mines near Zaculapan, in the satisfactory terms ever offered by any concern or individual negotiating this class of loans. state of Mexico, was killed in his own house by a band of robbers. Remmet and his wife, with a considerable amount of money and jewels, intended to depart next day for England. There were twelve men in the band. They went to Remmet's house, which was in a solitary place, and found the Englishman in bed. He heard the noise and told his wife to hide her jewels. He then admitted the men and showed them a box containing his money. The robbers took the money and shot him dead in the presence of his wife.

On pain of immediate death Mrs. Remmet gave up her jewels. The men were about to kill Mrs. Remmet, but were frightened away, and she escaped and hid in the woods until morning.

The Mexican authorities have spent over a year in tracking the robbers, all of whom were captured. They were given a trial, the judge in the case being sent from this city.

Peru Offers Inducements.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—American capitalists have found in Peru a fertile field for investments, according to advices from there. Minister Dudley, at Lima, has reported to the state department the proposal of an American company to the Peruvian government to build a railroad from Piura or Lambayeque to a point on the Maranon river, thence to a point near the Manseriche, in the effort to reach navigable waters emptying into the Amazon. This interoceanic line would cross the Andes at their lowest elevation, 7,170 feet. The same company proposes to build a line from a point on the Maranon to Cerro de Pasco, with branches reaching into lands capable of exploitation. The Peruvian government has conceded to the company the exclusive right for two years to make preliminary surveys along the routes and, should the enterprise prove practicable, has agreed to close a definite contract with them.

Philippine Trade Improves.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The import and export trade figures of the Philippine archipelago for the twelve months ending June 30, 1902, show a continuance of the improvement in trade that has prevailed since the inception of United States control. During the fiscal year 1902 there was imported merchandise, exclusive of gold and silver, to the value of $22,141,842, an increase of nearly $2,000,000 over the same period of 1901. This exceeds all previous figures for any single year in the history of the archipelago. The total importations received from date of American occupation to and including June 30, 1902, amounted to $96,135,694, on which the total duty approximated over $22,500,000.

Nebraska May Buy State Bonds.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 20.—The supreme court has rendered an opinion declaring the legal transaction whereby the state of Nebraska will buy $300,000 in gold bonds from the commonwealth of Massachusetts. The money is an unexpended accumulation of the surplus school fund of the state. The deal was entered into several weeks ago, but State Treasurer Stuefer declined to complete the purchase until the supreme court should have passed upon the legality of the purchase.

The fellow stepped out from behind a freight train in front of the approaching express. His body was brought to Plainfield on the 1:21 train and was taken to Cole's undertaking parlors, where the remains await identification.

NEW ENGLAND SUPPER PROVED VERY POPULAR

The Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Church Was in Charge.

HARVEST TIDE DECORATIONS PREVAILED IN SUNDAY-SCHOOL ROOM.

Excellent Repast Served to All Who Visited Church—Old-Fashioned Kitchen in the Primary Department Room—Those in Charge.

A genuine New England supper, with all the good things accompanying it, was begun with great success by the members of the Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church, last evening, in the Sunday-school room of the church. It will be continued this evening. This annual affair has always been anticipated with the greatest pleasure and the affair of last evening, which will also be continued this evening, was no exception to those of previous years. Not a thing that would add to the enjoyment of those attending was omitted and the young women were substantially assisted in their most worthy work, that of helping to carry the Gospel to both home and foreign mission fields.

The Sunday-school room had truly a harvest home appearance about it with its attractive decorations. The main room was occupied with the tables where supper was served and these tables were very inviting, set with pretty china and silverware, with a bouquet of roses and a candelabra in the centre. About this room there were decorations chiefly of cornstalks and pumpkins. The latter were attractive with their many facial expressions, thanks to the young women artists.

One of the interesting sights was the old-fashioned kitchen. This was arranged in the primary department room. Here there were strung numberless ears of corn, and these together with the cornstalks, the old spinning wheel, the fire-place and the lighted candles, presented a scene that was exceedingly attractive.

Other features were the candy and popcorn and cake tables, which were decorated to harmonize with the general scheme. During the hours, from 6 to 9 o'clock, the room was filled with those who came to enjoy a good supper and at the same time assist the enterprising young women in their efforts.

An idea of the excellent supper served can be learned from the following menu:

Corned beef or roast pork.
Potatoes.
Boston baked beans.
Apple sauce.
Corn bread and brown bread.
Rice pudding, pumpkin pie, or
Lemon meringue pie.
Coffee.
Ice cream with cake.

By the time one had partaken of this menu there was a feeling of satisfaction and everyone praised not only the meal but the most excellent service. No one was allowed to go away hungry and this was a special duty of those in charge of the tables, as well as the waitresses.

After the inner man was taken care of an informal programme of music was given by S. C. Baker on his phonograph. The selections were of a pleasing variety and helped largely to make the evening one of enjoyment for all. This evening it is expected that Charles Suhr, piano, and Kenneth Stuart, violin, will be present to render a programme of music while supper is being served and during the rest of the evening.

Too much praise cannot be given the members of the mission band for the success. Everyone who took part worked earnestly to accomplish that which was realized and undoubtedly when the supper is concluded a goodly sum will be found to reward the band for its work.

The main committee having the affair in charge consists of Mrs. Leonard A. Smith, chairman; Mrs. Theodore Mantz, Mrs. George Saums, Miss Minnie Williams and Miss Cora Laire. This committee was assisted by others as follows: Decorating—Miss Cora Laire, Miss Grace Emmons, Miss May VanFleet, Miss Jessie Little, Miss Helen Bogart, Mrs. Clarence Thorn, Miss Mabel Wilson. Cake—Miss Mabel Wilson, Mrs. H. C. VanEmburgh, Mrs. Peter B. Hodge, Mrs. Anna E. Leggett. Candy and popcorn—Miss UNION SERVICES.

Local Churches Will Unite to Hold Thanksgiving Day Services in Two Churches.

The pastors of the various Plainfield churches met yesterday and arranged for the union Thanksgiving services to be held this year. There will be two services, all of the churches uniting. For those living on the north side of the railroad the service will be held in the First Baptist church and Rev. Edward L. Earp, of Grace M. E. church, will preach the sermon.

For those living on the south side of the railroad the service will be held at the Congregational church and Rev. George B. Shaw, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, will preach. Both services will be held at 10:30 o'clock in the morning of Thanksgiving Day and it is hoped that the attendance will be large.

GAVE CLASSICAL NUMBERS

CONCERT OF Y. M. C. A. ORCHESTRA WAS HELD LAST EVENING.

Handled Difficult Selections With Much Success—Assisted by Talented Artists.

Under the leadership of Martin A. Korff, the Y. M. C. A. orchestra gave its fifth concert in the association ball, last evening. The organization was assisted by Mrs. F. M. Ward, contralto, and Otis Ballard, clarionet.

The orchestra's improvement since its last appearance was manifest particularly in the response to the conductor's baton. Haydn's Symphony No. 1 in E flat was given the first time a local orchestra attempted its rendition. It proved to be a distinct treat in itself.

Mrs. Ward was never heard to better advantage. The clarionette selections by Mr. Ballard were equally enjoyable.

The members of the orchestra appearing at the concert were as follows: Arthur S. Mosher, M. A. Audsley, W. F. Gaston, E. T. Higham, Dyckman Winckler, G. W. V. Moy, Joseph F. Berg, Elmer P. Wheeler, G. T. Dunham, Frank H. Manchester, W. S. Wardner, Rev. C. E. Herring, William McKillop, Walter Sampson, Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, Whitney Frazee, Ernest Wilcox, Morris Sorensen, William Hand, Jr., Charles Wendell, Kenneth Shupp, William Koons, William Schmitt.

HELD A SALE OF PITCHERS

AFFAIR GIVEN FOR THE BENEFIT OF ALL SOULS CHURCH.

At Residence of Miss Mary Willard, of Grant Avenue—Those Who Assisted at Sale.

A very well attended pitcher sale was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Miss Mary Willard, of 804 Grant avenue, the proceeds of which will be for the benefit of All Souls' Unitarian church. The sale was held between the hours of 2 and 5 o'clock, during which time the parlors of the handsome residence of Miss Willard were filled with members of the church and their friends.

Here and there about the rooms were arranged small tables on which were displayed a large assortment of pretty pitchers and chinaware, some of which was hand painted. That the affair was a great success is shown by the liberal patronage of those who attended and the rapidity in which the articles displayed for sale were bought up by the patrons.

The sale was arranged and conducted by the women of the parish. Those who assisted at the tables and received the patrons were Miss Emily Huff, Mrs. Stephen Haff, Miss Alice Reed, Mrs. Egdar B. Smith, Mrs. Cohen and Mrs. Gates Willard.

BASKET BALL GAME COMES MONDAY NIGHT

Y. M. C. A. and Hope Y. M. A. Will Meet in Former's Gymnasium for First Game.

GETTING INTO SHAPE

HOW THE THREE TEAMS ARE LIKELY TO LINE UP FOR PLAY.

Y. M. C. A. is in Best Condition of Any to Open Season—Three of the Famous Five Are to Play on Alis A. A. Team.

No lack of interest was responsible for the delay in opening the season of the Plainfield Amateur Basket Ball League and the postponement of the initial game from last Monday until next Monday. Never has a basket ball season opened with so much general interest as this year and the fact that the three local clubs are to meet in a series of games for the city championship is undoubtedly responsible. Monday night's game will be played at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium between the teams of the Young Men's Christian Association and the Hope Young Men's Association. The game is called for 8 o'clock. A small admission fee will be charged.

All three teams are busy getting into shape for the opening contests. Without doubt, the Y. M. C. A. boys are best prepared for play. They will probably begin the league with the same five men that represented them on the floor last winter. As Hope Y. M. A. is likely to be somewhat weak in the first game, it may be that some of the Y. M. C. A. substitutes will be allowed a chance. The team will include E. H. Giles, Wm. Heinecke, Walter Cahoone and Arthur Denton. There is some doubt about the fifth place for which there are a number of candidates who are all showing good form. Percy Hand and Wm. E. Neal have both played in games and either may make up the five.

There has been more or less curiosity as to the composition of the Alis A. A. five. Now that the names have been filed, it is possible to tell pretty closely who will represent that club. For a foundation, there will be three of the famous team which was the first to represent the Y. M. C. A. and subsequently played under the name of the Fanwood A. C. The three are Walter L. Long, George Proctor Smith and Max Moraller. Three better basket ball players it will be hard to find. To find up the other places, there are a number of old Y. M. C. A. players and some of the young men who have been prominent in the football affairs of the Alis A. A. Norman Kieb, of the old Fanwood team, is also a candidate.

Manager Wharton, of the Hope Y. M. A. team, is having his troubles getting a team ready. There is plenty of good material at Hope but it lacks experience. The candidates have been hard at work for a week now and will probably be out this and tomorrow evenings getting ready for Monday's game. While the Hope boys do not anticipate winning, they want to make as good a showing as possible.

John H. Cose, well-known to fame as manager of the Hope baseball nine, is captaining the team and will undoubtedly play. He plays a fast, steady game and is likely to go at centre on account of his height. Geo. McCombe, while new at basket ball, is a veteran at association football, and his training there has helped him materially. He is quick and accurate. John Porter and Lindrum Jennings are a fast pair. John L. Duckworth is considered a likely candidate. George Whitley is one of the most enthusiastic and will undoubtedly have a chance to play. Albert Grieb has made a good showing. Ben Evans and F. T. Thron are practicing regularly.

Neither James Montross nor Brit Martin will play with the team and their absence will be generally regretted as they both have been playing a good game and would undoubtedly be strong players. Their participation in professional baseball has ruled them out, however.

It is generally understood that the championship lies between the Y. M. C. A. and the Alis A. A. but the Hope boys are going in with the intention of making as hot a fight as possible. While they may not win, they hope to make the contest an interesting one, particularly after the league gets well started and they have the advantage of the experience of a few games.

CHURCH BAZAAR ATTRACTS MANY

Auspicious Opening of Three-Days Fair by Women of the Park Ave. Baptist Church.

STORE IS TRANSFORMED

A Fairyland of Booths in the Old Rockfellow Store on Park Avenue—Almost Everything Can be Had at the Different Departments—A Glimpse of the Flowery Kingdom.

What were only four bare walls in the store, formerly occupied by G. W. Rockfellow at the corner of Park avenue and Fouth street, the women of the Park Avenue Baptist church have transformed into a perfect fairyland of prettily decorated booths and cozy corners and for the rest of the week they will conduct their fair in the store. The bazaar opened yesterday afternoon and the patronage was at once large and generous. Each morning, afternoon and evening the fair will be open when there will be music consisting of "piano player" selections by a New York musician.

As one enters the store the attractive decorations at once attract the attention of the visitor. Each booth is decorated in a manner appropriate to the goods for sale at the counters. On the left is the art booth where handsome pictures and magazines are for sale. At this booth Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson presides, assisted by Miss May Tennant and Miss Julia Wyckoff. This booth is decorated in red and lighted by red lights, while on the counters is arrayed a fine assortment of art pictures and lithographs which were donated by Frederick Osgood, of Chicago. A large number of Leslie's Popular Magazines are on sale, at reduced prices, which were donated by Frederick Colwer, of Leslie's Magazine Company.

Huyler, the New York candy manufacturer, has donated a large quantity of his well known candies to the fair and they are on sale at the candy booth which is presided over by Mrs. E. Frank Vail, assisted by Miss Jennie Vail, Miss Violet VanWinkle, Mrs. C. Smith, Mrs. A. V. Luce, Mrs. S. W. Dunning and Miss Percie B. Emmons. This booth is tastefully decorated in white and pink and is very attractive.

The fancy goods counter is next along the left side of the store where fancy articles made by the women of the church and their friends are displayed for sale in a booth daintily arrayed in decorations of white. Here Mrs. John H. Doane, Miss Frances Corey, Miss Bessie Giles and Mrs. J. W. Brown attend to the wants of their patrons. In the display are to be found some very handsome embroideries and drawn work and an array of sofa pillows.

Mrs. F. V. Green, gowned in the costume of an old apple woman, sits behind a sloping tray of rosy apples and fruits of all kinds while she slowly turns a large peanut roaster. This is the fruit department where peanuts may be purchased at the regulation prices prevailing at all first-class New York fruit stores. Miss Mary Giles and Miss Florence G. Hawkins assist in the sale of the wares. The decorations at this booth are in keeping with articles on sale.

A glimpse of the land of the Mikado is seen in the extreme left hand corner of the fair where, surrounded with Japanese cherry blossoms donated by P. H. Dubois, of West Front street, the visitor may sit down to rest and enjoy a refresbing cup of tea prepared by Miss Elsie Giles, Miss Emily Runyon and Miss Charlotte Tennant, all of whom are gowned in the picturesue costume of Japanese maidens. The booth is lighted by electric lights shining through colored globes which shed a soft restful glow over the booths. In this booth articles from Vantine's are on sale and are tastefully arranged.

In passing to the opposite side of the bazaar one glances into the oyster parlor where a light oyster supper may be enjoyed while listening to the piano recital. The decorations here are of a patriotic order. American flags are draped about the sides of the booth and wherever the eye rests the red, white and blue and the stars and stripes are to be seen. Here Mrs. Wheaton S. Lowry, presides, assisted by Miss May Pierson, Miss Violet VanWinkle, Miss Viola Hellyer, Miss Lulu Striker and Miss Mary Clark as waitresses, all of whom are attired in

GAVE CHOCOLATE TEA TO AID CITY NURSE

Junior Circle of King's Daughters Held Successful Affair at Home of Miss Garrigues.

WAS ITS INITIAL EFFORT

CHARMING TEA AND SALE RAISED THE DESIRED AMOUNT.

Twenty-Two Young Women Organized the Circle Last Spring—Were Assisted by a Few Friends—House Delightfully Decorated.

A charming and successful affair of yesterday was a "chocolate tea" and sale given at the home of Miss Anna Garrigues, 721 Watchung avenue, under the auspices of the Junior Circle of King's Daughters, for the purpose of raising money to meet the pledge of $50 made to support the King's Daughters' nurse. The young women was much pleased with the success of their efforts for $65 was received.

This Circle is the latest to join the City Union, King's Daughters, it being organized last spring by Mrs. L. H. Biglow, who is now president of the Circle. The membership comprises twenty-two young women who have become deeply interested in the King's Daughters' work. In addition to the serving of tea, there were candy and dolls offered for sale.

The young women were assisted in their affair by several older women, who presided at the tea table. They were Mrs. H. D. Haven, Mrs. J. P. Northrop, Mrs. Frederick G. Meade, Mrs. L. H. Biglow and Mrs. Thomas Minford. At the candy and doll tables all of the members of the Circle took turns in assisting. The entire membership of the Circle was present as follows: The Misses Lucie Budlong, Dorothy Averill, Louise Booth, Marion Brown, May Faber, Bessie Flanders, Ray and Mabel Hooley, Marion Hall, Alice Titus, Kathryn Titus, Louise Saunders, Molly Perkins, Marion Smith, Frederica Meade, Josephine Latourette, Helen Stevens, Gladys Biglow, Norma Northrop, Anna Garrigues, Alice Haven and Florence Stuart.

The affair was held from 3 to 6 o'clock and during those hours the house was thronged. The home was prettily decorated for the occasion, chrysanthemums being used chiefly.

THEY LIKE FRYE.

What Harrisburg Thought of the Y. M. C. A. Entertainer.

The general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Harrisburg, Pa., in writing of one of the attractions to appear in the Y. M. C. A. Star Course, Thanksgiving night, says: "All of the leading impersonators have appeared in our Star Course during the past seven years, but none have excelled Edward H. Frye, of Boston, in his masterly impersonations. It was one of the most satisfactory entertainments ever given under our auspices. The association, press and public of Harrisburg unitedly endorse Mr. Frye, and we shall certainly want the pleasure of hearing him again."

TWO CLASSES UNITED.

Willing Workers of Two Sunday-School Classes Held a Social.

At the home of Miss Stella Boss, of 200 Somerset street, last evening, about sixty young people, all of whom are members of the Willing Workers of the Trinity Reformed church, enjoyed a very pleasant evening last night. A soap bubble contest was one event of the evening. LaFayette Rosenstheil was the time keeper. Miss Sarah Hummer, gowned in a gypsy costume, told fortunes in one corner of the room.

Two classes were present, class fifteen, Miss Wilson's class of young men, and class thirty, Horace J. Martin's class of young women. After the games had been played refreshments were served.

Log Fire Social.

The social committee of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. has made arrangements to hold a series of log fire socials for the boys in the association. The first will be held from 7:30 to 9 o'clock. Boys who joined or renewed in October will be admitted tonight.

Called to Fatherland.

Wm. Vogel, of West Front street, sailed Tuesday for Germany in response to a cablegram informing him of the serious illness of his father. He will remain abroad for an indefinite period.

SETTLING LOSS.

Insurance on Car Barns at Elizabeth Amounted to $21,000—Almost Total Loss.

The fire adjusters representing the several insurance companies who suffered losses in Sunday's fire at Elizabeth, when the new barns of the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Railway Company were destroyed, and arranged the insurance on the damaged building.

Owing to the fact that the buildings had just been completed no policies had been written, but the loss was covered by binders. M. M. Scudder, of Westfield, had the risk on the shed which was covered by $2,500 in the Niagara; $2,000 in the Caledonian, and $500 in the Hamburg-Bremen. The insurance on the eight cars which were burned amounted to $16,000. The loss is fully covered by the $21,000 insurance on the building.

A BIG RUSH TO PAY TAXES

THERE WAS $45,000 OF TAXES PAID COLLECTOR SMITH YESTERDAY.

Many of the Big Corporations Sent in Their Taxes at the Very Last Moment.

Tax Collector F. H. Smith reports good collections since November 1. Early in the month the amount for each day was smaller than that towards the last. From November 1 to 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when the time for paying taxes was up, the total received for taxes amounted to $136,401 96, and from 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon until this morning about $10,000 was received. In all there was about $45,000 received yesterday.

The heaviest taxpayers include the Plainfield Street Railway Company, the Pond Machine Tool Works, Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company, Plainfield Water Supply Company, Potter Press Works, the Walter Scott Press Works, Babcock estate, Seventh-Day Baptist Memorial Board and the Hibbard-Rodman-Ely Safe Works. In some of these cases the amounts range between $2,000 and $3,000.

This morning and in fact throughout today there are a few taxpayers calling at the office to square accounts. It now looks as though the delinquent list this year will be small in comparison to those of previous years.

PYTHIAN SERVICE AT GRAVE

IMPRESSIVE FUNERAL OF WM. H. B. DRAKE HELD YESTERDAY.

Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes Presided at the Services at House—Burial Service at Cemetery.

Attended by the brethren of three organizations with which he had been connected in life, all that was mortal of William H. B. Drake was laid away yesterday afternoon in its final resting place. Two services, one at his late home on Orchard place and the other in Evergreen cemetery, both largely attended, marked the closing ceremony.

At the home, where the obsequies were for the family and immediate friends, Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, of the First Baptist church, was in charge, assisted by Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, of Warren chapel. Both discoursed at some length and offered prayer. Two solos, "Nearer My God to Thee" and "Abide With Me," were sweetly rendered by a trio composed of Elmer E. Runyon, William N. Runyon and Elmer E. Cutting.

Following it, the remains were taken to the burial spot while delegations from Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., preceded the cortege. Members of Winfield Scott Post were also in attendance but as individuals. At the grave the impressive Knights of Pythias' burial service was conducted for the lodges by Prelate Robert Kenney, of Perserverance. Prayer was also offered by the divines in charge at the home.

The casket was borne by J. B. Higgins and James Patterson, of Perseverance Lodge; Asa Pope and Thomas Osment, of Miantonomo Tribe, and Dr. J. F. Berg and I. L. McVoy, of Winfield Scott Post.

Moody Wanted Her to Sing.

Miss Mildred Till, of the Rock Band Concert Company, will be the soloist at the Y. M. C. A. meeting, Sunday afternoon. She was asked a few years ago by the late D. L. Moody to sing for him in connection with his evangelistic work in New York city but, as she was on a concert tour in Indiana at the time, she was unable to fill the engagement.

BOOKS FOR CHURCH AND SOCIAL WORKERS

First of Series of Exhibits at Public Library Tomorrow Afternoon and Evening.

IS A POPULAR SUBJECT

THE EXHIBIT WILL BE IN CHARGE OF MISS VAN BOSKERCK.

Dr. Allen, Secretary of New Jersey Charities' Aid Association, Has Assisted in the Exhibit—Those Who Will Help Tomorrow.

Saturday afternoon and evening the first of the Public Library's series of exhibits will be given. The subject will be "Practical Philanthropy," and will be in charge of Miss VanBoskerck.

Miss VanBoskerck will be assisted in showing the books on this subject by Miss Viola Conklin, Mrs. J. K. Myers, Miss Emily Tracy, Miss Mary E. Tweedy and Miss Mary Whiton. Miss VanBoskerck has also been fortunate enough to secure the assistance of Dr. Allen, secretary of the New Jersey Charities Aid Association, in planning the exhibit.

The exhibit is one of great suggestive value to all who are engaged in philanthropic or religious work of any sort and offers an unusually good opportunity to all such, not only to see gathered together the Library's resources on the subject, but to obtain suggestions as to the scope and especial value of books on the divisions of the subject in which they are interested from those who have made a practical study of the subject. The exhibit will be essentially practical, and hence will exclude books on political economy important as these may be for a thorough study of the subject. To any who may wish to go more deeply into the subject, those in charge will be glad to recommend suitable books.

There will be shown books on charity organization, work for boys and girls, friendly visiting, consumers leagues, settlement work, child labor, housing of the poor, lives of philanthropists, stories dealing with social problems, liquor problem, prison reform, Sunday-schools, etc., etc.

On each topic there will be for distribution, to those interested, short lists of books which are considered by Dr. Allen and by Miss VanBoskerck the best on the subject.

The exhibit will be on one day only, Saturday afternoon from 3 until 5:30 and in the evening from 7:30 until 9. There will be no postponement on account of the weather.

All interested in the subject of social reform are very cordially invited to be present.

HIS EXPERIENCES.

Captain Hobson Will Tell Some of Them at Casino Monday Night.

Capt. Richmond Pearson Hobson, U. S. N., will undoubtedly be greeted by a good audience at the Casino Monday night, when in addition to his lecture on "The United States as a Naval Power," he will tell of his experiences at Santiago. His daring deed won for him universal praise. He was for a time the most popular hero of the war. But a kissing episode quickly knocked his pedestal from under him.

It was a very trivial incident, doubtless, with very little foundation of fact, and intertwined with a great amount of perfervid imagination. He has out-lived all this and it is conceeded by all after hearing him, that there will be no further thought of Hobson as a sentimental kisser, but instead, the mention of him will bring to our minds a splendid specimen of physical, mental and moral manhood. Tickets and reserved seats on sale at Armstrong's pharmacy.

SONG SERVICE FOR BOYS.

Series of Meetings to be Held at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday Mornings.

The religious work committee of the boys' department, of the Y. M. C. A. planned to hold a series of song services Saturday morning at 9:15 o'clock. The musical club will furnish instrumental music and short addresses will be given by prominent men.

Tomorrow Rev. C. L. Goodrich will talk to the boys. All boys are invited to attend whether members of the department or not.

Clerks Gave Reception.

The Retail Clerks' Asrociation gave its second reception and dance in the Casino. It proved equally enjoyable as its predrocessor.

HAS JUST BEGUN TO ROLL

SILAS D. DRAKE TELLS OF THE BALL OF PROSPERITY.

It Has Visited Dewey Park and Lincoln As Well As Plainfield.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—In your issue of Saturday was information that must have made the hearts of your thousands of readers glad. Every one interested in the material advancement of the Greater Plainfield was encouraged beyond measure. I do not believe there is a city of the size of Plainfield in the United States that can show up such an industrial boom. The article is bound to attract capitalists, mechanics and home-seekers, all of which will tend to make a substantial addition to the Greater Plainfield.

While the city of Plainfield proper is making such headway, it must be remembered that great enterprises are being advanced west of Dunellen, Garrigue's large factory at Dewey Park, and the fact that the Aluminum Plate Works are to erect $150,000 worth of buildings at Dewey Park at once. Negotiations are now pending to locate another large foundry, 400 feet long, at Dewey Park. The new Lincoln Chamois and Leather factory is nearing completion at Lincoln. The Lincoln Steel Works are building an extension, 200 feet long, at their already extensive plant. The Lincoln Water Proof Cloth Company is erecting another large factory and the large piano factory west of Lincoln are all enterprises outside of your city and yet mean much to Plainfield's merchants and business interests, and while for the past six years I have played an important part as pioneer in breaking through barriers in this undeveloped section, I can now see the fruits of my judgment of five years ago in launching the movement.

It makes my heart glad to see these vast enterprises taking such giant strides and anything that attracts manufacturers who employ their capital to build factories and employ skilled and unskilled mechanics and laboring men, are benefactors. In addition these movements mean much to material men, financial institutions, merchants and store keepers in general. I believe that the ball of improvements has just begun to roll and it has assumed such vast proportions that it will be encouragement to others. I congratulate The Press for giving the article in Saturday's issue and believe it will be of great benefit to the Greater Plainfield at large.

Yours truly,
Silas Dewey Drake.

Lincoln, Nov. 17, 1902.

WHAT OTHERS SAY.

Clippings From Other Newspapers Which May be of Interest to Plainfield and Its Citizens.

New Jersey has been getting along very well with twenty-one counties for a long time, and now a number of Long Branch residents think the time has come for the partition of Monmouth into two counties, with the shore resorts composing the eastern county. Whether Freehold and the other interior hamlets will be willing to let Long Branch go without a struggle is a question. If the problem comes up at the next session of the Legislature there will be warm talk on both sides.

One of the points in favor of a State Senate of twenty-one members is that the uneven number operates against a deadlock in that important branch of the Legislature. An additional county would mean an additional senator.—Jersey City Journal.

A Thanksgiving Dinner.

Heavy eating is usually the first cause of indigestion. Repeated attacks inflame the mucous membranes lining the stomach, exposes the nerves of the stomach, producing a swelling after eating, heartburn, headache, sour risings and finally catarrh of the stomach. Kodol relieves the inflammation, protects the nerves and cures catarrh. Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia, all stomach troubles by cleansing and sweetening the glands of the stomach. L. W. Randolph.

A Few Interesting Items Concerning Greater Plainfield's Merchants

Campbell, of West Front street, is the centre of attraction for the best kind of confection, absolutely home-made and of the purest materials.

If you are having trouble with the milk you get it will be to your advantage to drop a postal to Wm. Lindsay & Son, of Mountain avenue. Your troubles will cease for you will be sure of getting the best milk produced.

The New York Painting and Decorating Company has established a reputation for doing fine work at the most reasonable prices. This company is busy all the time, but will find time to do work for you if you want a first-class job.

Just compare the meat and prices of J. W. VanSickle with those of other dealers and see if the comparison isn't in his favor. He makes a specialty of nothing but the best cuts of beef, veal and lamb while his sausage is the best made in the State.

Warm days and cool nights are generally the factors responsible for the prevalance of heavy colds. This season has been especially that way but there is no danger if Nagles' cough remedy is used. It is guaranteed to be a sure cure.

It will soon be time to remove your furs from the trunks for winter use. The styles have changed and you may think you want a new fur coat or wrap but S. Hirsch, of 432 Watchung avenue, has made a specialty of fixing over furs and can make the old furs look like new.

W. W. Warnock, the West Front street baker, is now booking his orders for Thanksgiving pumpkin and mince pies, of the kind that made mother famous. There's no need of worrying and fretting over this end of the dinner when Warnock's pies enjoy such a high standing.

The name of "Brower" on the card attached to a bouquet or floral piece means more than merely the name of a firm. It means that if you want flowers that are as fresh as those picked in the front garden you must get them from Brower's, New York. Orders may be left at 127 East Fifth street.

Mother's potato salad was always just right but it took so long to make it. At Barnes', the Park avenue grocery, potato salad made from the recipe in mother's cookbook may be bought in great or small quantities and it tastes just right, too. At Barnes' may always be found the best home made crullers, baked beans, smoked pork loins, kippered Salmon, bologna and head cheese.

THEATRICAL.

The Academy of Music, New York, has been crowded to the extreme limit at every performance since the opening night of "The Ninety and Nine," and this state of things, judging from the present indications, is bound to continue for some months to come. No drama produced on the Metropolitan stage has made the instant and impressive hit achieved by this new play by Ramsay Morris. Aside from its marvellously dramatic effects; it's clean, wholesome and absorbing story, with its delightful vein of genuine religious sentiment, has won the public unmistakably. As to the now famous fire scene with a real locomotive and cars tearing madly through a blazing forest on a rescue trip, no previous sensation on either the foreign or American stage can begin to compare with it for realism and daring. It throws the audience into a panic of excitement, bringing men and women to their feet in wild enthusiasm, and makes the Academy ring with hurrahs and bravos. The Metropolitan critics are unanimous in declaring that this marvelous production leaves far behind it all competitors in the field of melodrama.

Storm Sewer Completed.

The storm sewer work which has been in progress on Farragut avenue under the direction of Street Commissioner Gavett's men, is completed and in the future there will be no difficulty in carrying off surface water. The sewer, which is a small one, leads to the brook.

One Minute Cough Cure

Is the only harmless cough cure that gives quick relief. Cures coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, pneumonia, asthma, lagrippe and all throat, chest and lung troubles. I got soaked by rain, says Gertrude E. Fenner, Muncie, Ind., and contracted a severe cold and cough. I failed rapidly; lost 48 lbs. My druggist recommended One Minute Cough Cure. The first bottle brought relief; several cured me. I am back to my old weight, 148 lbs. One Minute Cough Cure cuts the phlegm, relieves the cough at once, draws out inflammation, cures croup. TEA TABLE TALK.

Short Sketches That Are Not Always News, But Just as Interesting.

While nearly every resident of Plainfield is aware that most owners of watches keep them set by the steam fire gong, the fact is never more apparent than amid a large gathering. This was particularly the case a few days ago during a hearing in the city court when over 100 spectators were in attendance. The whistle sounded for 5 o'clock and immediately a rustling and snapping of watch cases followed that prevented a witness's testimony from being heard. The operation was not confined to spectators alone but many of those directly connected with the hearing paused long enough to see how their timepieces stood. It was estimated by a lawyer afterward that seventy-five per cent. of the people in the building did the same. The remaining twenty-five per cent., he guessed, didn't own a watch.

His subject Sunday evening will be "A Noble Morality" and all are invited to listen to this vigorous preacher.

MINERS SHORT LIVED

Physicians So Testify Before Arbitration Board.

DR. ROBERTS CROSS EXAMINED.

Reading of Extracts From Book Written by Witness Describing Violence During Strike Amuses the Operators' Counsel.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 21.—The economic and sociological features of the anthracite coal industry and the effect employment in and about the mines has upon the health of the mine workers were the principal subjects brought before the arbitration commission yesterday by the attorneys of each side to the controversy. While there was an entire absence of oratory and brilliant examination, which marked the proceedings during the last four days, the cross examination nevertheless closely held the attention of the commissioners, and they gained much information on the several features touched upon by witnesses.

The afternoon session was particularly interesting because it brought out much expert testimony on the question of the health of the mine workers. Three physicians who have practiced in Scranton or Wilkesbarre took the stand for the miners and in substance testified that the occupation of a mine worker was "very unhealthy" and shortened his life. One physician, Dr. Frank P. Lennahan of Wilkesbarre, who says he has had a long experience among mine workers, testified that fully 99 per cent of the men who work in the mines are anæmic. Their health is impoverished, and their general condition is below par, thus decreasing their earning powers. The principal ills suffered by the miners, the physicians said, were the miner's asthma, rheumatism, lumbago and sciatica. The miner's asthma comes from coal dust, powder smoke and vitiated air. Dr. John O'Malley of Scranton said that at post mortems he had seen miners' lungs as black as anthracite itself, and Dr. Lennahan testified he had personal knowledge of a man coughing up coal dust nine years after he left the mines. He said he had information that a man had coughed up coal dust fifteen years after he had left the mines. It was also stated that 90 per cent of miners who reach the age of fifty years are afflicted with some form of rheumatism.

The cross examination of the Rev. Dr. Peter Roberts, D. D., of Mahanoy City, Pa., who has studied the anthracite coal industry and written a book on the subject, ended, and he left the witness stand shortly after the noon recess. He began his testimony Wednesday. Copious extracts from his book were read and placed on record. Ex-Congressman Simon P. Wolverton, counsel for the Reading company, read much of the matter pertaining to violence in the 1900 strike and also read articles written by Dr. Roberts during the progress of the late contest in which he described in strong language the acts of violence, intimidation and boycotting committed during that suspension. His articles spoke of some of these acts as "brutal outrages," and he also branded the union's action in calling out the steam men in June as "foolhardy." In explaining his articles Dr. Roberts said that he did not wish to infer that the organization was responsible for all the lawlessness committed. The doctor said that newspaper accounts exaggerated the amount of lawlessness in the coal regions, but Mr. Wolverton's reading of Dr. Roberts' description of serious acts of violence and boycotting afforded much amusement for the attorneys for the coal companies.

Mutiny on the Isla de Luzon.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The Isla de Luzon, one of the Spanish gunboats captured at Manila by Admiral Dewey, is en route to New York, with forty-eight of her men in irons. The vessel, which has been doing guard duty in the Philippines for about three years, started recently for New York, proceeding from Manila via Singapore. Advices received at the war department indicate that on the trip to Singapore some of the machinery on the boat shipped badly, creating a panic among the crew and causing a substantial mutiny.

American Girl Killed In Paris.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—Helen Gore, said to be an American, was killed by a revolver shot in an apartment where she lived with Jean de Rydzenski, an actor of the Imperial theater of St. Petersburg. De Rydzenski at first said Miss Gore committed suicide, but subsequently he declared the revolver was discharged accidentally. Consul General Gowdy is personally investigating the death of Miss Gore, who was completing her musical education here and resided in the fashionable quarter of Passy.

Carrie Nation Creates a Sensation at the Horse Show.

AN EVENT NOT ON THE PROGRAMME

The Kansas "Joint" Smasher Tells Fashionably Attired Ladies They Ought to Be Ashamed of Themselves—Awards of the Day.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Mrs. Carrie Nation, the Kansas "joint" smasher, attended the horse show in Madison Square Garden yesterday afternoon. She had occupied her seat but a short time when her gaze suddenly became fixed on the box where some of the Vanderbilt family were sitting. She was seen to study her programme and then descend to the promenade.

Stationing herself in front of the box, where the occupants could not see her, she began delivering a long tirade on the evils of overdress. In the box were seated Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Mr. Reginald Vanderbilt and his fiancee, Miss Neilson. Mr. Alfred G. Vanderbilt was leaning against the rail of the promenade and did not see Mrs. Nation approach.

"You ought to be ashamed of yourselves," the woman screamed. "You ought to be ashamed to wear such disgraceful clothes. Take them off; take them off at once and attire yourselves more modestly."

Then she stopped to take breath. Mrs. Nation was red in the face and gesticulated her remarks by eccentric wavings and jerkings of her arms.

At this juncture Alfred Vanderbilt left his position at the rail and came over to where Mrs. Nation was standing, wiping her forehead with a handkerchief. He whispered something in her ear and gently pushed her away.

Mrs. Nation's outburst had attracted a considerable number of people, and the occupants of the Vanderbilt box were apparently very much embarrassed.

Championships in various classes were awarded at the horse show yesterday. The blue ribbon for three-year-old hackney stallions was carried off by imported Gribthorpe Playmate, owned by Robert Beith of Bawmanville, Ont., a member of the Canadian parliament. Gribthorpe Playmate won two firsts and the challenge cup. For the championship his chief competitor was Adair II., who won the challenge cup last year, when he was owned by Mr. Beith. Now he is the property of Mitchell Harrison of Philadelphia and was forced to take second place.

The American Coaching club's cup, one of the most coveted trophies at the show, went to Dr. John L. Wentz of Scranton, Pa., whose four-in-hand was adjudged the best at the show. Four-in-hands in this event also were shown by the Vanderbilt brothers, J. Hobart Moore of Chicago and William H. Moore.

A very difficult event over the fences was won by Myopia, owned by George Pepper of Canada. The contestants had to go over six fences, two of which were six feet high.

J. Hobart Moore of Chicago carried off first prize in the class for pairs of horses shown before a victoria with his spanking team Burlingham and Viceroy, while Joseph E. Widener of Philadelphia took second and Alfred G. Vanderbilt third.

The Breeders' Challenge cup for hackneys in harness went to Frederick C. Stevens of Attica, N. Y., who showed Cyrena. The cup becomes the property of Mr. Stevens, as his entry has won it twice.

Vote to Stop Boycott.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 21.—The machinery builders' section of the trades assembly, representing at least two-thirds of the local trades union men, at a meeting here by a practically unanimous vote decided that the assembly at its next meeting should raise the boycott against the Schenectady Railway company. The machinery builders' section includes thirty-one unions and involves every iron trades union in the city, having within its membership every man employed in the General Electric and American Locomotive works. There are sixty-one unions in the trades assembly, and this action by a majority practically guarantees that the boycott will be declared off next Wednesday night. The Typographical union also met and condemned the boycott.

Milwaukee Story Doubted.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—A dispatch from Milwaukee, Wis., says that Miss Bella Brown of that city had fallen heir to $10,000,000 through the death of a great-uncle named Leo Lawrence of New York city. The matter was referred to Leo C. Lawrence, living at 233 West Eighty-third street, this city. Mr. Lawrence, who is a man of wide business relations, said that he would surely have known of it had there been a namesake of his of such wealth as the Milwaukee dispatch mentions, but that he had never heard of such a person.

Eight Danish Seamen Drowned.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The Danish steamer Knud II., Captain Hanssen, from Copenhagen, and the British steamer Swaledale, from Hamburg, collided at the mouth of the Tyne. The Knud II. foundered immediately, and the master and seven of her crew were drowned.

Three Children Burned In Home.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Nov. 21.—The house of a colored man named Evans, near Greenville, N. C., has been burned, and Evans' three children, who were left alone, perished in the flames.

JUSSERAND LIKES US

M. Cambon's Successor Interviewed In Paris.

DUE IN WASHINGTON AT EARLY DATE

New French Ambassador Admires Roosevelt's Works and Is Enthusiastic For St. Louis Exposition.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—Ambassador Jusserand, who has just arrived here from Copenhagen on his first visit to Paris since his appointment to the Washington post, comes to confer with Foreign Minister Delcasse in order to receive instructions and to arrange for the departure of himself and family for Washington, where he expects to arrive early in the new year.

At his apartments in the Avenue Marceau he talked interestingly on American men and American affairs.

"Although I have never lived in the United States," said the ambassador, "I feel fairly well acquainted with that country, as my diplomatic life has brought me into contact with many Americans, and I have formed many lasting American friendships."

He recalled that while secretary to the French embassy in London he formed the acquaintance of the former American ministers to London, Lowell, Phelps and R. T. Lincoln. He said that he had kept up his interest in American affairs more recently by reading American books, studying the American system and by a constant correspondence with a number of well known Americans, two of whom belong to the faculty of Columbia university.

He referred to the growing importance of America in the world's affairs, and it was noticeable that throughout Europe the position of the United States as a new world power was everywhere recognized.

Concerning the Panama canal, the ambassador said the question had no official status, but that he would continue the friendly efforts of M. Cambon on behalf of the company. He added that the most powerful advocate for the Panama route was the volcanoes of Guatemala and Nicaragua, which kept speaking in tones of thunder in favor of Panama.

The ambassador spoke of the pleasure with which he had read Roosevelt's strenuous philosophy and his ranch tales. These works were first brought to his attention during a sojourn at the royal palace near Copenhagen, where Princess Marie was found perusing Roosevelt's books and declared them to be most delightful. M. Jusserand desires to see the new French embassy erected in Washington by the time of the St. Louis exposition, and he has already conferred with the officials in charge of the construction of the building. It was at first believed that no appropriation would be made owing to the complications regarding the new French embassy in Vienna, but the chamber is now so cordial in its feelings toward America that there is little doubt that the appropriation will be granted. It is expected that the sum granted will be $600,000, which the ambassador considers will be sufficient to erect a magnificent structure typical of French art and taste.

So Called Friends Hinder Missions.

BOSTON, Nov. 21.—At the closing session of the Epworth league Bishop David H. Moore, D. D., who has been in charge of Methodist churches in China, Korea and Japan, spoke on "The Outlook For Christianity In Eastern Asia." "The great greed, lust and cruelty of the commercial and political representatives of so called Christian nations," he said, "have done much to make missionary work difficult and to bring on the explosion that imperiled the life of many foreigners in China. Misguided as was the Boxer movement and atrocious as were the crimes it instigated and covered, at bottom it was patriotic and did more to inspire the segregated provinces of China with a national spirit than anything in the history of the empire."

To Grind Only Canadian Wheat.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 21.—The Washburn-Crosby Milling company of Minneapolis has bonded its Humboldt mill for an indefinite period to grind nothing but Canadian wheat. The bond demanded by the customs officials yesterday is for $50,000. According to the terms of the bond, the Humboldt mill will have continually within its walls government storekeepers, who will see that only Canadian grain is used. The grain will be delivered to the mill in cars direct from Canada, which will be in charge of the custom house men. The entire product of the mill will be loaded into bonded cars and will be taken directly east for shipment entire to Liverpool.

CAUSE FOR THANKFULNESS.

At the near approach of Thanksgiving Day, when causes for gratitude naturally suggest themselves as appropriate to the season, the thoughtful individual must regard the weather of this autumn an occasion for special thankfulness. If ever there was a season when the wind was tempered to the shorn lamb, surely this is one. When the coal strike filled the minds of prudent householders with natural alarm, the phenomenally warm weather week after week made the situation much more endurable. Now that the strike is ended, the scarcity of coal in many sections of the country and the suffering that cold weather must have entailed are considerations that ought to cause thankfulness for the rare warm days that have continued during October and the major part of Novemer.

If it should please heaven to send a mild winter, many fears would be mitigated and many hearts throb with grateful recognition of the tempered wind that meets the inability to face other and more severe conditions.

One may expect with reasonable certainty a likely howl from the direction of New Brunswick at the suggestion of North Plainfield of emptying its sewage into the Raritan river. Because Somerville and Bound Brook have been using the Raritan as a trunk sewer for many years, there has been no particular objection. Any addition to the collection of filth which flows through the county seat is not going to be tolerated by the people of New Brunswick. If North Plainfield contemplates running to tide water it will have to extend its sewer well below New Brunswick. Even the very suggestion of it is going to start a hue and cry which may result unpleasantly for both Somerville and Bound Brook.

The Daily Press' class in proportion is struggling with the following problem: Last week, the Pennsylvania Railroad advanced the wages of its employes at an added expense to itself of $85,000,000 per annum. Then it announced an increase of freight rates which will add a further revenue of $10,000,000 yearly. Now the question is, how much generosity has been shown by the railroad?

A man will seriously object if his wife asks him to get up an hour earlier in the morning to chop some kindling wood. That is work. A man will get up two hours earlier in the morning and shoulder a heavy gun and tramp five miles after a rabbit and an English sparrow and enjoy himself. That is sport. Why is it?

A dispatch in the New York Sun recently started off with the following opening sentence: "A cannon ball fired in the war of 1812 broke the leg of a man, yesterday." After due and careful consideration we have decided the powder for the charge was made in Philadelphia.

DUNELLEN.

Burglars obtained entrance into the residence of Lewis Schneider, of Front street, Thursday night but departed without any booty. Entrance was made through a lower window. After ransacking the lower rooms and finding no money, which they were evidently after, they went up stairs. They went in Miss Schneider's bed room but took nothing there While in the upper floor they were seen by Miss Eva Schneider. She gave the alarm but the burglars were evidently familiar with the place and escaped through a window. There were three of them and, although they showed such familarity with the house as proved them to be from around here, they were unrecognized. If they had gone into another room they could have secured considerable money as the Misses Eva and Mamie Schneider had been selling tickets for the Presbyterian fair and the money was laid out on a table. The men also tried to gain entrance at several other houses but in each instance were scared away.

LYNCHING IN INDIANA.

Negro Assaulter Taken From Officers and Hanged.

SULLIVAN, Ind., Nov. 21.—James Moore, the Kentucky negro who criminally assaulted Mrs. Mary Davis of Sullivan county and Mrs. John Lemon of Knox county on Tuesday last, was hanged to a telegraph pole one mile east of John Lemon's farm at 8 o'clock last night by a mob.

Moore was captured at Lawrenceville, Ill., late in the day after a battle with the town marshal, during which the negro was shot three times and severely wounded. He was then taken to Robinson, Ill., for safe keeping. The negro was brought to Sullivan in a wagon by the sheriff and his deputies for further identification. A mob of forty or fifty farmers heavily armed took the prisoner from the officers. The negro was taken to the homes of both his victims and by them was identified. From the home of Mrs. Lemon, ten miles east of here, the crowd started back to Sullivan with the prisoner, but one mile east of the Lemon farm a rope was thrown over the arm of a telegraph pole, and the negro was hung.

The governor had ordered out the Vincennes militia company to protect the negro, but his instructions were received too late.

After hanging the negro the mob quietly dispersed. It was composed mostly of farmers, but was largely augmented by citizens of Sullivan, Oaktown and other towns of this county.

FIGHT WITH SOCIALISM.

Labor Federation Convention Has a Long Struggle.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 21.—The socialists came within 400 votes of securing control of the convention of the American Federation of Labor. The struggle lasted almost the entire day, and many able speeches were made on both sides, notably those of D. A. Hayes, James Duncan and President Gompers against the socialists and Victor Berger, Max Hayes and W. B. Wilson of the United Mine Workers in behalf of the resolution introduced by Delegate Berger and amended by Delegate Wilson in a manner acceptable to Berger.

The debate lasted until 6 o'clock in the evening, when a roll call showed 4,744 votes against the amendment of Mr. Wilson and 4,344 in favor of it. The miners voted solidly in favor of the amendment. No business was transacted in the convention during the day other than that of the debate and the report of the committee which investigated the Gompers-Shaffer trouble.

President Gompers was completely exonerated of the charges of infidelity to the principles of trades unionism, said to have been made by Theodore J. Shaffer, president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

Yale Students Do Up Ticket Sharps.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 21.—A demonstration the like of which has never been witnessed in this city before occurred last night when Yale students made an attack on every ticket speculator who could be found in the city and relieved them of every ticket for the Yale-Harvard football game in their possession. The speculators were given the regulation price, $2, for every ticket taken. In several instances when the ticket dealers remonstrated they were roughly handled. Some of the speculators claim that they were robbed, but it is believed that the students were very careful to see that $2 was given for every ticket taken. The exorbitant prices demanded by speculators for tickets in their possession has aroused the student body, and they decided to take the matter into their own hands.

A New Fuel For Us.

BERLIN, Nov. 21.—The manufacturers of machinery for compressing coal waste and lignite into the fuel called "briquettes," of which enormous quantities are used in Germany, have organized a syndicate for promoting the export of this machinery to the United States and have sent an engineer to America to explain to mine owners how to make estimates of the costs of plants and describe the processes of manufacture. The syndicate is importing samples of American coal waste and lignite to analyze them and test the machines with them.

Locomotive Fireman Killed.

FRANKLINVILLE, N. Y., Nov. 21.—A passenger train on the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg railroad running south ran into a freight train at Summit Station. Fireman Dye of the passenger engine was killed, and Engineer Brown and one passenger were slightly injured. The freight train ran into a siding to allow the passenger train to pass. The two engines on the freight train were unable to stop in time and ran on the main line again just as the passenger train came along at the rate of thirty miles an hour.

Pistols For Dueling Opposed.

BERLIN, Nov. 21.—Sixty-seven students' societies, with a membership of 2,000, from the Berlin university, the Technical institute and other institutions in this city, held a great meeting last evening in the Philharmonic hall against pistol duels between students and officers. The pistol was denounced as a weapon for American trappers, and the sword was declared to be preferable, it standing upon a higher moral plane and being a more chivalrous weapon.

Florida Hotel Burned.

LIVE OAK, Fla., Nov. 21.—News has been received here that the main building of the large Suwanee Springs hotel was destroyed by fire yesterday. No particulars have been received further than that no lives were lost. The structure was a large tourist hotel and well known. The loss is not stated, but probably will reach $50,000.

WOMEN IN BUSINESS

"EVERY man has more respect for a woman, even his own wife, if he knows she has financial ability and can make her own way and more, too, in the world without depending on anybody. The true way to settle the woman question is for women to become financially independent. Money talks." Thus, too, talks Mrs. Lucia E. Blount of Washington, whose husband says she is a shrewder and more successful investor of money than he himself is, which is saying much. But Mrs. Blount is living her own teaching. She might be merely a fashionable society woman. Instead of that she is studying out practically the subject of profitable business investments for women, with a view to helping her sex achieve the financial independence she preaches. Mrs. Blount's inclinations lead her to mining investments, in which thousands of women have swamped their all. But this business woman does not listen to the persuasions of honey tongued mining promoters, half of whom ought to be hanged, if anybody ought, for the way in which they swindle women. Mrs. Blount herself goes in person to the exploited mine and examines it thoroughly before risking money on its chances of paying.

Mrs. Blount quotes with zest the example of Miss Mary Garrett, who gave a vast sum to Johns Hopkins university on condition that women should be admitted. And this shrewd benefactor added the proviso, "If ever in future there comes a time when it is deemed expedient to close Johns Hopkins against women, then this money shall be returned to the donor or her heirs." Johns Hopkins' doors will not be closed to women. Mrs. Blount declares it to be now the duty of rich women when they make large investments in any company or corporation to make the legal proviso that women shall always be on the directing board of such organizations.

Women are succeeding wonderfully in business enterprises of all kinds. They prosper as practical experts in the mining industry. That is a pleasant true story of the woman in Arizona who prospected her own claim. Her husband earned barely enough, working early and late, to support the large family, and the wife did the housework for them all. But day by day in the brief intervals she could snatch from cooking and baby tending she went to her claim near their cabin and worked with pick, shovel and drill, doing everything, even to the dynamite blasting, with her own hands. Not for months only, but years, this dauntless woman kept to her task till she thoroughly prospected her claim. Not long ago she struck a silver vein that assayed $3,000 to the ton. She still works her mine, but now as superintendent, with a squad of men doing the manual labor.

THE WOMAN MINER.

It is now time for women to begin to establish industrial enterprises of their own and cease so generally working under others for small wages. Where they branch out for themselves intelligently and cautiously they almost invariably succeed. In New York city Miss May Hopkins, though only twenty-two years old, is at the head of a highly prosperous educational agency, which she established and built up entirely herself. She provides teachers for places where they are needed.

There, too, is Mrs. Coggin of the Siskiyou country, one of the leading lumber operators of the Pacific coast. Her husband, who began the enterprise, died before his plans were finished. His wife, who had been his comrade and adviser throughout, continued them and proved herself even more capable than he had been. At the coming St. Louis fair will be exhibited some marvelously beautiful art ironwork from the factory of Mrs. Ames-Lyle, ironmaster of Thornham, England. Plucky, persevering women win in business all along the line.

THE CARUTHERS AFFAIR

By WILL N. HARBEN.

COPYRIGHT 1898 BY A. N. KELLOGG NEWSPAPER CO.

In the big cellars below, they found, directly under the trap Kola had arranged, the yawning opening of a deep pit.

"An awful hole," said Hendricks, as he turned away. He pointed to some large steel vessels and two large copper cylinders such as are used for making lime light in the theaters.

"That's where he cremated the body section by section," he said. "He thought, as most murderers do, that his secret was well guarded."

They searched through all the rooms of the cellar, and then Hendricks stopped.

"We are losing time," he grunted, in disappointment. "I believe Kola told the truth about his being the only one who knows the secret of Gielow's hiding-place. I am also sure that Gielow is somewhere under ground. We have seen one cavern, and it is not unlikely that there are others. It has long been believed that they are under this hill. Can't you think of some plan to wring the truth from that imp?"

They had paused before the door of a little room where a dim light shone over the transom. Lampkin tried the latch, and, finding the door unlocked, he pushed it open. The room had shelves on all three of its walls, and these shelves were well filled with all sorts of bottles.

"His laboratory," said Lampkin. "No, I cannot tell you what to do. Ah! I have an idea."

The doctor took down a bottle and read the label and then uncorked it and applied it to his nose.

"Ether," he said. "This bottle reminds me of an experiment I once saw performed at a medical college. A thief was made to confess under the influence of ether. In the first stages of anaesthesia a subject almost invariably becomes talkative and will talk about exactly what he desires most to keep back."

"Bring it upstairs, for the love of mercy," cried the detective. "It can't do any harm."

As they entered the reception-room Kola's questioning glance became fixed on the bottle in the doctor's hand.

"Huh!" he grunted, "you need not try to give me that. I won't take it."

"Find me a towel, Hendricks," was all the doctor said. He spoke like a determined man who is thoroughly angry.

Hendricks darted into a bathroom near by and returned with the required article.

"Now lay his lordship on the floor," the doctor said.

Kola wriggled like an eel, but, with Hendricks at his head and Sergt. Denham's determined hands at his feet, they soon had him laid out. Dr. Lampkin folded the towel into the shape of a funnel and saturated it with the fluid from the bottle. Then he started to put it over Kola's mouth and nose.

"Hold on, give him one more chance," ordered Hendricks. "Where is Gielow, Kola?"

The only answer the Indian made was to close his lips tightly.

"The devil is trying to hold his breath!" cried Lampkin. "I'll show him a trick that will beat that. I can make him take it."

And, holding the towel over Kola's nose with his left hand, he began to punch him violently in the chest. This proceeding made the Indian gasp for breath, and forced him to take deep draughts of the ether.

"Good, good!" approved Hendricks, as Kola's body began to grow limp. "Give him some more!"

"Oh, no, he must not be too deeply under it," objected Lampkin. "He is just right now. Let him loose. I'll manage him as easily as a rowboat downstream. Now, if he will only talk!"

Kola's face was bloodless. For a moment there was no sound inside or outside of the house. Lampkin raised the towel a little, for the lips of the Indian were moving.

A harsh laugh broke from the death-like face.

"It's the wisdom of the east," chuckled Kola. "I'll never be suspected, and when Hendricks is out of the way, I shall be free. Yes, free, and rich, and as powerful as a king."

There he paused. Lampkin held up his hand to warn the others not to speak, and in a distinct voice said:

"But Gielow—will he be found?"

"Never!" burst impulsively from Kola's lips. "No one else knows the secret door. No one would think of the head of the dragon."

The eyes of Hendricks and the doctor met. Hendricks' flashed knowingly, and he grunted as he turned and ran into the hall. A moment later Lampkin followed, finding the detective examining the walnut dragon at the foot of the stairs.

"I believe on my life that the head of the thing unscrews," Hendricks exclaimed, excitedly. "See where it has been rubbed by use. By Jove, I have it!"

Grasping the head in his hands, Hendricks gave it a powerful wrench, and it began to turn. In a moment it came off, and they saw, protruding from a hollow tube in the neck of the dragon, a steel rod with a ring on its end. Hendricks tried to push the rod downward, but it resisted his efforts. Then, ascending the steps till he was above the ring, he pulled it steadily upward. A little bell inside the dragon rang. This was followed by a creaking sound under the hall floor, and a tall gilt-framed plate-glass mirror in the brick wall near by leaned outward on one side. Running to it, Lampkin pulled it out and found that it turned on hidden hinges. And behind the mirror was revealed a doorway and a narrow flight of stairs leading downward into the darkness. There was a lantern on the first step, and Hendricks lighted it, and holding it above his head he hurried down the stairs. At first the steps were of wood, but deeper down they were of unhewn stone.

Perhaps 40 feet from the surface of the earth, they found themselves in a long, narrow cavern, which wound about like a serpent's trail. And when they had gone perhaps 200 yards from their starting point they found themselves stopped by a brick wall in which was a rusty iron door. The door was locked, but a bunch of keys hung on a hook near by.

"We have found him," said Lampkin.

Hendricks nodded as he began to try the keys in the lock. After many failures, the door was finally opened, and in the combined light of the lantern and a streak of daylight that came in at a tiny crack in the rock, they saw crouching in a corner, a white-faced creature with walling eyes and dishevelled hair.

"Who is it?" came from his lips in a rasping whisper.

"Friends," said Hendricks.

Gielow tried to rise, but fell backward.

"In God's name—water!" he gasped

"Here, drink this first," said Lampkin kneeling and drawing out from his pocket a flask of brandy. Gielow tried to take the bottle in his hands, but his fingers were too stiff from cold. Dr. Lampkin placed the bottle to his lips, and Gielow drank.

"Oh, thank God!" he said. "Is it true, are you friends?"

"This is Mr. Minard Hendricks," answered Lampkin, with a glance at the holder of the lantern, "and Miss Huntington is outside in a carriage waiting to take you home."

"Oh, no, really?" cried the prisoner, and then he lowered his head to his knees and laughed like a happy child. "It seems like years since I came here."

He tried again to rise, but Lampkin stopped him.

"You must first drink some of this liquid food," he said.

MESSAGE ACROSS ATLANTIC.

Marconi Relates Success of His Latest Wireless Experiments.

SYDNEY, N. S., Nov. 21.—From Signor Marconi is learned the marvelous result of the experiments with wireless telegraphy which have culminated in the flashing across the Atlantic ocean of a coherent message.

This message was complete and distinct, and it was communicated to the Carlo Alberto, the Italian warship lent by the government to Signor Marconi.

The previous efforts to communicate across the ocean resulted in the signaling of the letter "S" on June 12 last. There was trouble, however, at that time in recording the signal, and the "S" was so very indistinct that the experiment was not considered entirely successful.

Since that time Marconi has devoted all his time and energy to the effort to flash a complete message across the 3,000 miles of the Atlantic so that it can be readily discernible.

He has succeeded in sending a short phrase from his wireless station at Poldhu, in Cornwall, England, to Table head, near here, and the message was readily deciphered on board the Carlo Alberto.

Signor Marconi is not yet fully satisfied with the results thus far attained. He is completely prostrated from his labors on board the Carlo Alberto and since his arrival here. He has made no formal statement as yet about this greatest of his triumphs, but has hopes that in the course of a very few days he will be able to announce he can send from Cornwall a regular commercial message of from five to ten words.

He cannot send from this side as yet because the apparatus needs considerable improvement to make it possible to forward such a message.

New Party In the Philippines.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The Democratic party is the latest addition to the political organizations in the Philippines, according to advices received at the war department. Prominent Filipinos have identified themselves with the party, among them General Lukban, who organized and led the insurgents on the island of Samar and who was in command of the insurgents at the time of the Balangiga massacre. The new party will demand a modification of the present administration in the Philippines so as to afford a greater degree of self government, the immediate establishment of two legislative chambers, both chambers to be elected in accordance with the suffrage laws as they obtain in this country, and that the acts passed by the two chambers shall become laws without further action.

Nelson Raced Against Horses.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 21.—Joe Nelson of Newark, N. J., rode ten miles at the fair ground track on a bicycle against ten horses running in relay. Nelson was motor paced. The horses relieved each other in laps of one mile. Owing to a misunderstanding the horses were started to pick up Nelson instead of each other. The bicycle rider thus lost with each horse whatever advantage he had gained over the preceding one. Nelson nevertheless finished first in eight of the ten miles. The horse came in ahead in the first and ninth miles. Nelson's time for the miles consecutively was as follows: 1m. 52s., 1m. 40s., 1m. 28s., 1m. 26s., 1m. 20s., 1m. 35s., 1m. 30s., 1m. 30s., 1m. 24s. and 1m. 30s. This is said to be the fastest time ever made in a similar competition.

Illicit Distilleries Raided.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Nov. 21.—A News and Courier special from Greenville, S. C., says that a record breaking raid has been made by a party of revenue officers and state constables in this county. The officers destroyed six large illicit distilleries, seventy-five fermenters, 8,000 gallons of beer and mash and sixty gallons of low wines. Three of the stills were found in operation, but the moonshiners in charge escaped, being warned by sentinels of the approach of the raiding party. The party was composed of Deputy Collector Adams, Deputy Marshal Putnam, Constables Cooley, Alton and Bell.

Struck on Flimsy Pretext.

ATHENS, O., Nov. 21.—Two hundred miners are on a strike here as the result of the discharge of Mine Motorman Clarence Russell, who instead of reporting for work went rabbit hunting. It is said that the other local committees in the Hocking and Sunday Creek valleys may take up the case.

CONDENSED DISPATCHES.

The Crown Prince Frederick of Saxony broke a leg while hunting.

A fire destroyed a block and a half in Monongahela, Pa.; loss, $125,000.

A. L. Collins, mine manager at Pandora, Colo., has been shot by an assassin.

A Dromore mob stoned Mr. Russell, Irish member of parliament, who is opposed to home rule.

The government has withdrawn 2,300,000 acres in the Thunder mountain mining region, Idaho.

The Ohio supreme court has enjoined Mayor Tom L. Johnson from reorganizing the Cleveland police force.

The Pardee collieries near Hazleton, Pa., have resumed, the strikers having agreed not to molest the nonunion men.

Martial law has been repealed in the Transvaal and Orange Free State, though the government reserves the right to reimpose the military rule if necessary.

The Southern Pacific depot and ferry slip at the end of the Alameda mole, San Francisco, has been totally destroyed by fire. A large number of passenger coaches were also burned, and it is said that several lives have been lost.

Nagle and Wm. Lynn. After the serving of refreshments, dancing was enjoyed until an early hour this morning.

OPENED FIRE.

But Blank Cartridges Didn't Scare and Shooter Was Badly Beaten.

A local colored man, who has been up before the local police on several occasions for disorderly conduct, caused much excitement last night at a ball which was held in Apgar's Hall, Dunellen, by shooting point blank at a number of colored men who were present. The gun was loaded with blank cartridges.

Instead of causing a stampede as he had planned, several men surrounded him and knocked him down. After receiving a severe thrashing he was put out of the hall. No arrests were made.

NO PROFIT.

Advance in Cost of Hospital Private Rooms is to Meet Actual Expence.

One of the members of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, in speaking of the recent advance in the rate for private rooms at the hospital from $15 to $20, says that when the old price was charged it was done so at a loss to the institution. Now that everything in the line of food is increased in price, it is impossible to continue the use of the rooms at $15 a week.

"This price," the member said, "was about what it would cost a week for a trained nurse, and when her services as well as food is considered, it can readily be understood that the hospital is not making anything."

Cured of Piles After 40 Years.

Mr. C. Haney, of Geneva, Ohio, had the piles for forty years. Doctors and dollars could do him no lasting good. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cured him permanently. Invaluable for cuts, burns, bruises, sprains, lacerations, eczema, tetter, salt rheum, and all other skin diseases. dainty white costumes. Ice cream and cake are also sold here.

A booth draped in green and white is the apron department where fine linen and aprons are to be found displayed. Here Mrs. L. A. Udele, Mrs. J. W. Richardson, Miss Elizabeth Runyon, and Miss Lillian Runyon attend to the wants of the patrons. Adjoining the linen booth is the agricultural booth, the decorations of which are quite novel. Over the front booth is hung on a wire a string of hydrangeas and on the sides are arranged ears of dried corn still hanging to the stalks. Long strings of cranberries lend color to the decorations, the whole making a very attractive display. On the counter are to be found canned goods and home made products which have met with a very ready sale. Those who have charge of this booth are Mrs. T. I. Runyon, Mrs. A. D. Thompson, Mrs. Charles VanWinkle, Miss Carrie Dunham, Mrs. Charlotte Suydam and Mrs. David C. Smalley.

The lilliputian department is the delight of the young people at the fair. Here dolls are displayed at all sorts of household duties including ironing, cooking and entertaining callers. Each doll is very handsomely dressed. Among the attractions at this booth is the little Christmas tree which is one of the main objects of interest at the fair to the children. Mrs. Nelson Runyon presides at this booth and associated with her is Miss Esther Thompson

Hill & Shupp have donated to the fair the use of one of their handsome pianos with "piano player" attachment on which Frederick Hopkins, of Chase & Baker Company, of New York, gives daily recitals.

In the display windows of the store are some very handsome potted plants from the conservatory of Mrs. A. D. Thompson. Here choice flowers and ferns are on sale. Mrs. Thompson presides over this very handsome display. Adjoining this department is the painted china display. All the articles on this counter are hand painted and were done by members of the congregation and their friends. Miss Corey has charge of this display.

The general committee which has charge of the fair and which arranged the decorations for the bazaar are: Mrs. C. W. Tennant, Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson and Mrs. Walter Freeman. The fair was conceived by the women of the congregation assisted by the mebmers of the Christian Endeavor Society. The fair will close Saturday evening.

TABLET BY D. A. R.

To Mark Washington's Headquarters, Near Paterson.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Paterson, Nov. 21—The Daughters of the American Revolution have decided to mark the old Dey House at Lower Preakness, about six miles northwest of Paterson, with a bronze historical tablet. General Washington established his headquarters at the house while operating in northern New Jersey in 1780, and while there entertained Lafayette and the Marquis de Chastellux, who was serving in the army under command of Count Rochambeau.

The Daughters also have a plan to purchase the house and turn it into a historical museum, where may be gathered objects connected with Revolutionary history in New Jersey. This, however, will not be done until the tablet has been placed, probably on July 4, 1903. It will be attended with patriotic ceremony.

Looking for Stolen Horse.

The local police received word early this morning to look out for a stolen rig, headed in this direction, taken from William Acker, of Millington, last night. The horse is described as being a sorrel, sixteen hands high, with splints on the left hind leg. The wagon is a top buggy with red running gear.

PLANS FOR MAKING FIRST-CLASS THEATRE

Proprietor Sherman Means to Put Stillman Music Hall in the Best of Condition.

BELIEVES IT WILL PAY

PLANS TO OPEN WITH MAUDE ADAMS OR OTHER BIG ATTRACTION.

New Entrance, New Seats and New Scenery All to be Installed—Will Probably Start the Alterations Next Week.

It will be good news to the amusement loving people of Plainfield to know that Stillman Music Hall will again be opened. It is the intention of S. F. Sherman, the purchaser, to completely transform the hall into an attractive place and he will spare no pains or expense in carrying out this project. He is convinced that Plainfield can and will support a first-class theatre and he proposes to do his share in giving the city such a place. The plans as originally drawn for the improvement of the hall will be carried out with a few changes. It will be impossible for Mr. Sherman to build a second gallery for this season but this will be done next summer. If this was attempted now it would retard the opening for the hall for the winter season.

As previously stated, the entrance will be through Frank Rowley's drug store, on the west side. It will be made very attractive as it leads to the lobby of the theatre. Inside the theatre there will be large glass mirrors on the side walls and a steel wainscotting will be placed around the side five feet high. At the top of that will be a brass railing and then above that will be the glass mirrors, four feet high, alternating with handsome pictures of special selection.

The hall will be provided with new seats of the latest approved style, and they will be closer together than those now in the hall. There will also be more seats than before. There will be a handsome asbestos curtain and all new scenery. Just as soon as the contract papers changing the ownership of the hall are signed, which will be next Monday, Mr. Sherman's scenic artists will come to Plainfield and start at once the work of painting the new scenery. A large gang of men will also be put to work cleaning the house and installing an entire new up-to-date heating apparatus. There will be no question afterwards as to heating the hall property.

Another very desirable feature will be the rooms for the men and women on the second floor. One will be a waiting room for women and the other a smoking room for the men. Both will be substantially and attractively furnished, affording every convenience. There will be three exits by way of iron stairways and iron doors on each side, thus giving people ample room and accommodation for leaving the house quickly and without any disadvantages.

As previously stated, it is Mr. Sherman's idea to open the hall about the middle of January if possible with Maude Adams. If he cannot get her, he will have an attraction her equal. Mr. Sherman will present only first-class plays and he hopes to get the best people of the city to his theatre if this will draw them there.

WELL PLEASED.

Superintendent Wightman Commends Essays on Recent Lecture.

Superintendent Homer J. Wightman, of the Borough High School, said yesterday that the compositions handed in by the pupils on the lecture recently given before them by A. V. D. Honeyman were all very fine and he was delighted with the result. He said that in all the compositions received he could not off hand pick out the best, and that they were without doubt the best ever received from the pupils of that school.

It is Mr. Wightman's intention to have these lectures given before the classes every two weeks. The next one, which will be given during the second week of December, will be different from the last one as the pupils will be called upon to write a report of the lecture instead of a composition.

SHOT SQUIRREL.

Julius Lusardi Arrested on Charge of Hunting on Duke's Private Grounds—Says He Didn't.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Nov. 22—Julius Lusardi, a weathly fruit dealer in this place, has been placed under arrest by Detective Totten on a charge of having trespassed with a gun on the estate of James B. Duke, the tobacco millionaire. Lusardi is charged with shooting a squirrel in the woods. This is a sacrilege, as Mr. Duke always sees to it that the squirrels are fed. Complaint was by William J. Lawson, the superintendent of the Duke farm.

John Wilson, who accompanied Lusardi, was also placed under arrest. Both men claim they were not on the millionaire cigarette maker's premises, but were shooting on the lowlands near there.

Lusardi and Wilson were both released under heavy bonds to appear before the next Grand Jury.

FOR SCHOOL DECORATIONS

ART EXHIBIT TO RAISE MONEY TO PURCHASE PICTURES.

Exhibit Will be Held in Franklin School Building Four Days Next Week.

Superintendent H. M. Maxson and a committee of teachers have arranged for a display of the famous Horace K. Turner art exhibit in Plainfield next week, for the benefit of the public schools. The exhibit consists of several hundred large carbon photographs and other process reproductions of the world's greatest paintings and most interesting architecture and scenery. The object of the enterprise is first to benefit the pupils by their study of the pictures and second to raise money for purchasing pictures for the school rooms.

All educators recognize the great influence that his surroundings have on the child and the most progressive schools are spending much money in decorating the school rooms and making them beautiful and attractive. In this city, the assembly room in the Irving School has been so beautified with casts and pictures that it is a source of pride and enjoyment to pupils and parents. It is hoped to raise enough to decorate other schools in a similar manner.

The exhibit will be on view Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week in the Franklin School assembly hall and the money received for admission will be used to purchase pictures.

Sentence was suspended on all three.

CHURCH FAIR ENDS TONIGHT

GREAT SUCCESS HAS THIS FAIR MET EFFORTS OF WOMEN.

Park Avenue Baptist Church Affair Has Proved Very Popular—Will Net Goodly Sum.

The fair, which is being conducted in the Rockfellow store at the corner of Park avenue and Fourth street by the women of the Park Avenue Baptist church, will come to a close this evening, when the goods on sale which have not been sold so far will be reduced to the very lowest prices so as to dispose of all that is left unsold.

The patronage at the bazaar has been very generous and the proceeds at the first night were far greater than those in charge had anticipated. The store has been open every morning, afternoon and evening and the place has been very well attended. This evening there will be a special sale of canned goods all of which are home made. A bride doll is on display and if it has not been sold before the close of the fair it will be disposed of in some novel manner.

Through the generosity of Frederick H. Colver, of the Frank Leslie Company, the women have been enabled to sell subscriptions to Frank Leslie's Monthly Magazine for fourteen months and give away one of Leslie's college calenders with the subscription at the regular subscription price.

These subscriptions may be secured at the art booth. The church will realize largely from the fair which has proven to be such a great scuccss, and tonight the women are confident of selling every article in the big store.

JUST AS SUCCESSFUL.

New England Supper at Trinity Reformed Church Came to a Close After Second Night.

The second night of the New Engt land supper given under the auspices of the Young Women's Mission Band, of Trinity Reformed church, was as successful as the first night. The same number of suppers served the first night, 136, was served last evening and by 9 o'clock everything, except the ice cream and cake, was sold out. The young women are very much pleased at the success atttaiend and the liberal patronage given by their friends.

A feature of last evening was the fine music furnished by Charles Suhr, piano, and Kenneth Stuart, violin. From 6:30 until 9 o'clock they rendered an attractive programme of popular music, thereby adding much to the enjoyment. Leonard A. Smith acted as cashier last evening in place of William Pope, who was on the door the first night.

BARN FULL OF HAY BLAZED VERY MERRILY

Conflagration in Barn on Milliken Property, 830 Central Avenue, Last Evening.

THE DAMAGE WAS $1,000

TWO VALUABLE MOOSEHEADS WERE SAVED FROM THE FLAMES.

Telephone Alarm Was Given and a General Alarm From Box No. 36 Soon Followed—Loss of $1,000 Was Covered by Insurance.

Sparks from a burning brush heap set fire to a large barn on the Samuel Milliken property, at 830 Central avenue, early last evening, resulting in a $1,000 conflagration. The structure is two stories in height but the greater part of it was saved as was also a barn on the premises of Fred H. Andrews, less than fifteen feet away. The loss is covered by insurance.

Headquarters was first notified of the blaze by a telephone message from F. H. Andrews and the apparatus was at Eighth street and Park avenue when box No. 36 was pulled. The property is at present occupied by Archibold Henderson, a New York broker, but his horses and carriages are still in the metropolis. The only thing in the barn was a ton of hay and this was mostly consumed. It had to be gone over thoroughly and it was 9:30 before the firemen left the scene.

Before the department arrived, Roy T. Phillips, Jacob Kirkner and Patrolman Saunders did good work in taking out a number of valuable decorations, including two large mooseheads. They had much difficulty removing the latter as they were fastened to the wall with wire.

SURPRISED PROPRIETOR.

Friends Dropped in to See Mr. and Mrs. Fred Nelson at Watchung.

A delightful surprise party was held last evening at the Watchung Hotel when a number of young people from this city and New Market tendered a surprise to the proprietor, and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Nelson. The affair was arranged by William B. Smith who recently fell heir to part of the Fair estate. Dancing was enjoyed during the evening and the music was supplied by Prof. Frazee. Refreshments were served at a late hour. Those who were present included well known people in Dunellen, New Market, and this city, numbering about thirty-five couple.

NOT ENOUGH FUNDS.

Somerset County Freeholders May Have to Delay Road Building.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Nov. 22—The Somerset County Board of Freeholders met with the Middlesex board at New Brunswick Wednesday. The Franklin Park road question was the chief topic discussed. Many citizens along the line urged the construction of the road at once. Both boards are favorable to the road but no action was taken in the matter as the Somerset board fears it will not have sufficient money to make the improvement this year, owing to other work already contracted for.

RESTOCKING LAKES.

Carload of Game Fish for Lake Hopatcong—Greenwood Lake Next.

The State game wardens and inspectors have just deposited in Lake Hopatcong a carload of game fish. For a number of years the supply of game fish in the lake and streams around Lake Hopatcong has been steadily decreasing, and there was no choice other than to allow the game fish to become obsolete or restock the waters. The supply came from Lake Erie. Game Warden O. M. Hawkins will next week restock Greenwood Lake.

BARN DANCE FOR SOCIETY

IN AND OUT CLUB HAS ARRANGED ITS FIRST EVENT.

Society Young Folk Have Formed An Organization for the Winter.

The In and Out Club is the name of a new organization recently formed among the unmarried set in local society and they have been actively engaged in preparing a number of indoor and outdoor events for the winter. The first of these affairs will be a barn dance at the Barnaby estate Thanksgiving eve. Those in charge of the affair are Mrs. Edward M. VanBuren, Miss Lucy Otterson, Miss May Evans, Miss Holly and Miss Marguerite Holly.

A big barn has been secured on the Barnaby estate at Oakwood where the cotillion will be held. The decorations for the affair will be very novel and those who are arranging the dance are planning to have many unique features conspicuous not only in the favors but in the general idea of the affair. Many of these features will be introduced by Thomas R. VanBoskerck, who will lead the cotillion. The patronesses who will distribute the favors will be Mrs. Frank Austin, Mrs. J. W. Reinhart and Mrs. George T. VanBoskerck.

There are eighty in the club and they are planning some of the leading society functions for the winter. This dance will be only one of many that the club will arrange later when they meet again late in December to arrange for others.

CONCERTS OF SONG.

A. H. Atterburyy Has Arranged Series of Two to be Held This Winter.

It is pleasant to know that Albert H. Atterbury is preparing to give two more concerts of song similar to those of last winter.

Miss Rio, who will sing the soprano parts, is an old favorite in Plainfield and her beautiful voice is always welcome. Mr. Burleigh, the basso, is a member of the choir of Dr. Rainsford's church. He sang at the annual reception of the Monday Afternoon Club last year and delighted his audience. Mrs. VanDuyn, the contralto, and Mr. Martin, the tener, are new comers, but they are said to have excellent voices.

The first concert will be on Tuesday, December 2, and the programme will range from the classical "Kennst du das Land," by Liszt, down to "Rory O'More" and "Old Kentucky Home." Subscriptions should be sent at once to Mr. Atterbury.

NEW SOCIAL CLUB.

Entertained by the Misses Lounsbury at Their Home.

The Misses Katherine and Ella Lounsbury entertained the members of a new social club which is now forming, at their home on Plainfield avenue Thursday evening when, after a short business meeting, games were enjoyed among which was a bean bag contest. Dancing and music were also enjoyed after which the guests were served with refreshments.

Charge Staggered Him.

Frazee Connett was arraigned before City Judge Runyon, yesterday afternoon, charged by Patrolman Mc Carthy with drunkenness, disorderly conduct and profane language. The triple charge staggered Frazee to such an extent that he was unable to frame an excuse. He was given his preference of $10 or twenty days and bowed in submission to the latter.

Crushed Two Fingers.

Chas. Leigh, of West Fourth street, met with a very painful accident while at work in the Pond Tool Works yesterday afternoon. The young man was lifting a heavy bar of steel, which slipped and fell on his hand, crushing two fingers badly. The wound was dressed at the shop.

John Mowen, inspector on the local trolley line, left today for his former home at Myersville, Md. It is fifteen years since Mr. Mowen has been to the home of his birth and he will spend three weeks meeting old acquaintances and in hunting game.

Wesley Randolph, of North avenue, has received a letter from his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Randolph, who recently went to Denver, Col., and they say that they are delighted with the climate and like the western city very much.

Election for Clerks.

At the meeting of the Retail Clerks' Mutual Aid Association, Monday evening, there will be nomination and election of officers and other important business will be transacted.

TO CAUCUS SOON.

Republicans of the Legislature Will Meet to Decide the Senate and Assembly Honors.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, Nov. 22—It has been practically agreed that the Republican Assembly caucus to decide the speakership and leadership of the next House and apportionment of minor offices will be held in the Assembly chamber at the State house Tuesday, December 9 or 16. None of the leaders or candidates are anxious to prolong the prelimiary contests longer, and the preference expressed by a number of members was for having the caucus on the first of the two dates mentioned.

No date has as yet been fixed for the Republican Senate caucus, but it is not improbable that it may be held within the next two weeks. The present Assembly plan is to proceed with the organization of that body by caucus action without reference to the disposition of the Senate offices.

PICKED COMPANY FOR DRILL

CITY HIGH SCHOOL BATTALION WILL BE REPRESENTED IN CONTESTS.

Major Murphey Will Command—He Has Temporarily Appointed His Officers.

The members of the City High School battalion have decided to form a uniformed company from among the members of the several companies, and with this company they propose to enter several of the military contests to be given throughout the winter by the various military organizations of neighboring cities. They will attempt to hold competitive drills with several cadet corps of the vicinity.

In order to enlarge the size of the company, the non-commissioned officers of the battalion have consented to act as privates during the competitive drills. The company will drill Monday afternoons for several weeks to come. The drilling will be entirely voluntary on the part of the boys.

Major Murphey has made the following temporary appointments for officers in the company, which in all probability will be commanded by himself: First lieutenant, Adjutant George L. Babcock; second lieutenant, Lieut. V. B. Miner; first sergeant, J. L. Tweedy; company quartermaster-sergeant, E. I. Weseman; sergeants, H. Thompson, H. Fenno, F. Lock and H. Slauson; corporals, L. Slocum, S. Bogart, E. Daniels, H. Lavell, S. Freeman and H. Lapsley.

DEATH OF MRS. STEBBINS.

Wife of Vice President of Pond Tool Works Passed Away Yesterday After a Week's Illness.

Mention was made yesterday of the death of Mrs. A. C. Stebbins, which occurred in the afternoon at her home, 835 West Seventh street, as a result of an attack of pleuro-pneumonia. She was taken ill a week ago last Thursday and from the first her condition was critical. Early this week it was believed that she had passed the crisis and her physician had strong hopes for recovery. Her heart suddenly became weak and death soon followed.

Mr. Stebbins, who is vice president of the Pond Machine Tool Works, and his wife came to Plainfield, when the Pond plant was located in this city. They formerly lived at Worcester, Mass. Since her residence in Plainfield, Mrs. Stebbins has made many friends among whom she was highly esteemed. She was an attendant with her husband at the Crescent Avenue church. Mrs. Stebbins is survived by a husband.

The funeral services will be held Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the home, 835 West Seventh street. Interment will be at Hillside cemetery.

GAINING RAPIDLY.

J. D. Macnab May be Able to Leave Hospital in Two Weeks.

The condition of James D. Macnab, commercial instructor in the City High School, continues to be very favorable. A week ago Mr. Macnab went to Muhlenberg Hosptial to undergo an operation for appendicitis and it was stated yesterday at the High School that his condition was such as to warrant his discharge from the hospital in two weeks provided he continues to improve as rapidly as at present.

In Justice Nash's Court.

A judgment for the plaintiff of $96.60 and costs and interest was given yesterday by Justice Nash in his court in the case of A. D. Thompson against Thomas Cogan, on contract. The plaintiffs were represented by Reed & Coddington and the defendants by Craig A. Marsh.

STABBED WITH FILE DURING SHOP QUARREL

Anton Vodecreek Taken to Hospital, While Tony Marello Was Put Under Arrest.

IS ADJOURNED A WEEK

MORELLO CLAIMS VODECREEK THREW SAND IN HIS EYES.

And That, Blinded by It, He Seized Upon First Thing Which Came Handy and Threw It at Vodecreek—The Case Adjourned.

While working in the foundry department of the Scott Press Works, last evening, Tony Marello and Anton Vodecreek, two employes, became involved in a quarrel. Vodecreek, it is alleged, threw some molding sand in his companion's eyes and the next instant received a stab wound in the side with a sharp pointed file. The wound seemed to be of such serious proportions he was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital.

Today it was reported he was greatly improved and, provided blood poisoning did not ensue, there would be no serious results.

Marello was placed under arrest by Patrolman Vanderweg and this morning was arraigned before City Judge Runyon. At the request of his counsel, the case was adjourned for one week. The defendant was released in the custody of D. C. Smalley. Marello admitted the stabbing but claimed that the sand thrown in his eyes so blinded him that he could not see and the file was the first thing he picked up.

SURROGATE DEMOND.

Candidate Sworn In at Somerville Yesterday and Took Office at Once.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Nov. 22—It is now Surrogate William J. DeMond. Yesterday in the Court House, Judge Louis H. Schenck administered the oath of office to the successful Democratic candidate. Quite a gathering of his friends witnessed the event. The bonds are for $2,000 and those on the paper are Jacob Shurts, chairman of the Democratic County Executive Committee; Jas. Q. TenEyck, Democratic committeeman, of Bridgewater and Hon. Joseph W. Ballentine and Michael J. Hickey, both staunch supporters of the Democratic faith.

No public dinner was given by Mr. DeMond, yesterday because he gave one about a week ago, in connection with Sheriff McMurtry, to their bondsmen, the Freeholders and county officials.

Former Surrogate Alex. Gibby Spencer will officiate in the capacity of deputy surrogate until the first of next April.

THEATRICAL.

Manager Schorb, of the Central Theatre, has engaged both through friendship and at an extra salary for the special feature Thanksgiving week, George Abbott Davison and Miss Inez Mecusker to present their operatic travesty entitled "A Trial Turn," for which they carry special scenery. Mr. Davison, who has starred in both "The Air Ship" and "Nothing But Money," is very well known as a clever comedian while Miss Mecusker, who as soprano soloist, travelled for two seasons with Sousa's Band, also as prima donna in several well known opera companies. In "A Trial Turn," Mr. Davison will appear a Prof. Conn, principal of the Conn Academy, and Miss Mecusker as Mary Wright Innit, principal of the Innit Seminary. They will introduce comic and descriptive songs, grand opera duets, and bright lines. These two popular singers will be seen at Tony Pastor's Theatre, New York, week of December 1 as the head-line act.

"The Silver Slipper," the latest musical play by the authors of "Florodora" has been playing to record breaking audiences at the Broadway Theatre, New York, for the past four weeks. It was predicted that this new play would be a successor to tuneful "Florodora" and the large and fashionable audiences that have attended every performance since the opening night, shows that "The Silver Slipper" has already proven a worthy successor of that other popular and tuneful English musical play. "The Silver Slipper" is replete with the tuneful, catchy music of Leslie Stuart. The cast is an exceptionally strong one, including such well-known players as Sam Bernard, who has the leading comedy role, Snitz Edwards, Cyril Scott, Mackenzie Gordon, Harry Durcher, Josie Sadler, Maido Villier, Helen Royton, Susan Drake, Daisy Greene and last but by no means the least, dainty Edna Wallace Hopper, who for the first time in five years has cast aside skirts for just a few moments and appears in the first act in a boy's suit.

RAILROADS OF OLDEN TIMES

JOHN M. GARRISON, JERSEY OLDEST CONDUCTOR, TELLS OF THEM.

A Primitive Character of the Old Road of Which He First Found Employment.

John M. Garrison, who is still working for the Erie Railroad as a conductor, is supposed to be the oldest conductor in active service, in this part of the country at least. He began his railroad career with the old Paterson and Hudson River Road on November 17, 1846. The road had then been running about six years. It was first run as a horse railroad from Paterson to Bergen, where the cars were run over the tracks of the New Jersey Railroad and Transportation Company to Jersey City.

A year previous to Mr. Garrison's entering the employment of the company, steam was employed as the motive power. The service consisted of three trains, one in the morning, one at noon and one at night. Each train consisted of two passenger coaches and several freight cars, except on holidays, when extra passenger cars were required. The company had three passenger engines and two freight engines, known as grasshoppers, because of their having walking-beams. The passenger engines burned wood, and the grasshoppers burned coal.

The passenger cars were built on the English compartment priniple, and the conductor had to collect the fares from the outside of the cars.

The roadbed was of the most premature sort. It was made by felling the cedar trees, which at that time were abundant along the Hackensack river, and laying the logs transversely on the ground. On these trees the stringers were laid, and the flat bar iron rails were spiked. A train off the track was a frequent occurrence, but this was not much thought of, as it was easily replaced.

The running time between Paterson and Jersey City was one hour. The stations were Ackerman's Lane (now Clifton), Acquackanonck (now Passaic), Boiling Springs (now Rutherford) and Secaucus. During the strawberry season the road did a rushing business. Mr. Garrison ran the strawberry train, which left Paterson at 2 a. m. He would generally have eight carloads of fruit on his train.

Baggage cars were unknown in these days, the baggage and mails being carried in lockers under the cars. The passenger cars would hold about forty persons, and were less than half the weight of the modern passenger coach.

Railroading half a century ago was not so strenuous as it is now. It was not an uncommon thing for a train on this road to stop on the meadows, and the passengers get out and hunt for snapping turtles. Time was not so important then as now.

Of the original employes of the old Paterson and Hudson River Railroad Mr. Garrison is the only survivor, and he is still working for the Erie Company.

MICA IN TUNNEL.

Laborers Find "Pay Dirt" in Bore Between Jersey City and New York.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Jersey City, Nov. 21—The company engaged in tunnelling under the North river, from the foot of Fourteenth street, Jersey City, to the foot of Morton street, Manhattan, has struck "pay dirt." Up to Saturday nothing but mud was turned up by the workmen. On that day, however, small quantities of a glittering substance were discovered. The men thought they had struck a vein of silver.

On Sunday larger particles were encountered, and a chemist inspected a specimen. He pronounced it an excellent quality of mica. It is a valuable mineral, and on account of its scarcity commands high prices. It is capable of being cleaved into elastic plates of extreme thinness, is more or less transparent, and is used in the doors of stoves and for many other purposes. Mica is an essential constituent of granite.

The officials hope that as the boring proceeds the mica will be drilled in large quantities. If their expectations are realized the mica will be offered for sale in this city.

SEVERAL CHANGES.

Made in New Schedule in Effect on New Jersey Central.

The new schedule which went into effect Sunday, on the New Jersey Central has several important changes. There is a new train Sunday morning from Scranton for New York, and a train from New York for Scranton at 1 p. m. Sundays. The Scranton flyer will have a through coach Scranton to New York arriving at 12:40 p. m., and there will be a coach from Scranton on the Harrisburg Express leaving New York at 5 p. m. The Harrisburg Express which heretofore run express to Phillipsburg, will make a regular stop at Somerville, arriving at 6:06 p. m. The schedule on the main line has been somewhat re-arranged to accommodate the public demands, and with the excellent motive power with which the New Jersey Central is now equipped, the road is little short of a model road.

LITERARY.

For a year Dr. S. Weir Mitchell had sent to him from one of the clipping agencies all the reports that could be found in the American daily papers of heroism in every-day life. Dr. Mitchell has written an article for the December Century giving the results of this search. Once of the surprising facts is the many instances of heroic acts by children. Of fifty-three trustworthy statements of children under fifteen who have tried to save others from water., fire or other danger, twelve concerned girls who tried to save drowning persons previously unknown to them. In three undoubted instances little boys of four, five and six years of age respectively risked their lives in saving others at fires.

Still Unclaimed.

No one has as yet appeared at Cole's undertaking parlors to claim the remains of the man killed on the New Jersey Central tracks at Westfield, Thursday afternoon. From appearances the man was a mechanic out of work and was possibly a stranger in this neighborhood. The body will be held for several days.

TO SETTLE OUTSIDE

Mine Owners and Workers to Open Negotiations.

THE MOVEMENT CAUSES SURPRISE.

From Which Side of the Controversy the Proposal to Get Together Emanated Is a Matter of Conjecture.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 22.—The mine workers, through their representatives, have agreed with the mine owners to attempt to adjust the differences existing between them outside the anthracite coal strike commission. The proposition was made on a compromise basis, and negotiations, it is expected, will be at once entered upon, with a reasonable hope of settlement with the aid of the arbitrators.

The rough proposition which is to form the basis of negotiations is a 10 per cent increase in wages, a nine hour day and trade agreements between the miners and the company by whom they are employed. The only one of the four demands not touched upon is that of weighing of coal by the legal ton.

While both sides have expressed a willingness to settle their differences among themselves, it is not to be construed that it carries with it the acceptance of the terms proposed. They are mentioned only as a basis, it is understood, from which a settlement is to be effected. It is possible that the foundation already laid can be wrecked by either party holding out too strongly against some question and thus leave the whole matter in the hands of the commissioners, who, in the meantime, will act as a sort of board of conciliation rather than as a board of arbitration.

Few persons were aware that an attempt would be made at an outside settlement until it was practically so intimated by Judge Gray, the chairman of the commission, who read a carefully prepared announcement from the "bench." The move, one of the most important in the whole history of the coal strike, created a mild sensation when it became known.

The surprise was all the greater when it will be remembered that numerous persons from the president of the United States down and that many organizations from the National Civic federation to the small boards of trade of the mining towns failed to bring the two parties together. It is said it was all brought about by both sides seeing that the proceedings before the commission would be interminable and that in the intermingling of the lawyers for both sides the outside agreement proposition was broached and taken up.

It cannot be officially stated which party made the proposition first. The attorneys for both sides are averse to talking, but those who were inclined to say something differ in their statements. An attorney for one of the railroads said it came from the miners' side, while one lawyer for the miners said it came from the operators. Another representative of the miners said it was a "spontaneous" proposition.

It is generally believed, however, that the operators were the first to make the proposition. Wayne MacVeagh, who carried on such a brilliant cross examination of President Mitchell, is given credit for bringing about the present situation. He went to New York after he finished with Mr. Mitchell and had a conference with certain persons connected with the coal industry, among them, it is reported, J. Pierpont Morgan. He was in New York yesterday in connection with the matter.

It has been agreed by the miners' representatives and the attorneys for the coal companies to ask the commission to adjourn until Wednesday, Dec. 3. It is likely the request will be granted.

Beaumont Under Water.

BEAUMONT, Tex., Nov. 22.—A heavy rain began at 1 a. m., continuing until daylight. People awoke to find the city under from two to seven feet of water. Many stores and dwellings are flooded, and business is entirely suspended. Boats are navigating the streets. Considerable damage has been done. In the oilfield the damage will amount to probably $20,000. At Raywood 300 feet of the Southern Pacific track was washed out, and trains are delayed. In the ricefields of Jefferson, Liberty and Hardin counties a great loss has been sustained. It is estimated that eighteen inches of water fell all over the belt named.

A Million Feet of Lumber Burned.

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 22.—Fire broke out last evening in the fanroom of the immense Tunis Lumber company's kiln system, on the southern branch of the Elisabeth river, about three miles from Norfolk, and before it could be got under control a million feet of lumber, the entire kiln system and much valuable machinery had been destroyed by the flames.

Counterfeiter Given Long Term.

TORONTO, Nov. 22.—Joseph Gentile, the Italian counterfeiter who was arrested here a few days ago, has been found guilty of uttering counterfeit Canadian and United States coins. He was sentenced to thirteen years' imprisonment. He was wanted in New York on the charge of counterfeiting.

Express Company Indicted.

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 22.—The federal grand jury has returned an indictment charging the Adams Express company with collecting charges without a government license. The charge is based upon the Birmingham, Ia., of [illegible] C. O. D. to consignees.

OUR INDIAN WARDS.

More Spent In Fighting Than Educating the Red Man.

DOING AWAY WITH RATION SYSTEM

"Results of the New Policy," Says Commissioner Jones, "Have Been Favorable Beyond Expectations."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Commissioner of Indian Affairs Jones in his annual report estimates that the government from its foundation to 1890 spent $845,275,290 in fighting, subduing and controlling the Indians of the country and $240,000,000 for the education and care of their children.

"The extent and demoralizing effects of the ration system evil," says the commissioner in explaining his policy of abolishing that system, "were generally recognized and universally condemned, except perhaps by a mistaken philanthropy which, ignoring the natural law that man must earn his living by the sweat of his brow, would exempt the Indian from labor and carry him upward on flowery beds of ease. It was felt that it was time for a change. Heretofore the dealing had been with the tribe; it is now with the individual. His manhood is appealed to, and he is to be taught self reliance and self respect and to put his hand to the plow if he would work. Nothing is further from the truth than the assertion that the plan is to hire out adult male Indians as contract laborers.

"The results of the policy have been favorable even beyond expectations, and there is every reason to believe that the final success of the plan, if carried out judiciously, is assured. As a first result over 12,000 have been dropped from the nation roll, being wholly self supporting. As a second result a large number of Indians have been put to work or work has been found for them."

Concerning the order directing the agents to encourage the discontinuance of the Indians' custom of wearing long hair, painting, etc., Mr. Jones says the reports on the subject by the agents are all in and that the consensus of opinion expressed is that "it is a step forward and in the right direction."

The report advocates that agencies and portions of agencies be placed under the charge of bonded superintendents of training schools, a policy already started wherever practicable and, according to the commissioner, giving better administration than when the same agencies were under the control of political fanatics. The total cost of the Indian schools during the fiscal year was $3,437,735, or $133 per capita. This amount maintained 249 schools, with an enrollment of 24,434 pupils, and in addition a number of pupils at the Hampton (Va.) institute and at public schools.

Troubles of Laboring Men.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 22.—Arguments long drawn out in support of conflicting claims of jurisdiction occupied the time of the American Federation of Labor. In the morning it was the row between the wood workers and the carpenters and between the wood workers and the piano workers. In the afternoon it was between the longshoremen and the seamen. All the disputes ended in the same manner. Each was referred to a special committee which is to meet within a given time and endeavor to reach a solution which will be agreeable to both sides. The constant flow of oratory to which the convention has been subjected for the last three days has commenced to wear on the nerves of delegates, and the speakers were compelled to keep much more closely to the matter under discussion.

Had Buried Loot Near Tientsin.

VICTORIA, B. C., Nov. 22.—According to mail advices from Shanghai, Henry Plant, the American who was sentenced to five years' imprisonment in that port, had buried considerable loot near Tientsin. He plotted with two deserters from the United States army to steal the schooner Agnes from the United States consulate for the purpose of reaching Tangku, which is within marching distance of the spot where the treasure is buried. The men were caught in the act of sailing away with the schooner. They were convicted and sentenced to imprisonment. On completion of their sentences they will be deported to the United States.

Professor Caldwell Resigns.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 22.—Professor G. C. Caldwell, head of the department of chemistry, who was the first professor appointed after Cornell was founded in 1868 and has been since then in constant service, has tendered his resignation to the executive committee of the board of trustees. The resignation was accepted, to take effect immediately. Professor Caldwell is sixty-eight years old and would have had two years to serve before being retired under the age limit. He was appointed professor emeritus and special lecturer in chemistry until June, 1909.

Colorado Coal Mine on Fire.

TRINIDAD, Colo., Nov. 22.—The Engleville coal mine, six miles south of Trinidad, owned by the Colorado Fuel and Iron company, is on fire, and the fire is beyond control. Two men have lost their lives. The fire started near an abandoned air shaft 600 feet from the mouth of the slope. It was not considered serious, and 150 men were sent into the mine. Smoke and gas soon reached the men, and they fled for the open air. Many were overcome, but all except the two dead were rescued by their comrades.

CABLE VIA GUAM.

Line to Be Finished to Honolulu Within Six Months.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Secretary Moody has directed that the Nero soundings be turned over to the Pacific Cable company.

This action resulted from a conference between Secretary Moody and Rear Admiral Bradford, chief of the bureau of equipment, in regard to the proposition of the Commercial Pacific Cable company to construct a cable from San Francisco to Honolulu. The secretary has authorized the admiral to turn over the soundings made by the navy department to the Pacific Cable company as soon as the necessary papers have been drawn up.

These soundings, which were made by the Nero, represent more than a year's work and an expenditure of about $100,000. As a result of the secretary's determination to relinquish the soundings of the Nero in return for concessions to the government in cable rates and in military use of the cable it is expected that a cable will be in operation between San Francisco and Honolulu within six months, and work then will be pushed on the line between Honolulu and Manila.

It is due to the work of the Nero that Guam is to be a landing station of the Pacific cable. The cable company was disposed to believe that there was an abyss in the vicinity of the island which would prevent the laying of a cable by that route. Admiral Bradford showed the company's representatives enough of the soundings to convince them that the survey of the Nero had made a detour of this abyss, and it was agreed to lay the cable via Guam.

PRESIDENT IN PHILADELPHIA.

Accompanied by Cabinet Members, He Attends Two Celebrations.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—President Roosevelt arrived in this city shortly before noon today to be the guest of honor at two celebrations.

The presidential party includes Secretary Shaw, Postmaster General Payne, Secretary Hitchcock, Secretary Wilson, George C. Cortelyou, secretary to the president; William Loeb, personal secretary to the president, and Dr. George A. Lung, United States navy.

The distinguished visitors were met at the station by a large delegation of citizens and the First troop, Philadelphia City cavalry.

This afternoon the president will attend the dedicatory exercises of the Central High School For Boys and in the evening will participate in the observance of founders' day at the Union league.

During the interval between the ceremonies at the high school and the founders' day banquet the president will be the guest at luncheon of Charles Emory Smith, formerly postmaster general, and will be tendered a reception at the home of E. T. Stotesbury, a director of the Union league.

Devil's Work Brought to Light.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—As a result of a raid conducted by the local police authorities on houses of ill repute it is announced that evidence will be adduced which will warrant action by the United States authorities. It is charged that a syndicate having for its purpose traffic in young girls is operating on both sides of the Atlantic and that agents are scattered broadcast to lure girls from their homes, especially in foreign countries, to lives of depravity in this and other cities. The investigation was primarily inspired by the German consular service, and the raid resulted in the arrest of 113 girls and a number of men, some of the latter suspected of being agents in the sinister business.

British Iron Industry Depressed.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The past week has witnessed a considerable depression at all the leading centers of the British iron and steel industry, and prices have undergone an all round reduction. Considerable shipments are being made to the United States, but the news that a cargo of Canadian iron is on its way to the Clyde has been received with misgiving as indicating the possibility of the American trade being no longer able to absorb all the Canadian supplies.

Banquet at Windsor.

WINDSOR, Nov. 22.—A state banquet of fifty covers was held in St. George's hall in Windsor castle last night, among the guests of the king and queen being the king of Portugal, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, the Duke and Duchess of Fife, Prince and Princess Christian, the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough and Colonial Secretary Chamberlain and Mrs. Chamberlain.

Mgr. Falconio Arrives.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Mgr. Falconio, the newly appointed apostolic delegate to the United States, has arrived in Washington from Baltimore, where he stopped for a day en route from Ottawa. He immediately took up his residence in the Catholic legation building, at the corner of Second and I streets, northwest.

Universal Brotherhood, a Russian Community, Refused Land.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The Christian community of the Universal Brotherhood at Crowstand, Assiniboia, Canada, have sought a home in this country, but have been officially notified that the community cannot settle on government domain. The community, represented by Ivan Ponomareff and others, forwarded a letter to the president, asking for a refuge in the United States. The letter was referred to the interior department. Assistant Commissioner Richards of the general land office has forwarded a reply announcing that they cannot locate on the public lands of the United States. Mr. Richards says:

"In said letter you state that your community numbers more than 7,000 and that in 1898 and 1899 you emigrated from Russia to Canada because the Russian government would not permit you to live according to the dictates of your religion. You have discovered that although in Canada there is religious freedom still it is not what you were in search of; that you yield obedience only to the commands of the spirit of God in your hearts and cannot submit to any human laws or become the subjects of any sovereign; that you are not compelled to bear arms or perform military service in Canada, but must become subjects of Great Britain, and therefore you cannot obtain land on which to live without obeying all the institutions and laws of Canada. You therefore ask that you may be given refuge in this country or on land under the jurisdiction of this government, where you may live by the labor of your hands and where you shall not be forced to obey human ordinances or be asked to become subjects of any one except the good God.' You state that you use no meat or milk, but only vegetables and fruit; that you have no domestic animals and all your work is done by your own labor and ask only for so much land as you can cultivate by manual labor without the assistance of animals, etc.

"In reply I have to advise you that the public lands of the United States are disposed of only to citizens of the United States or to those who have declared their intention to become such citizens."

KILLED IN GUATEMALA.

Son of Minister Hunter Shoots an American Named Fitzgerald.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—A dispatch announces that Godfrey Hunter, Jr., son of Godfrey Hunter, minister to Guatemala, has shot and killed a man named Fitzgerald, an American citizen, in Guatemala City.

Reports at the state department say that after the shooting Hunter fled to the American legation, which was surrounded by a mob. The cause of the quarrel is unknown.

A telegram from Louisville, Ky., says: "Godfrey Hunter, Jr., is well known in Louisville. He is about twenty-five years of age and has acted as his father's private secretary at the legation in Guatemala for some time. Young Hunter figured in a social affair in Louisville which was extensively aired about a year ago. Dr. Hunter and his son came to Louisville last winter. Young Hunter was taken seriously ill while here, and for a time his life was despaired of.

"Fitzgerald, whom young Hunter shot and killed yesterday, made charges about a year ago against Dr. Hunter."

Fitzgerald a Native of Michigan.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Nov. 22.—William Fitzgerald, whose death in Guatemala is announced, was born here and was about twenty-seven years of age. Seven or eight years ago he drifted to Guatemala, where he held several different government positions. He is said by his relatives here to have been private secretary of the president of Guatemala for some time past.

Colonel Borden Dead.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Nov. 22.—Colonel Thomas J. Borden, a member of the Borden family whose name is linked with the textile history of southeastern Massachusetts, is dead at the East Side hospital, Providence, whither he had been taken after being stricken with appendicitis about a week ago. He was born here March 1, 1832, and after studying at the Lawrence Scientific school, Harvard university, he began mill life in the Fall River Iron works, of which his father, Colonel Richard Borden, was treasurer. He was officially connected with many financial institutions and insurance companies. His military title came from his militia service.

Bank Robbers Foiled.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Nov. 22.—A special to the News and Courier from Anderson, S. C., says: "An unsuccessful attempt was made to break into and rob the bank at Liberty, Pickens county. GUIDI CALLS ON TAFT Apostolic Delegate to Philippines Presents Credentials.

THE GOVERNOR OUTLINES PROCEDURE

When the Work of Settling the Friar Question Will Be Begun Is Not Yet Decided—Agreement Outside of Courts Is Hoped For.

MANILA, Nov. 22.—Governor Taft and Mgr. Guidi have exchanged formal visits and discussed in a general way the prospective negotiations. The date on which the negotiations will be commenced and the method of work are still undetermined.

Mgr. Guidi visited Governor Taft at Malacanan palace and made a formal address to him. On his arrival he presented a letter of introduction from Cardinal Rampolla and also expressed the personal greetings of the pope. He said that he accepted the mission because he knew that Governor Taft was an upright and sincere man. Continuing, the apostolic delegate said:

"The scope of our missions is identical—namely, the settlement of affairs which concern important interests in these islands, you acting for the civil power and I for the religious power. To this end it is necessary that there should exist mutual harmony and confidence between the ecclesiastical and civil authorities. It will be my first and principal thought to see that your authority is upheld and respected everywhere in the islands by those dependent on me, and I need hardly say that I expect your excellency to do the same for mine and for all the authorities of the church in general. In fine, the two powers should go hand in hand. For my part I will always be frank and open with you, and I beg your excellency to be the same with me; thus we shall always understand one another perfectly."

Governor Taft in responding to this address welcomed the apostolic delegate and thanked him for his kindly expressions. The governor continued:

"As you say, the best method of settling the difficult questions presented between the church and the state in these islands will be found in entire frankness and in open dealings. The negotiations which have already taken place in Rome point out the lines upon which we should proceed, and while undue haste would be unwise in view of the important interests concerned, I have no doubt that we can with considerable speed reach a satisfactory solution. The result of your visit, in the judgment of my superiors and myself, will much affect the welfare of the people of the Philippines. The property and the rights of the church must be observed and protected by the government. What those rights are when in dispute, unless they are settled by an agreement, must be determined by the courts of justice. The preservation of those rights is the duty of the government of these islands not only by virtue of the treaty of Paris, but by virtue of the constitution of the United States and of the principles of American jurisprudence, which are so deeply seated in the political creed of every American that they cannot be departed from.

"If we can adjust the mutual rights and obligations of the government of these islands with the Roman Catholic church by a compromise and an agreement without having resort to the courts, this is an end devoutly to be wished and an end which I am sure we both cordially and sincerely seek. I know that we both desire the betterment and the uplifting of the Filipino people."

General Viljoen Coming.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—General Ben Viljoen, who sailed today on the St. Louis for a three months' lecture tour to the United States, said to a reporter: "The South Africans have lost heart and hope, and peace depends entirely upon the British. My commando, now idle and in which were once included many good Americans, offered itself to Lord Roberts for service against the Mad Mollah in Somaliland, and I would have commanded it, but Lord Roberts declined the offer with thanks. I am doubtful as to the outcome of Colonial Secretary Chamberlain's visit to South Africa."

Wheat Prices Soar.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 22.—Both December and May wheat options on the local board yesterday reached $1.40 per cental, the highest quotation in four years. The day's closing price was $1.38½@1.38⅞. The present condition of the wheat market on this coast is strongly bullish. Cash wheat is exceedingly scarce, and farmers are holding their stock. Australia is a ready buyer of wheat in this market, and freights to the colonies and to the United Kingdom are unprecedentedly low.

Colonel Ochiltree's Case Hopeless.

HOT SPRINGS, Va., Nov. 22.—Colonel Thomas Ochiltree is critically ill here and is suffering repeated attacks of heart trouble. There is no hope of his recovery, and news of his death would come as no surprise to those watching his case here. He was sent here a fortnight ago by Dr. L. R. Morris of New York in the hope that the change would be beneficial, but he came too late. The heart trouble is a result of pneumonia contracted a year ago.

CHANCE TO REFORM.

A New Resident of the borough halted at the southeast coner of Jackson avenue and Somerset street the other day and inquired of An Old Citizen as to the location of Park place.

"It's right across the street," replied An Old Citizen.

"This is Jackson avenue," protested A New Resident.

Then had to come the explanation that there wasn't a street in North Plainfield which had the same name east and west of Somerset street. Nobody has ever been able to give an rational explanation of why this state of affairs exists but it has been allowed to continue simply because no one has ever made any effort to do away with a decidedly misleading arrangement.

Just at present the city of Plainfield is showing North Plainfield an excellent exmaple in reforming its street names. LaGrande avenue is to be wiped off the map and East Seventh street is to hold forth where it should have long ago. Because certain of the thoroughfares in the city running east and west, which have numbered titles, happen to curve from their natural path in the eastern end of the city, new names are given them in order to do away with the confusion of having numbered streets cross each other. There is no need, however, of changing the names of the streets which pursue the proper path. East Seventh street was called LaGrande avenue for no particular reason as East Ninth street became Franklin place and East Eighth street Crescent avenue before they crossed it. Now the Common Council is about to change the name back again as it should be.

North Plainfield has not even the excuse of curved streets for changing the names east and west of Somerset street. Under the existing conditions, the stranger is simply lost in the borough on account of the peculiar arrangement of the street names. If the Borough Council desires to greatly improve local conditions besides simplifying its street directory, it will eliminate a host of titles for streets and allow one to do duty for an entire thoroughfare.

The New Jersey Training School for Feeble-minded Girls and Boys at Vineland is doing a most efficient service, in spite of the fact that there is a constitutional provision which prevents the State from giving the full support to the institution that it deserves. All the buildings, lands and improvements at the school have been provided by the charitable people of New Jersey. There are now in the institution 280 children, and of these the State supports 226 on a per capita basis per annum. The other fifty-four inmates are either private pupils or are maintained by charity. The institution has an endowment fund, which is, as yet, inadequate, and for which contributions are desired. Appeals to the public for aid in this great work are made by the board of trustees of the school, the special donation days being Thanksgiving and Christmas, when gifts of any character are acceptable.

The Consumers League of New Jersey has an open letter to Christmas shoppers in another column. It asks them to make their purchases early in the season and in the daytime aiming to relieve the overworked conditions of the holiday season for the employes at the various stores. This request to purchase early finds the heartiest response from the merchants. It would be far easier and much more satisfactory to all concerned if Christmas shoppers would pay their visits to the stores early in the month instead of waiting until the night before Christmas. Those who go early have the pick and they will get far more attention than if they delay until the last moment when everybody and everything is in a chaotic condition.

A Cleveland window glass company is said to be the only establishment of its kind which advertises in the newspapers in any live fashion, comments the Philadelphia Record. The result is that "it carries today nearly 5,000 open accounts with builders, architects, paint and glass retailers, picture dealers, etc., throughout Ohio and six other States."

Major Carl Lentz, Republican leader of Essex county, was turned down for sheriff of that county. Now there is a plan on foot to turn down his county in the Legislature and leave it out in the cold as far as legislative offices are concerned. What has Essex done to merit all this hard luck?

Plainfield is always lively at this season of the year but it really looks as if the present year was going to see even more than the usual quota of activity. This week has certainly seen its share of sales, suppers and kindred affairs.

Yale's big guard, Glass, will play in the big football game against Harvard this afternoon as the latter university is not going to protest him. It cannot be that Harvard is following the adage that those who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones.

This is the time of the year that Tax Collector Smith fully earns his pay. He has been remarkably successful, too, for he says that the delinquent list, this year, is going to be much smaller than usual.

SOME OF ATTRACTIONS TO BE FOUND AT LOCAL STORES.

A Few Interesting Items Concerning Greater Plainfield's Merchants

Charles Conover & Company, painters and decorators, have recently received several large contracts for painting. Their work stands the test every time and they guarantee the best materials and workmanship. Estimates will be given cheerfully.

You cannot be clothed any better or cheaper than at Weinberger's store on West Front street. His stock of men's and boys' clothing is complete in sizes and the quality is the best.

As the winter months are coming on you will need many household goods, such as the H. E. Gayle Hardware Company keep. The stock is large and first-class. If you need the best stove made you can find it at this store.

If in need of anything in the jewelry linl consult J. Hervey Doane, of Park avenue. His long experience in this business will be to your advantage. Only the best quality of goods is kept.

Before going to New York for winter coats and tailor made suits a visit at I. H. Boehm's store, on West Front street, will convince you that Plainfield offers just as good bargains as New York. Here may also be found tailor made skirts, womens fur collarettes, muffs and worsted goods in large assortments.

At the New York Bargain Store on West Front street are some of the biggest bargains of the season. In the shoe and men's furnishing department very good values are to be found for the money.

Of course women get tired feet from wearing shoes just as well as the stronger element. They can avoid it though, by wearing the "Dorothy Dodd" shoe, made expressly for women. It is sold in this city only by M. C. VanArsdale, of East Front street.

No better prescription work is done in the city than that at Hodge's pharmacy in the Y. M. C. A. building. The department is under the proprietor's personal supervision and the best of care with all is the feature. Hodge is agent for the famous Belle Meade sweets.

All the best varieties of oysters are to be found at Fred Endress' market. It is a treat to see the bargains offered in his seafood department. Better let him quote prices.

Carl Peterson will have a special sale of begonias Monday. See ad.

DUNELLEN.

Another big crowd patronized the Fair of Holidays, in the Presbyterian church, last evening. Supper was served at 6 o'clock and was an excellent one. The leading dish was oysters. In the evening a great many came to see the wonderful giant, Mr. Burke. He is slightly over seven feet tall and overtopped every one there by at least a foot. Dressed up in an "Uncle Sam" costume he appeared immense. George Washington was also present in the person of Charles Lake. A great many sales were made last evening but owing to the great amount of material on hand the fair will be continued again tonight. The same committees served last evening as on the previous day. The fortune telling by Mme. Benton was again a feature and many went and had the future opened to them. During the evening, the banjo club played some pretty selections.

HOW HE APPEARED.

Captain Hobson at the Rockford (Ill.,) Assembly Last August.

The following description of Capt. Richmond Pearson Hobson, U. S. N., who is to lecture at the Casino, Monday, as he appeared before six thousand people at the Rockford, (Ill.) Assembly last August, is but an index to his receptions before thirty-three like gatherings during the past summer. Everywhere he went last summer great throngs were in waiting to receive and welcome him.

"He had hardly spoken five minutes, before it became apparent that he is not only an orator and thinker, but that he is a mature student of international affairs. Well educated to begin with, this sea rover has been an observer and has picked up facts at every port and moulded them into great lessons.

"His subject was well handled and showed much research, careful preparation and profound study.

"The effect of this address upon the great audience was electrical."

A crowded house should greet him Monday night. Reserved seats are on sale at Armstrong's up to 6 o'clock Monday evening. After that hour, at the Casino.

THE FUEL PROBLEM.

Science Will Have to Solve It Before Very Long.

World's Coal Supply Nearing Exhaustion—What Has Been Done Toward Discovering Effective Substitutes.

[Special Chicago Letter.]

FIVE hundred thousand tons of coal per day—that is the estimated output of the United States since the settlement of the coal strike. A chunk of the black treasure as large as the Masonic Temple and the Chicago Auditorium combined dug out of the bowels of the earth to-day with only a big hole left—and another chunk as large or larger to-morrow—and so on day in and day out in ever increasing quantities!

This raises the old scare—"How long can it last? When will the coalless age be upon us?"

Back in the 60's the wise men of Great Britain broached the question. Parliament appointed a special commission which reported that at the then existing rate of increase in coal consumption the world's stock of black diamond would be exhausted in 212 years.

Scientists set about scheming substitutes for fuel. Many of our readers will remember the various machines for storing the rays of the sun; the windmill devices for saving heat. Then came the discovery of enormous coal fields in the United States, Siberia and China. Besides electricity for motor power was developed and largely allayed the fears of an early coal famine.

In the last few months the great coal strikes in the United States and France, backed up by similar troubles in England, Belgium, and Germany, have again brought forward the seriousness of the coal problem. People began to realize what it would mean to live, or try to live, without coal.

The worst scared people of the east are the English. Great Britain, until very recently, was the world's coal producing country. This estimate is put upon the coal in the different European countries:

	Tons.
United Kingdom	138,000,000,000
Germany	132,000,000,000
France	18,000,000,000
Austria-Hungary	17,000,000,000
Belgium	15,000,000,000

To this Asiatic Russia adds a wealth of 300 billion tons of coal. The Spanish-American war first called attention to the United States. Coaling stations and coal supplies were more important to the victors, it is said, even than their better ships. Estimates show that the United States at present has between 1,000 and 1,500 billion tons of unmined black diamond with which to fight the world in war and in commerce. China has almost as large a supply and British journals of the last few months are teeming with these figures to arouse the people to their "rights" in the orient.

The enormous statistics of supply lose their rosy color when the figures showing the annual coal consumption are considered. Last year America used up about 190 million tons of coal. The year before it was only 182 million. This year it will fall short, but in the next twelve months it is expected that 225 million tons will be chopped out of our mines. All over the world there has been an ever increasing increase of coal consumption, so that now about three times as much coal is being used up as 20 years ago. If the increase continues at this rate, scientific journals say, the coal will all be gone before the 212 years named by the British commission.

"Something will have to be done," said the traffic manager of one of the largest railroads of the country. "This strike is settled, but I think coal will become more and more costly. Substitute fuel will have to be found."

During the strike in the anthracite regions many timely devices were tried. For one, porous brick saturated with petroleum was successfully used in many ovens—a new fuel which promised to find permanent friends in many households. Another unique substitute for coal is proposed by a German chemist and can be tried by any housewife. It is really nothing else than soap. Take petroleum refuse, waste lard and fat, mix it with 10 per cent. of soda lye and steam it gently, adding some water. Incipient saponification takes place. Add saw dust, coal dust and resin, as much as you have on hand, and when a pasty mass has formed you have fuel—the world's cheapest fuel, the chemist says.

Air is also described as a substitute for fuel. In reality air or the oxygen in the air is the element that combines with the fuel to make fire, and various devices are now being tried to mix air with petroleum vapors, and with oil so as to extract the greatest possible amount of heat from every unit of fuel. The well known Bunsen burner and the Welsbach light are illustrations of this principle, which will probably be applied on a much larger scale in furnaces as well as kitchen stoves.

There are two other familiar substitutes for coal, which will be utilized extensively before many years. Both of these are earth—the so-called oily shale and the peat. The latter is really nothing but half-formed coal. Many hundreds of centuries ago, the decaying vegetable growth just like peat bogs were pressed down by enormous layers of earth forming above them and turned into coal. Now the formation of new layers of earth has ceased and the peat has remained peat.

In Germany there are many factories in which the water is pressed out by heat, the remainder is condensed, heated and pressed until now the product is greatly like anthracite and is said to be better than any wood for fuel. The amount of unused despised peat left to moulder is prodigious. All the way from the Atlantic ocean to the Missouri river and as far south as North Carolina are peat bogs hundreds of feet thick. Holland, parts of Germany and Denmark are full of them, and in the Indian ocean there are scores of islands of peat.

Yet, the fact remains that these riches also are limited. Sooner or later some method of getting along without fuel must be found by utilization of the inexhaustible forces of nature. Thanks to electricity these forces can now be stored away and set free at the dictate of man.

Something has been done toward utilizing the energy of water and air in the water mills and windmills, but this is not one per cent. of what can be done. At Schaffhausen, Switzerland, huge mills convert the power of the falls of the Rhine into electricity, and conduct it by cable to the city, where it runs the street cars, pumps the water and lights the houses. Windmills which lift water to a higher level from which it gains power by its own fall are used without electricity in the Netherlands.

But the greatest machine of all—the one that will put an end to all coal trusts—is yet to be invented. It is a machine that will catch the rays of the sun. Mouchot's recepteur solaire was shown at the Paris exposition in 1878, and since then some progress has been made, notably by Louis Gathmann, inventor of the Gathmann gun, who believes that he will yet muzzle old Sol's power in a sun motor and give it to the world in spite of President Baer and J. Pierpont Morgan.

E. T. GUNDLACH.

The Color of Clouds.

A cloud is white because its corpuscles of vapor are large enough to reflect all rays, large and small. But the upper air has infinite numbers of particles so minute that they throw back only the smaller—or blue—waves of light, and not the larger red, yellow and green waves, and thus blue is the predominant, but not exclusive, color of the sky. This long-accepted theory of Tyndall's is now questioned by M. Spring, the Swiss physicist. He has experimented with luminous rays under many conditions, getting all colors except blue, which failed to appear until, by the aid of electricity, he secured a pure atmosphere. This was clearly tinged with blue, leading to the conclusion that the blue of the sky is an essential quality of the air, of chemical origin.

WHAT WOMEN WEAR.

Three Cornered Hats—Picture Millinery.

The three cornered hat is again in vogue. It comes well down on the hair at the back of the head and is elevated by a bandeau in front, taking a peculiarly beautiful line when the hat is equally well understood by both the designer and the wearer. Some very smart examples of this are in green and in black beaver.

Fashion decrees that the tailor made hat shall match the gown with which it is worn, but there is still a great liking for black, and with best gowns particularly picture hats can be very pretty and smart when all black.

The fashion of wearing headgear is also undergoing a change, and the tendency is to wear the hat much more off the face, so that it shows a great deal of the hair. The desired effect is gained by means of a high headband; otherwise the hats are flat, and the most chic are those with very little trimming. These hats with little in the way of decoration must be perfect in curve, with bold outlines. In fact, many of them are copies of the hats seen in Romney and Gainsborough paintings.

The cut shows a smart hat of black panne, with a lining of tucked chiffon. It is trimmed with a ruche of satin ribbon and a long, drooping ostrich plume. JUDIC CHOLLET.

DAINTY TOUCHES.

Little Things Which Transform a Gown.

There is a pretty notion in Paris just now to take away the straight appearance of the collar by little clusters of velvet ribbon on each side toward the front.

It is easier to remodel an old costume this season than ever before. For instance, an old sleeve may be made quite modish by cutting it at the elbow and putting in a puff of silk or lace.

The wide collars so universally becoming are a little out of date, but practically the same effect can be gained by strappings of velvet across the shoulders and a wide effect in trimming. High collars are the regulation thing, and only a few collarless models are seen, principally for evening wear.

The dainty house gown is of yellow net tucked and banded with ecru insertion. The fichu is edged with a wide ruffle of mechlin lace. The sleeves may be elbow length or have the two puffs shown with the ruffle at the wrist.

OLD FASHIONS THAT LIVE.

How Elizabethan and Medici Ruffs Appear In Today's Modes.

Rejuvenated fashions of long ago are much in favor. The high Elizabethan and medici ruffs are handsome and stately arrangements and are calculated to set off the beauty of woman. They are seen today in the round and high collars called medici and storm collars. If the ruff is on an outdoor garment, it is called a storm collar because it can be brought up against the face, protecting the neck and ears. If it is arranged for indoors, it is of lace or some delicate or else superbly rich material, but whichever way it is employed the collar makes a frame for the face, which women know is a great beautifier, and therefore they are loath to allow anything to take its place. As a dark and rich background gives a new value to a portrait, so does the medici fraise, as it was called in the olden time, add to the delicacy of a face.

In an old book of costumes beginning with the first invention in the way of Queen Margot. An old and modern ruff. Queen Elizabeth.

Medici fraise. Marie Stuart.
OLD FASHIONS THAT ARE USED TODAY.

dress I find the pictures herewith, and think them of sufficient interest to women to present them here. One picture shows Queen Elizabeth, and her sleeves are of peachblow satin, puffed and quilted with black velvet ribbons, which were as much liked in those days as now. Shoulder puffs added height and dignity, and these were crossed with satin straps which were held together with pearls. The wrists were finished with upturned cuffs of fine lace, and lace also edged the ruff, which stood high and wide in the back. Another picture shows the medici fraise, the ends of which are square, while the Elizabethan comes to a point at the neck. A fall of fine lace finishes it. Another collar shown is still smaller and is matched in material by a pretty and becoming Marie Stuart coif. There are several of these arrangements now made and being made for some of the smart set in New York, and they are to be worn at grand opera and many grand day functions. The woman of today seeks from every age and nation things for her own embellishment, and it seems that nothing comes amiss provided it has not become common. The Marie Stuart point over the brows has always been liked and is now about to have a real vogue in regular coifs. Another shape of a coif is shown, and this is made of rich blue velvet with strings of pearls around the edges and crossed on the soft, high crown. A small aigret of white marabou is placed at the left side. This picture represents the Queen Margot, and it is here also that the boa of today had its origin.

Boas of lace, tulle, chiffon and liberty, to say nothing of feathers, are exceedingly fashionable, and probably they will be so all winter, for there is much more warmth in them than the lay mind would believe.

After them come the fur boas, which differ materially from those of last year. They are longer and fuller and larger around. It would never do to allow the fashion to remain exactly the same, for where would the fur dealer find his account if they did? There are tippets, and they look just like those that are found in the same old book as dating from the sixteenth century. There are muffs of every kind from the plain dyed possum to sable and velvet with ribbon and fur trimmings.

The storm collars and collarettes are distinctly those of the old days, but copied in fur. The medici and Elizabethan shapes are as distinct now as then, which goes to prove that women are not so very fickle after all, when they stick to one fashion for over four centuries.

These fur storm collars and collarettes are certainly pretty and convenient. They have some new grace this season, though it is difficult to define it, but perhaps it lies in the clever way in which different furs have been combined. The body of the collarette will be of some close fur, like lamb, astrakhan or seal, and the border will be of mink, marten, Hudson bay sable, Alaska sable or some other soft and deep fur.

Some of them have seal for the center and miniver or chinchilla for the facing of the collar and revers. In one or two cases I saw fine black broadcloth for the outside of the collar with the finishing of rich skunk or Alaska sable. HENRIETTE ROUSSEAU

COPYRIGHT 1898 BY A. N. KELLOGG NEWSPAPER CO.

As he opened the bottle, Gielow eyed it like a famished beast. As he was taking it from a spoon from the doctor's hands, Hendricks peered out through the crack.

"I have the solution now," he remarked. "In cutting the new road along here, they came within a few feet of chopping the end off this cavern. The blasting caused the crack. He must have thrust his message through it."

Gielow nodded as he ate, but he made no comment.

"Now, that is enough for the present," said Lampkin. "We must get you out of here and warm you up before we do anything else."

They raised the artist to his feet, and bore him slowly between them along the dark passage, and up the dark stairs to the hall above.

"WE HAVE FOUND HIM."

"We'll take him straight to Kola's room and wrap him up," said the doctor.

CHAPTER XXI.

When they had put him in a big soft bed in the chamber adjoining Kola's reception room, Hendricks went out to the carriage. The green curtain was still down, but he saw that it was pulled aside, and that the occupant was peering cautiously out. When she saw him coming, she opened the carriage door and looked anxiously into his face.

Hendricks smiled.

"Gielow is safe," he said. "He is weak, of course, but he will pull through all right."

She seemed unable either to answer or to move. The stare of her eyes seemed to indicate doubt on her part as to the verity of the news.

"I think you might come in, if you wish," added Hendricks. "We have put him to bed, and the doctor is preparing something warm for him."

Without a word, she got out of the carriage, and dumbly followed him. As they were ascending the steps, she paused half-way up the flight and looked at Hendricks pitifully, and then down at her feet. Her knees bent and she clutched his arm.

"I—I don't know what's the matter with me," she faltered. "I don't seem able to move. Oh, please pardon my weakness."

"It's the shock," said Hendricks, almost tenderly. "You must try to calm yourself. All the trouble is over, you know, and the prisoner is in chains."

"I thought something serious had happened," she said, slowly recovering. "I heard the crash, and then, as you did not appear, and the sergeant remained. I thought something was wrong."

"Perhaps you had better go back to the carriage and not try to go in," suggested Hendricks.

The remark seemed to rouse her to action.

"Oh, no, I must see him! I can help," and, releasing his arm, she mounted the steps unaided.

Hendricks led her to the door of the room where they had taken Gielow. Lampkin appeared on the threshold.

"He's begging to see you, Miss Huntington," said he.

He pushed the door open, and when she had gone in he closed it and stood facing Hendricks. For a moment they looked into each other's eyes without speaking. Then Hendricks turned away abruptly.

He went into a little alcove off the big reception-room, and, glancing at Denham and the sleeping Indian, he rang the telephone.

He ordered from the nearest police station a patrol wagon, for the prisoner, and an ambulance, with all the comforts available, for the transportation of an invalid. Then he came and looked down at Kola's face.

"I presume you found Gielow pretty bad off," remarked Denham. There was something in his tone which showed vast respect for Hendricks.

Hendricks nodded, and then he stretched his hand over Kola to the young officer.

"My boy, you saved three lives this morning, and showed the sort of stuff you are made of. I shall never forget you. You won't lose by it. I shall speak to your chief about you. If he ever goes back on you, or you need employment, come to me."

Denham flushed to the roots of his hair.

"Thank you, Mr. Hendricks," he said, feelingly.

At this juncture the Indian opened his eyes and stared fixedly at Hendricks.

"I hate you, Hendricks," were his first words.

"Flies seem to do the same thing in the summer," answered Hendricks, drily, "but I manage to get along. I am not bald-headed."

"If you will guarantee safety to me," said Kola, after a moment's deliberation, "I will restore Gielow to you. He may be alive yet, but if I do not reveal the secret of his hiding-place he will never see the light of day. I tell you I am positively the only living possessor of the secret."

Hendricks' face wore a comical expression. He glanced at Denham and said:

"Rich, isn't it?"

Denham nodded, and Kola's bead-like eyes rolled back and forth wonderingly as his gaze vibrated between them.

"It is not an unreasonable request," said he.

"You forget," replied Hendricks, suavely, "that you have already courteously volunteered all the information necessary. You are a gem, Count Bantinni. You actually do so many good deeds that you forget about them. You, of course, remember telling us about the head of the dragon, the lantern, the stone stairs, the long cavern, and the cell at the end."

Kola's face darkened. He reflected a moment and then said:

"I see you made me talk unconsciously. I acknowledge that you have undone me completely."

He sat up and his handcuffs clanked as he folded his hands over his knee.

"Is Gielow alive?" he questioned.

"Thanks, yes;" said Hendricks.

"Well, I am glad of that, anyway. He stood between me and my desire, that's all I had against him."

SMALL PAY FOR HARD WORK.

Women in the Government Treasury Department Who Are Poorly Recompensed.

In the great printing office at Washington where the government paper currency is prepared for circulation there are some very skillful women who receive only small pay. This is notably true of those who inspect and count the sheets of bills as they come from the presses, says the Chicago Chronicle. Every sheet contains four bills, each of which must be perfect. If there is ever so small a spot or flaw in the printing the bill is rejected. These women have to be experts who have served in all the capacities from printer's assistant up, until they can detect in an instant a flaw which would not be seen by the untrained eye. They inspect and count 16,000 sheets of bills a day, and their compensation is $660 a year; they have to pass rigid examinations before they can get into the service at all.

Persons who suffer from the heat in summer should be comforted whenever they lick a postage stamp, for the girls who put the sticking material upon that stamp are in a much warmer place. During the average warm day in Washington the thermometer stands at 110 degrees in the big room where the government's stamps are coated with glue. The sheets of stamps are run through long boxes filled with very hot air in order to dry them thoroughly, and these heated boxes raise the temperature of the room in spite of open windows and many electric fans.

SAVAGE COLONY IN INDIA.

A Tribe in Madras That Eats Game Killed by Hunters Without Cooking It.

In the Nellore district of the Madras presidency live the Yanadis, a strange tribe, as may be seen from a report which has been issued by the authorities of the Madras Government museum. The live in forests, and that they are little removed from savagery is indicated by the absence of implemental or monumental material, the animistic nature of their religion, the primitive hunting and fishing methods followed by many of the tribe, and the habit of eating the almost raw flesh of the game they kill after slightly heating or scorching it. They are fearless in catching cobras, which they draw out of their holes without fear of their fangs, and it is supposed that they protect themselves against the effects of snake bites by swallowing the poison sacs of the snakes. Especially singular is the manner in which they produce fire by friction. For this purpose they prepare two sticks, one short, the other long. In the former a square cavity is made, and it is held firmly in the ground while the long stick is twirled rapidly to and fro in the hole. Instead of charcoal powder they use rags, or even dried leaves, which they find little difficulty in lighting.

paint is usable. To be worth putting on it must be durable, and to be durable it must be top quality. The general war of wind, sun and rain upon houses knows no cessation or truce. Paint is the main defense. Put your faith in something that will not fail you. A reliable article at a top price is cheaper than something else sold way down.

TRADE CONDITIONS.

Heavy Demands For Iron and Steel Relieved Slightly by Imports.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Voluntary increases in wages by some of the largest railway systems in the country bear eloquent testimony to the amount of business handled in the past and emphasize the confidence of officials in continued heavy traffic. Moreover, by this addition of large sums to the purchasing power of railway employees there is assurance of a larger demand for all staple lines of merchandise. There is no relief to the congestion of railway traffic nor any immediate prospect of free movement at the points of most serious blockade.

Orders are now coming forward for iron and steel products that have been held back many months in expectation of an easier market. Instead of making concessions, however, producers ask premiums for early delivery and hesitate to accept contracts where material and fuel are not in sight.

Imports relieve some departments of the metal industry. Plans for constructive work are now increasing, and a very large tonnage of structural material will be required. As the present congestion is due to inadequate facilities the most importunate inquiry is for railway equipment. Activity is notable at works making agricultural implements.

Heavy lines of dry goods and footwear need the stimulus of cold weather. A fairly steady demand is reported for staple cotton goods, but buyers are taking only for immediate requirements.

A day of thanksgiving for abundant harvests is especially opportune. Crops have largely surpassed all records, and despite the rapid growth of domestic requirements there will be a liberal surplus for export. Producers are additionally fortunate in the certainty of profitable prices, which has not usually been the case in years of heavy production.

Failures for the week numbered 266 in the United States against 218 last year and 24 in Canada compared with 31 a year ago.

PEACE FOR COLOMBIA.

General Herrera and Government Commissioners Sign Treaty.

PANAMA, Nov. 22.—Consul General Gudger has just landed from the Wisconsin, bringing the news that a treaty of peace has been signed by the revolutionary general Herrera and the government commissioners.

General Herrera's action follows closely on the recent surrender of General Uribe-Uribe to the government forces. General Uribe-Uribe has been recognized as probably the foremost of the rebel leaders, and his surrender was a source of great satisfaction to the Colombians, as, in their opinion, it meant the termination of all organized armed resistance to the government in the interior of Colombia.

Once peace has been declared, the Colombian congress will decide regarding the laws for the Panama canal and the elections and also the paper money question, as this is the wish of the president and of the whole nation.

Boxers Threaten "Foreign Devils."

VICTORIA, B. C., Nov. 22.—Advices have been received from south China that the Kwangsi rebels have invaded Kweichow province, proclaiming their object to ravage Kweichow province, but, as their placards put it, only to borrow a passage to Szechuen, whither they are bound to assist the Boxers of that province. They invaded Hsingyihsien, in Kweichow, which fell into their hands, and many of the villagers, who had held out for eight days, were slaughtered. The Boxers in Szechuen are posting placards in the villages stating that, with the authority of Tao Chuin, their patron, and at the will of the sage Confucius, they will fulfill the will of heaven by murdering all the foreign devils in China who continue to propagate their doctrines and exterminate all who enter their churches or become their followers.

IT WAS OF THANKSGIVING

SOCIAL HELD BY EPWORTH LEAGUERS OF FIRST M. E. CHURCH.

Rural Decorations and a Thanksgiving Programme Gave the Proper Atmosphere.

An atmosphere of Thanksgiving day was prevalent in Vincent chapel, last evening, when the Epworth League, of the First M. E. church, gave another of its unique socials. This time it was termed a Thanksgiving social and the entire programme, arrangements and decorations combined to sustain. A rural aspect was lent the place by the decorations of hay and corn husks, while the only light came from candles and barn lanterns. Admission to the chapel was gained on presentation of a potato.

A programme was rendered, consisting of piano selections by Mrs. Frances Rittenhouse, vocal solos by Miss Helen Shupp and Elmer E. Cutting, reading of President Roosevelt's Thanksgiving proclamation by James R. Joy, reading of poems of Edward Everitt Hale by Miss Gertrude Snodgrass, and the reading of a paper on the first Thanksgiving dinner by Miss L. W. Stafford. Refreshments of pumpkin pie, cheese, milk and popcorn were served at the close.

The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. James A. Stafford, chairman, assisted by the Misses Gertrude Fenno, Nina Wilson, Gertrude Snodgrass, Mary Smith and Lizzie Stafford and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Crone, David S. Dunavan, Albert Steiner, William Pike, Lewis Schutt, John Lewis, James A. Stafford and James R. Joy. Many of the members of the committee were dressed in Puritan costume.

MONMOUTH FOLK WANT THAT COUNTY DIVIDED

Shore Portions of County Will Make a Strong Fight for a New County.

BUT FREEHOLD OBJECTS

SUBJECT WILL PROBABLY COME BEFORE THE NEXT LEGISLATURE.

Branch Court Established at Long Branch Declared Illegal—Freehold is Well Pleased—Prospects of a Very Hot Fight.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Long Branch, Nov. 22—Mutterings are again heard in this vicinity of a storm which may give New Jersey a twenty-second county. It is well within the possibilities that a bill will be introduced in the next Legislature to divide Monmouth. Public discussion over this matter has been intensified by the Supreme Court's decision last week, declaring unconstitutional the act of last winter which established a branch court at Long Branch.

This act was a compromise. The shore towns furnish, and have for years furnished, the bulk of the business which occupies the court at Freehold, the county seat. Freehold is hardly more than an overgrown village when compared to Long Branch or Asbury Park. The shore cities naturally contend that the county seat should be near the centre of population, but Freehold has resisted successfully all attempts to have the county seat moved. For years there have been ominous rumors that the short districts would attempt a division of the county. Last winter the differences between the summer resort and the country districts became so sharply defined that a compromise was felt necessary. The branch court act resulted, although even that was bitterly fought by the Freehold people.

The court has been in operation since last spring, and has been eminently successful. A building was leased from Judge Wilbur A. Heisley for court purposes, and it had been confidently expected that a jail would also be placed here. The news of the Supreme Court's decision came as a thunderbolt. The decision annuls the lease of Judge Heisley, which was for twenty years.

In Freehold general satisfaction with the decision of the Supreme Court is expressed, and the lawyers there are preparing to fight bitterly any attempt to divide the county. Division is heartily urged, both here and in Asbury Park. If a new county is formed Long Branch will probably be the county seat. This has always been a stumbling block in the way of organized effort to divide Monmouth, Asbury Park thinking its claims for the county seat at least equal to those of Long Branch. It is understood now, however, that Asbury Park will co-operate in a division scheme with the understanding that if success is met Long Branch is to be the county seat.

The objection to Freehold as the county seat is its inaccessibility. The place can only be reached from the shore over a single-track railroad, and in the winter months the train service is poor. The interests of the shore are entirely foreign to those of the county, and the former does not insist upon a transfer of the county seat, but rather urges a peaceable division of the two sections.

ROBBED BARBER SHOP.

Stole All the Razors, An Overcoat, Cigars and Cigarettes.

Today's business at the barber shop of Charles Suhr, located on North avenue, was seriously handicapped by a visit burglars paid the place sometime last night. Everyone of the proprietor's twenty-three razors was taken together with an overcoat and a quantity of cigars and cigarettes. Entrance was gained by removing a pane of glass from a rear window. The matter was reported to the police and the department has secured several clues which are being followed up.

Plaintiff From Morristown.

Suit has been instituted in Justice Mosher's court by R. C. Bartley & Company, of Morristown, against A. A. Stryker, of this city, on demand for $100. The matter will be heard December 1. George Ball is counsel for the plaintiffs.

PRIZE GIVEN TO WINNER

AT BOYS' DEPARTMENT SOCIAL AT Y. M. C. A. LAST EVENING.

'Twas Too Warm for "Log Fire" Social, But the Boys Had Good Time Nevertheless.

The members of the boys' department of the Young Men's Christian Association, who joined the department since October, enjoyed a delightful social in the boys' rooms of the Y. M. C. A. last evening, when twenty-eight were present. The affair was arranged and given by the social committee and every detail of the evening's programme was carried out with very pleasing results.

Graphophone selections were rendered during the evening and the prize offered in the boys' ping pong tournament was awarded to William Lambert, who scored the highest points. The prize was a very handsomely burnt racquet on which was burnt the words: "William Lambert, Y. M. C. A. Ping Pong Tournament, November, 1902."

Refreshments were served by the committee who were Arthur Van Arsdale, LeRoy Woodhull, William Lambert and Edmund Temple. It was planned to hold a "log fire" social but the weather was so warm that this scheme was abandoned. The affair was a great success. The arrangements were looked after by the boys' secretary, Kenneth Robbie.

An Open Letter.

To Christmas Shoppers:—The season of Christmas shopping is approaching. "Cruelties, in the form of overwork among children and women, travesty the festival of rejoicing over the coming of the Holy Child."

In very many cases horses are treated better than human beings. Last year a driver was compelled to work so many hours delivering goods that it was 3 o'clock in the morning before he reached home, while the horse had been changed once en route. The day's work was about twice as much for the man as for the horse. A boy of sixteen, after delivering packages until late at night, was so exhausted that he lay down in the wagon, pulled a horse blanket over him and slept in the stable. He was found frozen to death on New Year's morning

The Consumers' League appeals to all women to do their shopping as early in the season as possible. Do it early in the day, and do not insist that goods be delivered on the same day as purchased. Do not patronize the stores at night.

An amelioration of the hardships of the holiday season may thus be secured.

Yours, in the name of humanity,
The Consumers' League of New Jersey. Hariette J. Hifton,
Nov. 20, 1902. Secretary.

LIBRARY'S BEST AIDS FOR CHARITY WORKERS

Exhibit of Books On "Practical Philanthropy" Held at Public Library Saturday.

THE FIRST OF A SERIES

LIST OF THE BEST BOOKS RELATING TO THIS WORK.

Divided Into Four Sets, Working Classes, Social Reform, Dependent Classes, Christianity and Social Reform—Other Details.

The first of a series of public exhibits to be given at the Public Library attracted a goodly number of people there Saturday afternoon and evening. The subject, "Practical Philanthropy," is just now interesting a great many persons who are engaged in charitable enterprises. As very aptly expressed at the exhibit, the work of charity is today being carried on along vastly different lines than a few years ago. The tendency now is toward the most practical and it was for this purpose that the exhibit was held.

Some of the very best books relating to this work were placed in the exhibit They were divided into four sets under the following captions: "Working Classes—plans for their social and economic betterment," "Social Reform—six good stories dealing with social reform," "Dependent Classes—Asuggestive list of books, especially recommended," and "Christianity and Social Reform." Miss Mary Whiton was in charge of the first division, Miss Florence Tweedy the second, Miss Mary Tweedy the third and Miss Emily Tracy the fourth.

As previously stated the exhibit was one of great suggestive value to all who are engaged in philanthropic or religious work of any sort and had a tendency of enlighten those in this work. These books do not represent the library's entire list of books on this subject but are simply the very best ones. Special mention is made of the proceedings of the National Conference of Charities and Correction, presented by Mason W. Tyler. These are considered the very best authority on the subject.

Among the books shown were those treating with charity organization work for boys and girls, friendly visiting, consumers leagues, settlement work, child labor, housing of the poor, lives of philanthropists, stories dealing with social problems, liquor problem, prison reform, Sunday-schools, etc.

For the benefit of those wishing to seek further information on the subject of organized charity through the use of the books in the library, the list of the best books are herewith given under their respective heading:

CLASS RECEPTION.

Juniors of City High School Gave a Pleasant Social Gathering Saturday Evening.

Franklin Hall was the scene of a very pleasant social gathering, Saturday evening on the occasion of the sociable given by the junior class of the City High School.

Though the rain kept many away, each of the four classes of the school was well represented and all who came enjoyed a very pleasant time.

In the early part of the evening, several informal charades were given by different members of the class under the direction of VanWyck Brooks, the class president. An informal dance brought the evening's entertainment to a pleasant close.

Candy, cake and lemonade was served by a committee composed of Miss Frances VanDeventer, chairman and the Misses Helen Robbins, Laura Bent, Grace Wilcox, Eloise Haven, Mae Batchellor, and Antoinette Moodey. The committee in charge of the affair was Miss Elizabeth Phillips, chairman, VanWyck Brooks, Francis Anderson, Miss Mae Batchellor, Harold Fenno and George L. Babcock.

SAID JONES TAUGHT THEM

YOUNG GAMBLERS TOLD THEIR STORY IN CITY COURT.

Had Been Shooting Crap—Other Offenders Before City Judge This Morning.

Plainfield has a modern Fagan, if reliance can be placed in the stories of a number of small boys arraigned in the city court, this morning, on charges of crap shooting, only his offense is not as great as that of Dickens' character. The prisoners were Ray Hall, John Caufield, Jerry Gorman and Nathan Pollard, who were arrested in Fairchild's alley, by Patrolman McCarthy, last evening.

With one accord they declared "Conjunction" Jones, well-known in police circles, taught them the game and that he sometimes assisted them in getting rid of their pennies. Some good advice was given the young gamblers by City Judge Runyon before they were discharged and the police will arrest Conjunction and also William Roy and Lewis Miller who were said to be in last night's game.

Other prisoners arraigned at this morning's session were Charles Adams for drunkenness on West Third street, Saturday night, sentence suspended; Timothy McCarthy for drunkenness, arrested Saturday night, fined $3 and Michael Fitzsimmons, arrested Saturday evening, by Patrolman McGinley as he was attempting to force an entrance to a house on West Third street, not his own, fined $3.

FOOTBALL NOT TO BLAME.

Although Arthur Williams Had It Under His Arm When He Fell.

Arthur Williams, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Williams, of Plainfield avenue, is detained at his home from the result of a peculiar accident which befell him Saturday afternoon.

He was running out of F. C. Lounsbury's yard, carrying a football. While passing down the front walk, which was a trifle slippery owing to the presence of moss, he fell on his shoulder and fractured his collar-bone. Young Williams was accompanied by companions, and the injured lad was taken to his home at once. He suffered intense pain, but it was not until Dr. Boone was the extent of the injury known. The physician discovered the break, reset it and now the lad is doing as well as can be expected.

Made Trouble for Cars.

Traffic on the Scotch Plains trolley line was seriously inconvenienced all day, yesterday, by a defective frog in the switch on East Second street, near Richmond. Cars frequently leaped off the rails and last evening No. 77 headed for the sidewalk and delayed traffic nearly an hour. The switch will be replaced.

ALIS TEAM OUTPLAYED ORANGE FIELD CLUB

Crack Junior Team Went Down Before the Superior Strength of Alis' Eleven.

THE SCORE WAS 19 TO 0

PLUCKY FIGHT PUT UP BY ORANGE BOYS AGAINST HEAVY ODDS.

Alis A. A. Had Plenty of Substitutes in the Game—Pond Played Great Game—Carrying an Orange Crack Over the Line for a Safety.

The Alis A. A. football team, or that part of it which was not at New Haven attending the game between Yale and Harvard, met and defeated the Orange Field Club Saturday afternoon on Hope Common by a score of 19 to 0. There was a large number of spectators at the game until the rain began to fall after which the game was called just before the end of the second half. The Orange Field Club was very greatly outweighed.

At 3:30 the game was called and Orange kicked off to Alis and the ball was caught by Davis. Then Orange got the ball and tried line plunges. Alis forced the Orange boys to kick.

They kicked to H. Smith and the ball being passed to Phillips was carried back forty yards. Cathcart fumbled but finally recovered it at the forty yard line. Then Cathcart, through right end, took the ball for a touchdown but Phillips did not kick the goal. Score, 5-0.

Orange kicked to Alis and Pond, who was being closed in on by the Orange Field Club, made a phenominal kick in which he sent the ball down to almost the goal line where C. Smith fell on it. Orange tried to work it down the field but was forced to kick. H Smith made a touchdown and the goal being kicked by Phillips made the score 11-0.

Orange kicked to Alis and Pond ran ten yards and kicked the ball to the goal line where Sherwin fell on it. Orange punted to the twenty-five yard line and Wilson ran it back twenty yards, when Pond, through center, made a run of ten yards. Pond kicked the ball from the thirty-five yard line but the Orange getting the ball rushed it back fifteen yards. Pond then made his humorous play by picking one of the O. F. C. men up and shoving him across the line thus making a safety which gained the Alis two points, making the score 13-0.

Orange Field Club kicked to Alis and then when the ball came back into the hands of the Orange boys the game was called for the first half.

Orange kicked to Alis and then Phillips made a clever run and tossed the ball to Pike who scored a touchdown. The goal being kicked by Phillips made the score 19-0. The game then continued for a few minutes when, on account of the rain, the game was called.

The lineups were:

YOUNG HUNTER SHOT HIS TOE

Leslie Sharp Tripped While Running a Rabbit and Shot Off His Own Toe.

RIDDLED WITH SHOT

His Companion, Phillip VanArsdale, Stopped Flow of Blood and Helped Injured Lad to His Home Lives at 310 West Front Street —Son of Postal Clerk Sharp.

The second accident of the local hunting season occurred in Washington valley, Saturday afternoon, when Leslie Sharp, the twevle-year-old son of William B. Sharp, the money order clerk of the local postoffice, while pursuing a large rabbit, tripped and shot himself through the right large toe. The member was riddled with shot and was completely shattered.

He was alone at the time; his companion, Phillip VanArsdale, being some distance ahead trying to head off the game. On hearing the cry of pain from his comrade, VanArsdale rushed to his assistance and found that he was bleeding profusely from the wound. He tied a string about the member and thus stopped the flow of blood. He then ran to a nearby house and sent word into town for a cab which met the two lads slowly making their way into town.

The lad was taken to the office of Dr. Hedges where the member was dressed and placed in bandages. Afterwards the boy was taken to his home at 310 West Front street where he is reported to be resting comfortably.

LORD BISHOP HERE.

Came to Plainfield on His Arrival From England, But Was Too Fatigued to Preach.

Right Reverend, The Lord Bishop of Thetford, D. D., D. C. L., Suffragan Bishop of Norwich, was the guest yesterday afternoon and evening of Arthur Masters, of Third place, the latter having known the eminent churchman all his life. It was expected that he would preach at Grace Episcopal church yesterday morning, but he did not arrive in New York until 9 o'clock and it was impossible for him to reach Plainfield in time. He came to this city about 1 o'clock and during the afternoon remained with Mr. Masters. In the evening he took tea at the home of Charles King, of Watchung avenue.

The Lord Bishop came to this country upon the invitation of Bishop Potter to represent the Church of England at an Episcopal convention of foreign missions to be held in New York next week. He will be in this country until December 13, the day he sails for home, and Mr. Masters hopes to be able to have the Lord Bishop return to Plainfield and preach at Grace church. He attended service at Grace church last evening, occupying a seat in the chancel. He did not preach as he was obliged to leave on an early train for New York.

Contest Will be Concluded Next Saturday—W. T. Glenney Can Not be Beaten for Boys' Cup Now—Saturday's Scores.

The friends of Howard deP. Wright were disappointed in his play for the Golf Committee cup at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course, Saturday. He held the lead with twenty and one-half points, but E. T. Newkirk won first honors and he now is in the lead with twenty-one and one-sixth points, while Wright drops to second position. There were only five contestants for this cup, Saturday, and Wright finished last. Second honors fell to Olaf Saugstad, who made a net score of 77, while H. W. Beebe secured third honors with a 79.

IMPRESSIVE FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. STEBBINS THIS AFTERNOON.

Six Hundred Employes of Pond Tool Works Attended Funeral— Rev. Mr. McKelvey Officiated.

The funeral services of Mrs. Albert C. Stebbins were held this afternoon from the late home on West Seventh street, where an unusually large number of people gathered to show their respect and esteem to one who was greatly admired for her true womanly character. All of the employes, six hundred, from the Pond Machine Tool Works, of which Mr. Stebbins is the vice president, attended the services, showing their high regard for their esteemed employer in the sad hour of his bereavement.

The services were conducted by Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, who spoke impressively. During the services, "Nearer My God to Thee" and "I Do Not Understand," were sung effectively by Elmer E. Runyon, Elmer D. Cutting and Wm. N. Runyon.

There was a profusion of floral tributes from a great many friends, the most noticeable of which were two handsome pieces from the employes of the Pond Machine Tool Works. One was a column, six feet high, made up of sacred lilies, American Beauty roses, stervia, white narcissus, smilax, violets, ferns, galax leaves and tied with white satin ribbon. The other piece was a large pillow consisting of most of the flowers of which the column was made. On each piece was the inscription, "From the Employes of The Pond Machine Tool Works." They bore silent, but impressive testimony of high esteem in which Mrs. Stebbins was held.

The interment took place in Hillside cemetery. The pall-bearers were Elliott T. Barrows, W. A. Pinto, Isaac W. Rushmore and I. L. Manning.

BAPTIST CHURCH FAIR CAME TO A CLOSE

Three Days Bazaar at Old Rockfellow Store Will Net Over $400 for Church.

SATURDAY ENDED IT

F. T. OSTROM CONDUCTED THE AUCTION WHICH WAS A FEATURE.

Was Given by the Ladies' Aid Society, Assisted by Members of Christian Endeavor Society of Park Ave. Baptist Church.

The bazaar, which was conducted by the women of the Park Avenue Baptist church, for the benefit of the church, during the latter part of the past week, came to a successful close Saturday evening in the store formerly occupied by G. W. Rockfellow at the corner of Park avenue and Fourth street. Considering the stormy weather, the attendance was large and, as was the case during the entire run of the fair, the patronage was generous. When the fair had closed and the proceeds had been counted up for the three days' run, it was found that the women had taken in a little over $500, which was better than they anticipated. Out of this amount the expenses will have to be aid which will leave a net profit of about $440.

A feature of the closing of the fair was an auction, during which those articles which were not disposed of during the term of the fair. The auctioneer was F. T. Ostrom, who brought good prices as a result of his clever manner of presenting the goods for sale. After the auction sale it was found that there were a few fancy articles which remained unsold and these will be disposed of at a tea which the women of the Ladies' Aid Society will hold after the holidays, when the bride doll, which was to have been disposed of Saturday evening, will be sold.

The bazaar was held and conducted by the Ladies' Aid Society, assisted by the members of the Christian Endeavor Society. The officers of the Ladies' Aid Society, who planned the decorations which, as described in The Daily Press, were distinctly unique and very attractive, were: President, Mrs. F. T. Ostrom; first vice president, Mrs. L. A. Udale; second vice president, Mrs. Walter H. Freeman; secretary, Miss Carrie Dunham; treasurer, Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson.

CAPTAIN HOBSON.

Lectures on "The United States As a World Power" at Casino Tonight.

The lecture to be given by Capt. Richmond Pearson Hobson, U. S. N., at the Casino this evening, will be one of great interest. His subject is "The United States as a World Power," but in addition to this, he will give many details of his world renowned deed at Santiago during the late Spanish-American War.

When it was known that Cervera's fleet was in the harbor the late Rear-Admiral Sampson conceived the idea of effectually sealing it up and thus prevent any possibility of escape. Volunteers were called for to lead the daring expedition and the first to respond was the then Lieutenant Hobson.

It was not necessary to tell the young lieutenant that he took his life in his hands, and that whether the plan failed or not he probably would not return alive. He knew that, and knowing, was willing to offer his young life as a sacrifice on the altar of his country. How the world regarded this feat, is well known. Success crowned his efforts, and his story is worth hearing. Tickets and reserved seats are on sale at Armstrong's.

PREVENTED BAD FIRE.

Emanuel Schloss Saw a Blazing Lamp and Threw it Out.

What might have led to a serious fire was discovered and extinguished by Emanuel Schloss at the home of Mrs. Lindsey on West Front street, last evening about 8:30 o'clock. Mrs. Lindsey had lighted the hall lamp at her home and during her absence the flame rose to a dangerous height. It was at this time that Mr. Schloss was passing. He entered the house through a window and threw the lamp out doors, just as Mrs. Lindsey returned home. The damage was slight.

—The regular consecration meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church will be held this evening at 8 o'clock. The subject will be "Thanksgiving and Thanksliving."

ELIOT ON UNIONISM.

Harvard's President Gives His Views on Labor Question.

UNION'S STRONG AND WEAK POINTS

Mission of Organized Workingmen to Uplift and Benefit, but Their Usefulness Is Hindered by Certain Evils.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 24.—In an address at a private meeting of the Colonial club of this city, a report of which is just given out, President Eliot made a comprehensive statement of his views on labor unions. He said that the work of the labor unions must be counted among the efforts to make the lot of mankind more satisfying and happier and that their strength lay in their belief in this work as their mission. He then enumerated the conditions which he designated as humane conditions of employment, those to which laboring men may rightly aspire. First was a rising wage based on increased experience, attainments and age; second, steady employment after adequate probation; third, the opportunity for the workingman to establish a permanent home; fourth, conditions which enable him to give his employer generous service and to take pride in it, and, fifth, the right to a pension on disability, which gives throughout life relief from one great anxiety and that public consideration which goes with a steady job and a self respecting, though humble or unobserved, career.

These five conditions of humane employment, Mr. Eliot said, were realized today in Harvard university. Plainly they were not realized in the great American industries employing unskilled labor, where the terms of service were often those of "instant dismissal." Another serious difficulty with American employment was that it was spasmodic. Complaints from employees were often made the ground for dismissal.

The present antagonism of employers and the unions was the fault of both parties, but on the whole the former were more to blame because their situation was more comfortable and their education superior. The industrial community was under many obligations to unions for the evils they have mitigated, such as poor sanitary conditions in factories, an unreasonable number of hours of work, child labor and the company store. The oligarchy of capital had combined effectively, and the corresponding combination of laboring men was a wholesome check upon that oligarchy.

There was no question but that the labor union had come to stay. On the other hand, its cause was injured by certain evils which were subversive of fundamental American doctrines of liberty. One of these evils was the limit placed on the number of apprentices, whereas in the learned professions every encouragement was given to the training of novices. Other evils were the limitation of output, which destroys the self respect of the efficient workman, and the uniform wage, which has a cruel reaction on the less capable workman because, with a uniform wage, he loses his job at every slack in business, whereas if he were paid according to his earning capacity his employer could afford to keep him the year around. A fourth evil was the violence which was an inevitable feature of every strike in industries employing unskilled labor. The skilled laborer on strike had no right to act upon unless it was the boycott, which was a cruel, cowardly interference with the rights of all the people.

A Large American Built Ship.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—The new steamer Siberia, one of the largest vessels thus far built in America, has reached this port direct from the yards of her builders at Newport News. The vessel, which is intended for the trans-pacific passenger trade between San Francisco and Hongkong by way of Yokohama, Nagasaki and Shanghai, was built by the Newport News Shipbuilding company for the Pacific Mail Steamship company. The vessel was launched Oct. 20 of last year and has a displacement of 18,600 tons. She has a length of 572 feet and 4 inches, a beam of 63 feet and a draft of 27 feet. Her contract speed is eighteen knots, but with her 18,000 horsepower it is expected that she will be able to make twenty knots easily.

Selection of Archbishop Postponed.

ROME, Nov. 24.—The decision of the propaganda regarding the appointment of a new archbishop of Chicago to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Archbishop Feehan has been postponed, principally on account of objections received from several American bishops concerning the doctrines held by Bishop Spalding. It has now been decided that the question shall be discussed at the meeting of the propaganda on Dec. 15. Bishop Spalding continues to be considered the most likely candidate for the post.

CASEY PEACEMAKER

American Admiral Helped Adjust Colombian Differences.

HISTORIC SCENE ON THE WISCONSIN

Troops Being Sent Home—Revolutionary Leader Vargas Sends Congratulations to Herrera—Political Prisoners Freed.

PANAMA, Nov. 24.—The Star and Herald says that at the conference on board the Wisconsin a distinguished son of Uncle Sam, Rear Admiral Silas Casey, acted as a mediator and peacemaker, which conduct, it remarks, reflects great credit on a nation whose motives for doing good are too frequently disparaged.

Admiral Casey in a brilliant speech extended to the negotiators his heartfelt good wishes, highly praising them for their good judgment and patriotism and their arrangement of such an extremely delicate matter.

General Cobas, chief of Minister of State Perdomo's staff, who spoke in very good English, made an eloquent reply to this speech and in the name of Colombia thanked the gallant admiral for the hospitality and attention the negotiators had received on board his flagship and also for his generous intervention in the arrangement to bring about peace in that zone of Colombian territory.

It is said that the impassioned patriotic utterances of General Cobas brought tears to the eyes of General Herrera.

Troops are already being sent away. Nearly 1,000 men left last night for Barranquilla. As soon as the revolutionary gunboat Padilla arrives here the troops in the Cauca province will be sent to Buenaventura, on the bay of Choco.

General Herrera and his secretaries have arrived at Agua Dulce, accompanied by a government commissioner bringing the news of the conclusion of peace to the gunboat Bogota in order to prevent a fight with the Padilla should they meet. General Salazar, governor of Panama, has set all the political prisoners at liberty.

The commander of the British cruiser Phaeton offered General Salazar to communicate the news of the treaty of peace to Captain Marmaduke, the commander of the Bogota. The offer was accepted, and the Phaeton has sailed.

General Vargas Pleased With Result.

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica, Nov. 24.—General Vargas Santos, the military director of the Colombian revolution, has sent the following message to General Herrera on the occasion of the signature of the treaty of peace at Panama: "Let us congratulate ourselves. I have full confidence in you. May this solemn act establish a true republic." In an interview General Santos said: "My hopes have been realized regarding the termination of the war if the solemn treaties insure the rights of the Liberals as citizens of my country. I am satisfied that the hard lesson that has been received by the Liberals and the Conservatives in the fighting of the past thirty-seven months will never be forgotten. When I have received a copy of the peace treaty, I shall decide as to my future movements. I have received many congratulatory telegrams." General Vargas shows remarkable energy considering his advanced age of seventy-two years.

Saloon Wrecked by Dynamite.

MAHANOY CITY, Pa., Nov. 24.—The most destructive dynamiting outrage that has occurred in the coal regions since the strike began was perpetrated here at 5 o'clock yesterday morning. The dynamite, with fuse attached, was placed on the bar of the saloon of Christopher Portland. The front part of the building was blown across the street, and the adjoining buildings on either side were badly wrecked. Windows were broken in every house in the square. Portland and the other members of the family were sleeping on the third floor and escaped without serious injury, although all were thrown from their beds. Portland's two sons are nonunion men and worked during the strike.

Freight Blockade Relieved.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 24.—After thirty-six hours of the most strenuous activity on the part of greatly augmented forces of men and locomotives the Pennsylvania railroad system has made a comparative clearing up of its congested terminals. The car movement breaks all records for a similar time. It is estimated that during the twenty-four hours ending at 5 o'clock Monday morning 929 trains, consisting of 46,225 cars, were moved in and out of Pittsburg as follows: Pennsylvania railroad, 294 trains, 14,700 cars; Fort Wayne, 180 trains, 9,000 cars; Panhandle, 245 trains, 12,025 cars; Baltimore and Ohio, 90 trains, 4,500 cars; Pittsburg and Lake Erie, 120 trains, 6,000 cars. The estimated tonnage is 1,756,550 tons.

Cornerstone Laying at Akron.

AKRON, O., Nov. 24.—The Ohio grand lodge of Free and Accepted Masons yesterday laid the cornerstone of the new Akron City hospital. Dr. W. A. Belt of Kenton, grand master of Ohio, was in charge. Prominent members of the order from throughout the state assisted. The hospital will cost $100,000 and is the gift of two wealthy residents of this city, Messrs. O. C. Barber and Colonel George T. Perkins.

Former Queen Lil in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Former Queen Liliuokalani of Hawaii has arrived in Washington to remain for some time. She was accompanied by her maid and by John D. Aimoku. She is seeking favorable action by congress on measures for her relief.

COAL STRIKE SETTLEMENT.

Independent Operators at Sea—Commission Proposed Agreement.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 24.—The position to be taken by the independent coal operators with regard to the tentative agreement between the large coal companies and the mine workers to settle their dispute outside the anthracite coal strike commission, but with the conciliatory assistance of the arbitrators, has not yet been definitely decided upon. The independents had a meeting at which were present the representatives of about twenty-six companies, and a committee of nine was appointed to go to New York for the purpose of meeting the presidents of the coal carrying railroads and learn from them what the independent companies are to expect providing they agree to go along and adjust the labor dispute without arbitration.

Until they learn what the large companies intend to do the independents will make no positive stand beyond that which they took in the hearing before the commission. That was to the effect that they object to the commission approving any agreement in which the independent operators are not included.

While nothing regarding settlement has been agreed upon, the best forecast that can be made at this time is that the men will receive in the neighborhood of a 10 per cent increase, a nine hour day, the weighing of coal to be adjusted as best it can and agreements between the men and the company by whom they are employed. The agreements, it is expected, will run for a term of two or three years from Nov. 1. The four principal demands of the miners are for a 20 per cent increase, an eight hour day, weighing of coal wherever practicable by the ton and yearly trade agreements.

The report that the commission was the first to suggest that the opposing forces get together on the outside is true. The suggestion was made to leading counsel on each side, and Mr. MacVeagh went to New York and received the consent of the officials there. The commission saw that the proceedings would be interminable, and, if possible, it would be better to have them make another effort to settle their differences without having the commission compel them to take something which would not satisfy either party. In the meantime the commissioners will go ahead and study the situation from facts and figures to be presented just as they have been doing.

Major Reed Dead.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Major Walter Reed, a well known officer of the surgeon general's department of the army, is dead here. Major Reed was sent to Havana to investigate the yellow fever question, and it was largely through his researches that the determination was reached that the disease was communicable through the mosquito. Major Reed's death was due to appendicitis, for which an operation was performed on Monday, the 17th inst. Major Reed was born in Gloucester county, Va., in 1851 and was a graduate of the medical department of the University of Virginia and of Bellevue hospital, New York city. He was appointed an assistant surgeon in the army in 1875 and at the time of his death was first on the list of majors and surgeons in the medical department of the army. He had been known for years as one of the foremost bacteriologists and pathologists.

Riot In French Music Hall.

TOURS, France, Nov. 24.—A violent riot broke out last evening in the Alcazar Music hall in this city owing to the singing of antimilitary songs by one of the performers. A party of officers belonging to the garrison of Tours, who, dressed in mufti, were occupying the stalls, hissed the songs, while the public in the gallery applauded and threw missiles at the officers, wounding several of them. The occupants of the galleries then invaded the floor of the hall, where a free fight ensued until the police cleared the building. An antimilitary demonstration in the streets followed, a crowd escorting the singer, the cause of all the trouble, home and singing revolutionary songs. The rioters attempted to mob all the officers they met on the way, but a squad of police and infantry succeeded in protecting the officers, and order was finally restored.

Train Robbers Still at Large.

DAVENPORT, Ia., Nov. 24.—It looks now as though the Rock Island express robbers who blew open the safe of a train near this city Saturday morning have made good their escape. A sensation was created here yesterday by the report that the bandits had been surrounded in a cornfield near Buchanan. A special train, with a sheriff's posse on board, was made up here and started for the place. Word was received that the men had been captured before the train arrived, but the prisoners proved to be not the men wanted.

Fourth Lake Steamer Sunk.

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 24.—The steamer Margery sank during a storm on Fourth lake, near Eagle Point, in the Adirondacks. Burt Murdock, aged thirty-five, unmarried, of Inlet, a guide, was drowned. D. C. Meyer and son, Ira Church and William Rogers, who were on the boat, were rescued.

NEW TRANSCONTINENTAL LINE.

A Second Railway to Cross Canada From Ocean to Ocean.

MONTREAL, Nov. 24.—Canada is to have a second transcontinental railway extending from ocean to ocean. The announcement is made by Charles M. Hays, second vice president and general manager of the Grand Trunk railway. The construction of the new line will be begun as soon as the necessary legislation can be obtained from the Canadian parliament.

The Grand Trunk will be behind the new road and will operate it, but, as in the case of the Grand Trunk lines west of the Detroit river, it will be constructed under a separate corporated name, the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway company. The new lines, according to Mr. Hays' statement, will have a mileage of about 3,000 miles, and the construction, including equipment, stations, bridges, ships and other facilities, will involve an expenditure of from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000.

According to the present arrangement, the new system will run through that portion of northern Ontario known as New Ontario, starting from North Bay to Gravenhurst, Ont., and extending through Manitoba, the Northwest Territories and British Columbia to Butte inlet or Port Simpson, B. C., as may later be determined upon. The line will be of the most modern and up to date character, having in view especially low grades, long tangents, steel bridges and heavy rails as well as ample station facilities and equipment for the handling of freight and passenger traffic.

"No one," said Mr. Hays, "who has been studying the wonderful developments that have taken place in the northwest during the last few years can fail to be deeply impressed with the growth of that extensive and rich territory, and our directors feel that in view of the apparent need of additional railway facilities and in order to guarantee to the present Grand Trunk system direct connection with that very important and growing section of Canada the only wise policy is to take active steps toward this extension."

The building of this transcontinental route has been under consideration by the Grand Trunk directorate for some time, but it was only during Mr. Hays' recent visit to England that it has decided to carry out the project at as early a date as possible.

MAIL POUCHES STOLEN.

Chicago Thief Said to Have Secured $10,000 In Broad Daylight.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—The Chicago postoffice has been the victim of one of the most daring robberies that have ever been perpetrated in this city. Ten thousand dollars is the amount believed to have been secured by the robber, who made his escape without leaving any clew to his identity.

Two mail sacks containing the money which had just been picked up from two of the downtown substations were left in an unprotected wagon in front of the Masonic temple while the mail carrier went into the building to gather mail that had accumulated there. The carrier was gone only a moment, but when he returned his horse and wagon had disappeared.

The street was full of people at the time, but no one seems to have noticed the thief. The two small sacks, cut open and rifled of their contents, were found near Kirk's soap factory, fully a mile from the scene of the robbery. The horse and rig were found two miles farther west. No trace of the robber has been secured.

Truth of Deer Stories Denied.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 24.—Chief Fish and Game Protector Pond of the state fish and game commission says relative to the stories current in New York papers that from 8,000 to 10,000 deer had been killed in the Adirondacks this year: "The story is ridiculous. From personal observation and from the reports of the various game protectors and the employees of the commission, as well as from the records of the express companies, it is apparent that the number shot this year is far less than that of last year. Last year on a liberal estimate in addition to our figures gathered from reliable sources the number of deer killed was placed at 6,000. This year the number will not, so far as I can see now, reach 3,000, but, giving all sorts of leeway, will certainly not exceed 4,000.

To Get a Nobel Prize.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—It is stated that Major Ross, the principal of the Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine, will be awarded the Nobel malaria research prize of $15,000. Major Ross conducted several expeditions into the mosquito breeding districts of west Africa. Under the terms of the will of Alfred Nobel, the Swedish engineer and chemist who first applied nitroglycerin, dynamite and blasting gelatin as explosive agents and who died in 1896, $2,000,000 of his fortune of $10,000,000 was left as a fund to provide prizes for the advancement of science. The interest on the $2,000,000 was divided into five annual prizes to be awarded to persons making the most important discoveries.

Wu Ting Fang In San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 24.—Wu Ting Fang, former Chinese minister at Washington, has arrived here on his way to China. He will sail Nov. 25 on the Hongkong Maru. He refused to be interviewed, but denied the report that Ho Yow, the late Chinese consul at this city, had been called home to be disciplined.

Whales Off Sandy Hook.

SANDY HOOK, N. J., Nov. 24.—The Forked River life saving station reports that the bodies of a cow whale fifty to sixty feet long and that of a calf whale about fifteen feet long have floated close to the beach.

We don't sell an article worth a dollar for ten cents, but we do sell by nearly half lower than any other store in the city. Our store is overfilled with all the latest and the most nobby productions for the coming fall. If you are interested in anything in our line now is the time to purchase. You can make a dollar go as far with us as two elsewhere. Polite salesmen will be willing and anxious to show them to you.

A REMARK

We overheard the other afternoon, passed from one lady to another, fully explains the popularity of our stores. The remark (and it's no imaginary one) was: "Oh, yes! I always come here; I don't know where else you can get as nice candies for so reasonable prices." Covers the whole ground, does that remark. Walk in and look up and down our long candy counters and you'll see it does.

TO SOLVE TRUST PROBLEM.

The President Makes a Characteristic Utterance on the Subject.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 24.—At the founders' day banquet of the Union league in this city President Roosevelt closed his address with a stirring announcement of his determination to solve the trust problem. He said:

"The question of the so called trusts is but one of the questions we must meet in connection with our industrial system. There are many of them, and they are serious, but they can and will be met. Time may be needed for making the solution perfect, but it is idle to tell this people that we have not the power to solve such a problem as that of exercising adequate supervision over the great industrial combinations of today. We have the power, and we shall find out the way. We shall not act hastily or recklessly, but we have firmly made up our minds that a solution and a right solution shall be found, and found it will be.

"No nation as great as ours can expect to escape the penalty of greatness, for greatness does not come without trouble and labor. There are problems ahead of us at home and problems abroad, because such problems are incident to the working out of a great national career. We do not shrink from them. Scant is our patience with those who preach the gospel of craven weakness. No nation under the sun ever yet played a part worth playing if it feared its fate overmuch—if it did not have the courage to be great.

"We of America, we, the sons of a nation yet in the pride of its lusty youth, spurn the teachings of distrust, spurn the creed of failure and despair. We know that the future is ours if we have in us the manhood to grasp it, and we enter the new century girding our loins for the contest before us, rejoicing in the struggle and resolute so to bear ourselves that the nation's great future shall even surpass her glorious past."

MILES PARTY DELAYED.

Transport, Stuck on Reef, Is Floated Without Damage.

MANILA, Nov. 24.—The United States transport Ingalls, with General Miles and party on board, which struck on a reef while entering the harbor of Le Gaspi, Luzon, Saturday, floated at high tide the same day and is expected to arrive here today. The vessel struck on a coral reef while going at a speed of nine knots. The shock raised the ship two feet along its entire length.

Captain Brugire has explained that he was trying to save twenty minutes by running through the charted channel between the reefs in the center of the gulf of Albay in a straight line for Le Gaspi instead of following the usual channel. A Spanish vessel which was asked to give assistance asked 100,000 Mexican dollars as salvage, but these terms were declined. Captain Brugire pumped out the vessel's water ballast, and she floated without aid. It is believed that the Ingalls is undamaged.

Silver has suffered a further decline in value. The government has issued a proclamation making the official rate 200 for 100 gold. The former rate was 250.

The cholera is spreading among the Moro towns on the west coast of Mindanao, and there is much destitution among the people. Quarantine increases the suffering by stopping work and the movement of supplies. General Davis has telegraphed to General Sumner directing the distribution of food supplies to the sufferers in the infected and quarantined towns. The disease is again disappearing from this city.

Crazed Elephant Kills Keeper.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 24.—Gypsy, a big elephant belonging to Harris' Nickel Plate shows, went crazy six miles from Valdosta and killed her keeper, James O'Rourke. The circus train had been in a wreck at Tifton early in the day, when several of the animal cars were wrecked and two or three trained horses killed. The elephant Gypsy was in a highly nervous state when the train pulled out for Valdosta, the next show point. Six miles out from that town Gypsy became so restless that O'Rourke entered her car as the train stopped at a small station to try to quiet her. Immediately the mad brute attacked the man and crushed his life out against the side of the car. O'Rourke for some reason did not close the door of the car after him, so after killing her keeper Gypsy escaped to the woods. Her absence was noted before the train left the station, and a hunt was organized. The big beast was shot a number of times before she succumbed to rifle balls in the breast.

The Pope Receives Canadians.

ROME, Nov. 24.—The pope gave a farewell audience to Archbishop Bruchesi of Montreal in the pontiff's private apartment. His holiness afterward went to the throneroom, where Mgr. Bruchesi presented to him all the Canadians now in Rome, numbering sixty, including several Protestants from the provinces of Ontario and Quebec. The pope said he was delighted to see the Canadians and gave his benediction to them all. On leaving Archbishop Bruchesi said, "I hope to see your holiness on my next visit to Rome three years hence." The pope promptly replied, "I will wait for you."

Wreck on the Buffalo and Allegheny.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 24.—A wreck is reported on the Buffalo and Allegheny Valley division of the Pennsylvania railroad near Templeton. Eight of the injured passengers have been brought to this city. It is feared some of the passengers were killed.

Foreigners Leaving Shanghai.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 24.—The evacuation of this city by the foreign garrisons has begun, the Japanese being the first to withdraw their troops.

KRUPP NOT A SUICIDE

Mental Excitement Killed the Great Gunmaker.

A REMARKABLE CAREER CLOSED.

Germany's Richest Citizen Spent His Time Thinking Out Schemes For the Betterment of the Lower Classes.

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—The first assumption that Herr Krupp, the great gunmaker, whose death was recorded Saturday, committed suicide is yielding to precise and abundant testimony to the contrary. Professor Binswanger, a physician of the first reputation, was in the apartment adjoining Herr Krupp's sleeping room when he was stricken down on Saturday morning, and Dr. Pahl, Herr Krupp's family doctor, was also in the house. They summoned several other physicians of some celebrity, and it is regarded as being beyond belief that all of them should have connived at a concealment of the cause of death, which they ascribe to a stroke of apoplexy, induced, they add unofficially, by mental excitement from which the deceased gentleman was suffering.

Herr Krupp's medical history for several years past indicates that he was in delicate health. He was asthmatic, had a weak heart and was subject to fainting spells. He fell to the ground unconscious while in Genoa several years ago and again while at dinner in a hotel here eighteen months ago. He had been warned to avoid overfatigue and worry.

Herr Krupp had been melancholy ever since the publication of a scandalous story by the Vorwaerts, a Socialistic organ. In a column of scandal it told of sensational charges against Herr Krupp.

All available copies of the edition were seized and destroyed, and Herr Krupp announced his intention of bringing suit for vindication, saying it was a scheme of blackmail pressed by the hotel keepers on the island of Capri, where he had a large estate.

Herr Krupp's favorite study was to think out schemes for improving the well being of the lower classes, which he applied practically to what are called "labor colonies." He assented seemingly to most socialistic principles, except that he held tight to the wage system, averring that the wage earners were not yet sufficiently developed or self controlled to regulate for themselves a just system of division of profits.

Herr Krupp's father started the system of modern dwellings for the workingmen as a matter of expediency, and Herr Krupp himself appears to have developed them from conviction and in accordance with his ideals. He owned 4,469 dwellings, each to whatever group it belonged being constructed with variations in the architecture to avoid monotony. Each house had a front yard in which were bits of ornamental gardening.

Herr Krupp had also a variety of institutions, some of them rather singular, such as bachelors' homes and widowers' retreats. Besides convalescent hospitals and the regulation orphanages he had a pension fund for his employes amounting to $4,125,000. He contributed last year, as required by the law, $372,000 to the national insurance fund and gave voluntarily $4,080,000 to other insurance funds.

Notwithstanding his benevolent interests in the laborers, he was an autocrat in the management of his concerns. He was almost unknown by sight to his workmen and rarely visited the works or even his offices. He spent several months every year on the island of Capri and managed his gun works, rolling mills, iron mines and shipyards by letters and telegrams.

Moderate estimates of the fortune of Herr Krupp place it at $125,000,000 and his annual income during his recent years of prosperity at $10,000,000. Herr Krupp made great sums by supplying armor plate for the new German navy. Besides his iron works and shipbuilding yards he had an interest in many financial enterprises and had recently acquired extensive coal properties in connection with the North German Lloyd Steamship company.

Irish Leader Ill.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—John Dillon, the well known Irish leader, who came to Chicago to address a meeting here in celebration of the Manchester martyrs' anniversary, was taken suddenly ill and was unable to appear at the meeting. While driving during the day Mr. Dillon suffered a chill, which was followed by a high fever, and last night his temperature was 104. The attending physician gave out the information that, while Mr. Dillon is not seriously ill, he will be confined to his room for several days.

Held Jailer While Six Escaped.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 24.—While one prisoner held the jailer six other prisoners escaped from jail at Dandridge, Tenn., in the afternoon. John Perry was the man who grabbed Jailer Fuller and in the struggle was unable to escape himself, although the others successfully got away. Lant Wright, one of the men who escaped, was jailed on the charge of house breaking with intent to commit criminal assault. Officers with bloodhounds are scouring the country for the men.

Turks Torturing Bulgarians.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 24.—According to advices from Monastir, eighty-seven miles west of Salonika, the Turks are inflicting terrible tortures on Bulgarian peasants in order to extort confessions which may lead to the discovery of revolutionary bands.

WEAK ARGUMENTS.

It was not to be expected that any such important municipal improvement as the establishment of a system of sewers in North Plainfield could be made without opposition, even though it is apparent to every fair minded person that sewers will be of decided benefit to that community. Even now at the mere mention of the subject there comes objection from a few. Arguments are advanced against the establishment of the sewer system but they are not the kind that are going to appeal to a progressive community.

First, it is argued that because North Plainfield has existed without sewers so long, there is no need of ever building them. Arguing on those premises, no public improvement would ever be made and progress would be an unknown quantity. If the borough is going to keep pace with the city, sewers must come and without delay. If the present conditions continue, the prosperity which is visiting this section is going to keep on the south side of Green brook.

Another argument advanced against the present movement is that B. A. Hegeman, Jr., who is chairman of the Borough Sewage Commission, has had no experience with such municipal problems and therefore is not qualified to serve at the head of such an organization. Mr. Hegeman is a former mayor of North Plainfield and is particularly well acquainted with the conditions there. He is a successful business man and has already shown his wisdom in this matter by consulting the best authorities on the subject. While he may not be an expert, he is better qualified to judge what will be to the best interests of the borough than some comparative stranger or one who knows little or nothing about the municipal affairs of the borough.

Sewers in the borough must be built. It is only a question of time A few men cannot block the prosperity of that community. As long as North Plainfield is not a part of Plainfield it is compelled to compete with the city. In order to compete it must offer something like equal advantages. Every modern community has sewers nowadays and the suburban resident is not going to the place that does not have them.

Last year's series of exhibits at the Plainfield Public Library proved so eminently successful that a new series has been started at that institution this winter. The first was held Saturday afternoon and evening and proved just as satisfactory as those of last winter. Plainfield possesses unusual facilities at its library and these exhibits serve to bring these to the public mind with special force. The Public Library is here for use and the more people who take advantage of it the more does it fill the place for which it was intended.

The holiday season is practically here and all the local merchants are preparing for their Christmas display. In every instance are the plans on a more elaborate scale than ever before. There will be less need than ever before of going to New York to do the Christmas shopping.

Sheriff McMurtry, who is a Democrat, used to be lonely amid all the Republican officeholders of Somerset county. Now he has plenty of company. County Clerk Somers must begin to experience those pangs of loneliness.

There are rumors of a new county to include Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen. It would be by far the best way of settling the Greater Plainfield question but it would never go through for political reasons.

The Borough Council ought to offer a prize to the person who can name all the streets in the borough. It requires brain power above the normal to keep track of them all.

DUNELLEN.

The Fair of Holidays, in the Presbyterian chapel came to an end Saturday evening after the most successful three days' a fair has ever had in the church. Everything has been disposed of except a few groceries and other small articles. It is estimated that the profits will amount to $500. A great deal of credit for the success must be given to Mrs. W. J. Hamilton, who supervised the whole. Many others are deserving of praise for the earnest way in which they worked.

What is believed to be a practical joke was perpetrated upon A. N. Randolph, Thursday night. He and Mrs. Randolph were both in attendance at the Presbyterian fair and Mrs. Randolph went home first. On the stoop she found a note addressed to Mr. Randolph. All it said was, "Beware," and was signed by "Deadwood Dick." Mr. Randolph is looking for the joker.

A large congregation was present in the Methodist church, last evening at the annual temperance services conducted by the local W. C. T. U. Rev. Frank Fletcher was the speaker of the evening. The collection taken will be used for local purposes by the W. C. T. U.

While on a ladder fixing some decorations in the Presbyterian chapel, Friday night, J. D. DeGroff slipped and fell some distance. He bruised his head and received a number of painful cuts around the face and head.

Several citizens of this place have been under the impression that burglars are still at work around here. No house has been entered but some attempts have been fancied.

The strong wind last night played havoc with the large sign hung across North avenue, advertising the Fair of the Holidays, blowing it completely down.

No services were held in the Presbyterian church last night because of the temperance meeting in the Methodist church.

Michael Moynihan will leave with a party of friends on Wednesday, for a hunting trip in Hunterdon county.

Adam Dealaman still remains in about the same condition, although a slight improvement is noticed.

The next meeting of the Afternoon Card Club will be held at the home of Miss Benton, in Plainfield.

Thanksgiving Day approaches;
The day of peace and prayer
And dinners and dyspeptia, too,
For both the brave and fair.
But if you get your tender ducks,
Or turkeys if you please,
At Smalley Brother's butcher shop,
Your mind will rest at ease.
Should you contemplate your blessings
When the day is o'er,
Joy will be yours if you have traded
At Dunn's park grocery store.
There you will find sweet oranges,
From Florida's sunny clime
And cauliflowers and vegetables
And apples in their prime.
Now if you chance to take a walk
After the meal is o'er
The finest gloves and underwear
Are found at Blair's Park avenue store.

NAMES AMONG NEGROES.

How So Many Odd and Classical Appellations Came to Be Borne by Them.

There is a good reason for the curious proper names even now in use amongst negroes, says an article on the American negro, in Leslie's Monthly. Their native African names were scarcely ever used, owing to both difficulty in pronunciation as well as inability on the part of the blacks to give them when demanded. The hundreds it was necessary to name on the arrival of a cargo caused the days of the week, months, numbers, animals, gods and goddesses, heroes, demi-gods, Biblical characters, Shakespearean names and the shorter English and French Christian names of the day to be used over and over again. In every district were dozens of sable workers answering to such names as Tuesday, Friday, July, November, Primus (in use to this day), Sixteen (rare even then), Doe, Hart, Rabbit, Fox (in use now), Jupiter, Pallas, Hector, Venus, Diana (now "Di"), Perseus, Hercules, Aaron, Moses, Pharoh, Romulus, Remus, Hamlet, Othello, Caesar (a favorite), Jonas, Rose, Priscilla, John, Jack, Lize, Beth and others. Variations were had by prefixing "Young" or "Old" to the name given. The American negroes acquired their surnames rather summarily immediately after the emancipation.

WISE HINDOO STAR GAZER.

Astrologers Who Prophesied the Illness and Recovery of King Edward, of England.

Some remarkable horoscopes of the health of Edward VII., prepared by famous Hindoo astrologers, were published November 4 last in the Hindoo, a native newspaper. These horoscopes were recently reprinted in the same paper and have been hailed with immense relief by the king's loyal subjects in India. These horoscopes are certainly most remarkable, when we remember they were published eight months ago, though we may smile at the cure suggested in the second:

A Tanjore astrologer predicted: "Our beloved emperor will be soon enthroned (Pattabhi-shekam) and will brilliantly reign over his kingdom for a period of not less than 15 years to come. Some sickness would trouble him, but his majesty's life is secure for many years to come."

A Dindigul astrologer stated: "The position of the planets shows that between June 21 and 28, 1902, the king-emperor will suffer of boils like carbuncles throughout the body and the conjunction also indicates danger. As a panacea for this evil the emperor is recommended to make gifts of black bulls, as it would give considerable relief and sustenance to him."

TITLE WAS SOON PROVEN.

Uncle Sam Buys Back Land from Man to Whom It Was Sold by Government in 1840.

"You may go back home and prepare the papers for the transfer of your land to the government, making sure you have the deed set forth every transfer of the property, and, when this is completed you can obtain the $7,500 which as been accepted as the government price for your site for a postoffice."

"Well, if that's all you want, I can fix that up real quick. Just say that the property is transferred to the United States from John McCusick to whom the land was deeded by the United States in the year 1840."

This is the conversation which took place in the treasury department of the United States Saturday between Supervising Architect Taylor and John McCusick, of Stillwater, Minn., at the consummation of the bargain in which the government secures the title to a postoffice site in Stillwater.

McCusick bought the land from the government at $1.25 per acre in 1840. He has held it ever since, and now he is selling 135x150 feet of it back to the government for the sum of $7,500.

FORGOT HE HELD A POLICY.

A Burned-Out Boston Clothing Merchant Who Overlooked a Risk of $4,000.

A Boston clothing house was destroyed by fire recently and in connection with the adjustment of the losses the representative of one of the insurance companies interested discovered that the insured had a policy for $4,000 which had been overlooked. Upon making representations to the firm the proprietor denied that he had any such policy, and it was only on the production of the books of the Queen, showing when the premium had been paid, that he was convinced that he was entitled to the sum involved. Even then he declared that the insurance concern had made a mistake, but if it insisted that he was entitled to it he would consent to take the money. The occurrence was so exceptional that special interest has been taken in the case, with the result that the firm's credit will probably be materially strengthened among insurance men.

Lost Indian City Located.

The site of the lost Indian city Mascoutens, which was reported as having 200,000 inhabitants in 1675, has been determined by the labors of Thomas Clithero, of Portage, Wis., now extended over many years. It was the largest city in all Indian history, so far as United States territory is concerned, and the descriptions of the Jesuits in the course of the seventeenth century, closing with Marquette and Joliet in 1673, are said to have been verified.

SAGE GIVES WARNING.

Nestor of Wall Street Sees Peril in Formation of Great Industrial Combines.

Russell Sage holds some positive views on the trust question, which are completely at variance with those held by J. Pierpont Morgan, America's leading exponent of the trust problem.

Mr. Sage took occasion the other day to utter some emphatic statements concerning the progress of the combination idea. The views spoken by the aged financier, while those Mr. Morgan began his first full business day after his European trip, were taken by some financiers as a note of warning that the trust problem is being overdone.

RUSSELL SAGE.
(Nestor of Wall Street, who Is Afraid of Big Trusts.)

"First, let me say that I am not antagonistic to Mr. Morgan," Mr. Sage explained. "He and I have been very friendly from a business standpoint for many years, but we differ on the trust question. I have been misquoted and my views exaggerated when I was quoted as saying that combinations of all kinds are a menace to the government. That is not right. I believe those which have been formed with the right idea and on a sound basis will live, but the others will fail or die of their own poor construction.

"What I am afraid of is the constant formation of inflated securities which are disposed of to the American people with a good brand on them.

"Securities have been made in great quantities and sold at high prices on the idea that economies to be effected will give them the arbitrary value which has been placed upon them. This theory will be exploded later on, for there will always be competition. When the crash comes it will be a national disaster. Everyone will be more or less affected, and the industrial stagnation will be far greater than if half a dozen small concerns became bankrupt. When a great big company goes under thousands will have to bear the loss.

"Another thing I fear is the centralization of big industries in the hands of five or six men. The control of the industries of our country should be more widely distributed, but if the trust idea continues to progress at the same speed that it has done within the last year all the leading industries of the nation will be left in the control, as I said before, of half a dozen men."

BABOON AS SIGNALMAN.

Railway Switch Signals Accurately Given by a "Missing Link" in South Africa.

In a recent number of Animal Life is a photograph of a baboon performing the work of a signalman. Uitenhage, the South African station where this strange railway employe has been seen, is about 23 miles from Port Elizabeth, and Wylde, the official signalman, trained the baboon to such perfection that he was able to sit in his cabin stuffing birds, etc., while the animal, which was chained up outside, pulled all the levers and points, the signalman having certain signs to denote which lever it was to pull. As soon as the last train at night had gone the signalman, who has lost both his legs, fixed a trolley on the rails and sat upon it, while the baboon pulled it along. "I noticed," writes Mr. Fuller (the contributor of the photograph), "that the baboon never started the trolley pulling with its collar, but used to grip its chain and run on three legs until the trolley got into a good swing. It was very fond of Boer brandy and tobacco. If ever it broke away it never associated with the other baboons as it had been brought from some distance, and baboons seem very clannish."

BABOON THROWING SWITCH.
(Simian Railway Employe in South Africa Hard at Work.)

THE DRAKE OIL WELL.

It Was the Forerunner of the Phenomenal Gushers in the Pennsylvania Fields.

One of the strongest, most important battles in the history of commerce was fought by Col. Edwin L. Drake, who, about 44 years ago, went to Titusville, Pa., a poor man, but a man with a scheme in mind which, although received with distrust by strangers, was perfectly lucid to him, and finally resulted in contributing to the wealth, power and happiness of the entire world.

The existence of petroleum, says the Four-Track News, had been known by all peoples since the time of Moses, but the task of drilling into the rocks, and compelling them to give up their treasures was left for the last half of the nineteenth century, and for an American. That pioneer well, on Watson's flats, with a production of 20 barrels a day for a year, was but the forerunner of the phenomenal "gushers" that were to come, and was the beginning of a wonderful industry and one unparalleled in the history of the past. Hitherto worthless lands brought fortunes to their owners; towns sprung up in a night; exchanges were instituted and men were in a frenzy to obtain their portion of the wealth which flowed from the deep confines of Mother Earth. Men such as Drake, those whose deeds benefit all future generations, are the ones whose likenesses "should be cast in deathless bronze," and whose names should be honored for all time to come.

(The Forerunner of Pennsylvania's Phenomenal "Gushers.")

ANIMALS CAN TALK.

Du Chaillu, the French Traveler and Explorer, Has Heard Them Laugh and Chat.

Paul B. du Chaillu, the explorer, says there is no doubt that animals talk in certain ways among themselves. In Africa he has heard gorillas laugh and guffaw when they came to rob a man's field and found that elephants had already destroyed everything, as if they appreciated the joke themselves. Again, he heard a gorilla, which had found some choice, berries, calling another that was a long way off. He saw monkeys apparently deliberate for a long time before making some move. These animals, by the way, rarely drink water, but eat juicy berries and fruits instead. Du Chaillu was impressed by the fact that even in a tropical forest animals have to work hard for a living. Some of them travel miles every day to get food, and have all kinds of trouble in finding a safe place to spend the night. Even elephants are very careful about their sleeping places. They hate snakes, and before lying down they carefully trample over a large area to kill or drive out reptiles and rodents. And big as they are they go in herds for greater safety.

Translator Was Staggered.

A Frenchman was engaged in translating an American novel and came to a description of a man "hitching his horse to a locust." This staggered the translator as he had never heard of the locust tree; but he was equal to the emergency and in explanation stated that "sauterelles" or grasshoppers grew to an immense size in the United States.

The Holy Ghost Plant.

The Holy Ghost plant, a product of Mexico, Central and South America, is so called because of the shape of the flower, which has the appearance of a dove with expanded wings.

The Latest in Incubators.

As a living incubator, John Fitson, a farmer of Eminence, Ky., holds the record. During a prolonged fit of sickness his wife placed 25 eggs in bed with him, and in due time 44 chickens emerged.

CHANGES IN FASHION.

Ways In Which a Last Year's Gown Can Be Altered.

There is a marked change in the fashion of skirts as well as in that of bodices. It has been threatened for some time past, but the authorities are keeping to graceful, becoming lines, and only occasionally do we see the very wide skirt, and a little fullness to the skirt is a decided improvement; but women, particularly the stout ones, should beware of many folds and shirrings around the hips. Some of the prettiest models of the hour, however, though more trimmed, have the skirts fairly long and rather plain to the knees.

Of course it is difficult to alter a last year's skirt, though it is quite possible to make a success of it. The excessive plainness can be taken off by a shaped basque of velvet. Whenever it is possible lift the skirt up at the back so as to gain more fullness and insert a little stiffening. In evening dress this can be obviated by the addition of two long soft sash ends, always an effective mode.

The dinner gown shown is of crepe de chine and alencon lace. The bretelle sash is of pink satin edged with sable. JUDIC CHOLLET.

CLOTH AND FUR STYLES.

Cloth Coats Trimmed With Strappings—Fur Models.

Cloth much trimmed with flat braidings, grouped stitchings or strappings of the material is quite the fashion for coats, and some models have an addition of fur. Furriers are showing less of the bushy type of furs, and ermine is again modish, but is used chiefly as a garniture for dark furs.

in chinchilla and moleskin are more artistic when combined with cloth of similar tones and relieved by slight touches of color.

The fur coat is mostly becoming in sack form to wear over a tightly fitted skirt, but the petite woman is better suited by a bolero with a well fitted back and shaped belt.

The taffeta stole shown in the cut is composed of a double frill over the shoulders trimmed with lines of open fagoting done between bandings of narrow ribbon. The hat is of moire with a band of silk around the brim to match the stole, which band is ornamented with ovals of silk laid

Half an hour later Hendricks went out on the veranda and looked down the road. Dr. Lampkin was there walking back and forth.

"How's Gielow?" asked the detective.

"Tip-top," answered the doctor. "He'll be at his easel in a week. How's the prisoner?"

"Resigned and meek as a lamb," answered the detective. "He made a complete confession to Denham and myself just now."

"And I presume the mystery is solved at last," remarked Lampkin, tentatively. "I must say, however, that I am still in the dark on one or two features of the case. For instance, it seems an unnecessary thing for Kola to cremate the body and inform you anonymously that the remains would be found in the hotel."

"That seems to have been an afterthought, and there was a reason for it," explained Hendricks. "He was spending a pleasant evening with his victim in Caruthers' rooms and committed the deed sooner than he really intended. Caruthers, it appears, was just beginning to suspect that Kola was not an Italian, and a dispute arose between them. Kola struck him a single blow in the temple, and he fell dead without a sound or blood."

"Ah, I see!" exclaimed Lampkin.

"Then," went on Hendricks, "Kola feared, as he was seen to enter Caruthers' rooms, that he would be suspected, so he quickly resorted to the excellent scheme of making it appear that his victim had suddenly left the city.

"He first crowded Caruthers' body into one of his big trunks and deliberately went down to the street and employed a passing baggageman to come up for the trunk, pretending that it was his. Without attracting notice, he got the trunk delivered at his own rooms in town, and early the next morning had it removed out here by his Indian servant. He next dropped Caruthers' valet a note from Philadelphia, which was mailed in that city by an eastern confederate, and later he forged another communication to Miss Huntington.

"But, in the meantime, he was thinking of some unique means of totally destroying the body. He ended by cutting it up and reducing it to ashes by oxy-hydrogen flame, all except the hand, which, for a time, escaped his notice. He was about to throw the ashes away when he ran across the hand. Then the thought occurred to him that unless it was proved beyond doubt that Caruthers was actually dead there would be endless litigation before Miss Huntington could come into her uncle's estate. As you know, that would not have suited Kola, so he put the ashes and hand in the vase, and managed to get them into Caruthers' apartments. His first idea was that it would be taken for the work of a crank, hence his cranky letter to me. His next inspiration was to hypnotize Gielow and make him confess and flee, but for a week the artist persistently avoided him, and it was not till Kola discovered that I was back from Boston that he accidentally met the artist and accomplished his purpose."

"But why did Kola make the first attempt on your life?" asked the doctor.

"Because he had already decided to murder Caruthers, marry the heiress and continue his role of Italian count in New York, and was afraid that I would sooner or later recognize him."

"But the second attempt on your life?" questioned Lampkin.

"Was because he found out that I was at the rooms of Count Bantinni the morning after Gielow's apparent flight, and was afraid I would finally discover his disguise. I think from the fact that he avoided me during that time that he was afraid of me, but after he played the Bible trick on us I think he believed he could frighten me out of following up the Bantinni clew and into a belief in the guilt of Gielow. However, his fears got the best of him and he decided to kill both you and me by means of his dead-fall."

Just then there was the sound of a gong down the road and the patrol wagon dashed into view.

"The ambulance will follow pretty soon," remarked Hendricks. "Doctor, I am going to leave you and Miss Huntington with the patient while Denham and I go in with our booty."

"That will be all right," answered Lampkin. "We'll look after him."

Denham and Hendricks had led Kola out to the wagon and put him in, and Hendricks was about to climb in after him when Dr. Lampkin came to the door and signaled to Hendricks to come back.

"Miss Huntington wants to see you before you go," he said.

A sheepish expression was mingled with the flush on Hendricks' face as he entered the room where Gielow lay awake and smiling contentedly. Miss Huntington rose from the bedside and held out her hand.

"I couldn't let you go without speaking to you," she said, her eyes filling. "I shall never forget your goodness as long as I live. You are the best friend I ever had. Arthur," she said, turning to Gielow, "I cannot say what I want to say. I am going to kiss him." And she put her arms around the neck of the detective and kissed him on the lips.

Hendricks grew very red in the face, and saying something about wishing he had it all to do over again, he backed from the room. As he turned at the threshold he stumbled over a rug and almost fell into Lampkin's arms.

The doctor braced him up with a hand on each of his shoulders, and grinned and smacked his lips significantly. But Hendricks only swore at him, waxed redder in the face and descended to the wagon and crawled in beside Kola.

THE END.

American Machinists.

America's recently achieved industrial supremacy over the nations of the Old World has called international attention to the superior efficiency of our workmen, and the marvelous productive power of our machines. We are able to build electric locomotives in Schenectady, for example, and sell them in London, in the face of European competition, because an American machinist works more rapidly and intelligently than his English cousin; and, further, because his output is increased by swiftly-moving automatons of steel. The marvelously constructed electric shops at the gateway of the Mohawk Valley represent the highest development of American machine manufacture.—From "The Wonders of Electricity," in Four-Track News.

Resisting Power.

Doctors tell us, in these days of germ and toxins, that the thing that counts most in a case is the "resisting power" of the patient. Some men and women can pass through an epidemic or even be inoculated with its peculiar poison germs and yet shake off infection, unharmed. Others apparently just as healthy succumb to the first contact with disease, and sink under it in spite of the best nursing. "Resisting power" is an individual affair, and many surprises come to doctor and nurses as the frail-looking patient pulls through and the robust-seeming one dies. Medicines can only aid the "resisting power"—they can never take its place. It determines, in the end, life or death in every case.—Scottish American.

A Safe Age.

The insuring of one's life is one of those things which one is most apt to put off. There are few, however, who postpone what ought to be the inevitable until so late a period in life as did the tough old smack-owner of Grimsby. When he presented himself at the insurance office he was naturally asked his age. His reply was "Ninety-four." "Why, my good man, we cannot insure you," said the company. "Why not?" he demanded. "Why, you are 94 years of age." "What of that?" the old man cried. "Look at statistics, and they will tell you that fewer men die at 94 than at any other age."—London Business Illustrated.

First American Earthquake.

The fourth book printed in a European language upon the western hemisphere was issued in the City of Mexico in 1541, and gave an account of the terrible earthquake which occurred in Guatemala, which many persons lost their lives. Among those who perished was the wife of the governor, the famous Don Pedro Alvarado, who was one of the chief lieutenants of Cortez in the conquest of Mexico 20 years before the event described. The book was printed in the Spanish language. —National Tribune.

Breaking It Gently.

"My adoration for you," sighed the amorous swain, "is as great as the boundless sea before us. Yes, fully as great and deep and steadfast. If I could only convince you—"

"But Mr. Richleigh," murmured the beautiful maiden, carefully tracing a pattern in the sand with her parasol, "says that his love for me is as great as a corner residence in New York and a villa at Newport, and a country home in the Adirondacks, and he has convinced me that he has them."—Baltimore American.

A CORNISH DUSTFALL.

Eruption of Krakatoa in 1901 Scattered Dust All Over Central Europe.

In the course of a paper on "The Cornish Dustfall of January, 1902," read before the Royal Meteorological society at 70 Victoria street recently, Mr. H. R. Mill said that since the Krakatoa eruption in 1883, when the volcanic dust thrown into the air made itself apparent for many months all over the world in a long series of brilliant sunsets, the most remarkable instance of far-traveled dust was that which occurred in March, 1901, reports the London Telegraph. In Italy the rain fell so thickly charged with red sand that the peasants took it for blood and became panic-stricken. For three days the dust cloud traveled northward over central Europe, substantial traces falling as far north as the Danish islands, and instances in which it reached parts of England and Scotland had been recorded. A large quantity of similar dust fell about January 21 last in Cornwall over an area of 2,000 square miles, and the conclusion seemed to be that about his time the atmosphere over the extreme west of Europe consisted of air which had come from the African deserts, carrying with it a quantity of fine dust, of which a mere vestige—some 100,000 tons or so—had been caught in its fall and carried to the shores of the channel. There seemed to be little doubt that the farmers of the west of England had this spring plowed many tons of the sand of the Sahara into their furrows.

A NEW VEGETABLE SWEET.

South American Herb That May Be Used in the Place of Sugar in Tea and Coffee.

A plant has been found in the northern part of Paraguay whose leaves contain a sweet substance. Small pieces will have the same effect as a large lump of sugar if dropped into a cup of tea or coffee. The stuff is not the same as sugar, though, because it is much stronger and cannot be fermented. The director of the Agronomical institute at Asuncion believes that its chemical nature is different from anything else now known. The herb is a rather common one, and the Germans in that part of the world are about to make some elaborate experiments in cultivating it for the market. It is said to contain no deleterious substance, but possibly the matter has not been investigated sufficiently. Fifteen or 20 years ago Prof. Remsen, now president of Johns Hopkins university, devised a method of manufacturing out of coal tar a substance 300 times as sweet as cane sugar. He named it "saccharin." Its use has been recommended for victims of certain diseases who are forbidden to take sugar. Nevertheless, for some mysterious reason, there has been a disposition in Germany to prohibit by law the introduction of saccharin into beer. Possibly the explanation of this procedure is political, not scientific. Whether the Paraguay plant, botanically known as Eupatorium rebaudiarum, will eventually prove a disappointment time alone can tell.

LITTLE SERGEANT MAJORS.

Lively Fishes at the New York City Aquarium That Flock Together Like Chicks.

Among the tropical fishes lately received at the aquarium from Bermuda were 20 or more little sergeant majors, two or three inches in length, which will flock together precisely like little chicks, and with the same confident fearlessness, says the New York Sun.

Let them be scattered through the water in all parts of their tank and let somebody tap gently low down on the outside of the glass and the whole bunch will come a-scurrying, as fast as their fins can drive them, all crowding in together as near those finger tips as they can get.

What draws them so, whether curiosity or hunger, or what, they all swarm at the call. And as little chicks will run, a moment later all together to another part of the field at the old hen's bidding, so will these little sergeant majors rush together again a moment later, at a second gentle tapping on the glass.

ONLY A GIRL'S PURSE.

The Dainty Receptacle Contained Variety of Things Almost Equal to Boy's Pocket.

Poems and stories used to be written about the infinite variety of articles to be found in a boy's pocket. Girls do not have pockets—so much the worse for them—but the things they stow away in their pocketbooks would put a boy to the blush, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. A girl emptied her purse the other day. "I have to clean it out," she explained, "every once in awhile, just as I do my bureau drawers." These are some of the things that were in it: Two one-dollar bills, a 50-cent piece, two quarters, a five-cent piece (lead) and ten pennies, a "lucky" Italian coin, a Japanese "pocket piece," two receipts, three bills, a parlor car check, four street railway transfers, five mutilated stamps, a pencil stub, matinee coupon, three keys, newspaper clippings and a cleaner's check for gloves. That was not at all an unusual case. Almost any girl can match it.

ON THE GRIDIRON.

The North Plainfield A. C. defeated the Crescent A. C., of Westfield, in a game Saturday, by a score of 33 to 0. The game was played on Crescent Oval, North Plainfield.

The I. C. T. will again play Company K on Hope Common Saturday, December 6. It should be a close and interesting game as both team were unable to score against one another in their last game which was played last Saturday. These two teams are almost evenly matched and the odds are about even between the two.

The I. C. T. football team will play a game with the New Brunswick Y. M. C. A. on Thanksgiving Day on Neilson Field. The New Brunswickers are a light team as compared to the I. C. T.'s and with this fact in the local player's favor and the improved team work of the I. C. T. team they ought to score a victory.

The Underwood A. A., of this city, was defeated at football by a Westfield team which played under the name of the Lincoln High School, Saturday, when they were shut out by a score of 17 to 0. The lineup of the Underwood team was as follows: Doane, re; Reed, rt; Robert, rg; Taylor, c; Tweedy, lg; Perkins, lt; Craig, le; Long, fb; Daniel, rhb; Miner, lhb; Lovel, fb.

The game will commence at 8:15. Officials have been secured from New York City, Brooklyn and Jersey City. As the seating capacity is limited, those desiring seats should be on hand early.

AT THE TRAPS.

Pupils of Borough High Snhool Will Make An Offering for It Tomorrow.

Tomorrow will be offering day in the Borough High School when the pupils will each bring some food products wihch will be packed in barrels and sent to the Children's Home. This is a yearly custom at this school and the pupils enter into the spirit of the scheme with much enthusiasm.

The closing exercises for the Thanksgiving vacation will be held at the school Wednesday. The free day week which closes on Fridays will close on Tuesday of next week on account of the vacation of this week. This morning the scholars were given the 150 words which were given to the scholars in the North Western University in their examinations last year and which barred many from admission. This was given with an idea of seeing how thoroughly the pupils are conversant with the spelling of different words of every day use.

Don't Like Dust.

Patrons of the local trolley cars, as well as those who do not ride, have been complaining lately about the great amount of dust raised by the cars. They believe that the company should sprinkle along the line of the road.

WHY AMERICA PROSPERED

THE REASONS POINTED OUT BY REV. JOHN MACMURRAY.

In Sermon Delivered at the Monroe Avenue Church Last Evening—Owes It All to God.

According to Rev. John MacMurray, of the Monroe Avenue church, in a sermon preached by him, last evening, America owes its prosperity and well being to special beneficence extended by God. In the course of a Thanksgiving discourse, this thought was dwelt upon, the divine avowing that the new world had been especially favored by the Creator.

Columbus himself, Mr. MacMurray said, was guided by a providential hand during his voyage over the sea and he discovered the western hemisphere just at the proper time. In the old world there was no freedom of religion or thought and men craving the privilege settled in America. Colonies that would have continued the narrow, monarchical old world methods like those of St. Augustine and Jamestown were failures while that of the Pilgrims has lived forever. The staunch New England band believed in free thinking and the worship of God as a man thought and not as a ruler dictated.

To this love of liberty can be directly traced the cause of the Revolution and the war of 1812 was a re-enforcement of the principles of 1776. The Civil War was the climax of a struggle that existed from the time the world began. On one side was freedom with the principles espoused by God and the other the odious slavery system. The Creator manifested His sympathies in allowing right to triumph.

Continuing in this strain the preacher said America had a mission to perform in releasing other captives, not only those held subject in the Philippines but also the slave to liquor and the victim of sin. In conclusion Mr. MacMurray stated that America owed thanks to God for its wonderful advancement and power among nations, this being the least it could do.

SOLDIERS BEATEN IN RAIN

COMPANY K'S FOOTBALL ELEVEN DEFEATED BY WESTFIELD TEAM.

Score Was 5 to 0—Touchdown Made by Adams Who Secured Ball on a Fumble.

The football game between Company K, of this city, and the Westfield eleven was pulled off, Saturday afternoon, and resulted in a score of 5 to 0 in favor of the Westfields. The game was not finished owing to the heavy rain.

The game was played at Westfield and a large number of people witnessed the game. Tobin, Dewey, Trainor and Adams did the star playing for the Westfields and it was through the clever run of the Westfield quarter back that the single touchdown was made. Adams took the ball from a fumble made by one of the local players and rushed it down the field in the first half and scored a touchdown. As Adams was unable to kick the goal the score remained 5 to 0.

It was shortly after this that the first half came to a close and then the rain began to fall in torrents and by common consent the game was called about the middle of the second half.

The lineups were:

Westfield.		Co. K.
Wilcox	le	Wyckoff

Johnston	lg	Jennings
Dewey	c	Clark

BASKET BALL LEAGUE OPENS

Y. M. C. A. Five Defeated the Hope Y. M. A. in the Initial Game by Score of 22 to 9.

AT Y. M. C. A. GYMNASIUM

Hope Boys Surprised the Crowd by Putting Up a Good Showing in Their First Real Game—Second Half Was Really Close and Also Very Hard Fought.

Decidedly interesting was the opening game of the Plainfield Amateur Basket Ball League, played in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last evening between the teams of the Y. M. C. A. and the Hope Y. M. A. Everybody expected the Y. M. C. A. to win and it did but the showing made by the Hope boys, particularly in the second half, was so unexpected that the game assumed a new interest in the eyes of the spectators who crowded the visitors' gallery. The final score was 22 to 9.

In order to give the league a good sendoff, George T. Hepburn, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. Athletic League of North America, was secured to referee the game and he brought with him two umpires of experience. To the surprise of all, it was the Y. M. C. A. boys who needed the most attention as they had six fouls called on them to the three on Hope.

It was strictly a defensive game with which the Hope boys began. It was their first real game and the strangeness of it all was apparent. It was McCombe and Dilks who bore the brunt of the fight at first. They played a hard, aggressive game. The other confined their efforts chiefly to trying to prevent Y. M. C. A. from scoring. In this they were fairly successful and it was not until seven minutes of play had passed that the association team scored its first goal. There were opportunities but the inaccurate throwing of the Y. M. C. A. players kept down the score. When the first half ended, the Y. M. C. A. had scored six goals, making the score 12 to 0.

A change come over the Hope boys when the second half began. They started an aggressive game and continued it until time was called. Grieb was hurt in a collision with Cahoone and Porter took his place. While Porter lacked Grieb's height, he was quicker and more active. Dilks cleverly landed the first goal for Hope and it wasn't long before Mc Combe had one too. The Y. M. C. A. boys waked up to the fact that they would have to play. After that the game was doubly exciting.

While the fight chiefly centred around the Hope goal, thanks to the superior team work of the association five, the Hope guards managed to prevent much scoring. Occasionally the ball would get down the other end and then it was that Dilks and Whitley distinguished themselves. The play was hard and fast but there were few fouls called and those were chiefly on the Y. M. C. A. team. Of the four called, Hope managed to make three goals.

Denton and Cahoone made the best showing on the Y. M. C. A. team although Giles was very active in the first half. Fair team play was developed but the players were woefully inaccurate in goal throwing. In the second half, the Hope boys showed better form in goal throwing than did their opponents. The one great fault of the Hopes was in leaving their opponents uncovered at times.

The second half was decidedly close, Y. M. C. A. scoring ten points to Hope's nine. Had the brace been made in the start of the game when Hope had the advantage of the clear goal away from the apparatus, a close game would have undoubtedly resulted. As it was Manager Wharton and the Hope rooters were highly gratified with the result.

The summary:

Y. M. C. A.		HOPE Y. M. A.
Denton	right forward	Dilks
Hand, Cahoone	left forward	Whitley
Cahoone, Scull	centre	J. Cose
Giles	right guard	McCombe
Heinecke, Neal	left guard	Grieb, Porter

Score—Y. M. C. A., 22; Hope Y. M. A., 9. Goals from field—Denton (2), Hand, Cahoone (7), Scull, Dilks (2), McCombe. Goals from fouls—Dilks (2), Cose. Fouls—Y. M. C. A., 6; Hope Y. M. A., 3. Referee—George T. Hepburn, of New York. Umpires—C. W. Bowen, of Jersey City, and W. B. Hazelwood, of Brooklyn. Scorer—John H. Doane, of Y. M. C. A.

MINISTER BOWEN REFUSED.

Would Not Take Stand of Other Diplomants Regarding Blockade.

Germany, France and Italy, as well as Great Britain, have taken the position that the blockade of the Orinoco river in Venezuela is ineffective and an effort has been made by the European diplomats to persuade Mr. Bowen, United States Minister to Venezuela, to join in the declaration.

Mr. Bowen has given a refusal. He is avoiding the question with a view not to jeopardize American interests and to leave the heads of the Washington government free. Henry E. Bowen, of Watchung avenue, is a brother of Mr. Bowen, the American minister who has taken this independent position.

DANGERS OF HOLIDAY TIME

CHIEF DOANE ISSUES WARNING AS TO CHRISTMAS DECORATIONS.

Annual Warning in Regard to Use of Inflammable Material—Must Not Use Cotton.

Holiday time with its flimsy decorations of cotton, paper and greens is generally productive of many fires and Chief Doane has issued his annual warning in regard to the use of inflammable material for this purpose. The chief places a ban on the use of cotton and states that in its place mineral wool can be used with perfect safety and gives better results, especially at night. Care should be used in placing Christmas greens near gas jets as they become very inflammable within a short time.

In no case, the chief declares, should electric lights be covered with colored paper or cloth, unless the material be kept clear of the bulbs and space be left for the escape of hot air. It is also a dangerous practice to light Christmas trees with candles and care should be taken that no draperies are near to be blown toward the taper flames.

In summing up, the chief says, extreme caution should be used at all times when decorations are used and it may be the result of saving much property and perhaps human life.

BOROUGH NEEDS SEWER SYSTEM

Former Mayor Hegeman Replies in Interview to Some of His Anonymous Critics.

HE FEELS COMPETENT

Believes Himself Competent to Assist in Securing Suitable Sewer System to be Recommended to Council by Commission After Advising With Mr. Osgood.

A Daily Press reporter met former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, chairman of the North Plainfield Sewage Commission, yesterday afternoon, on his return from a western trip. He asked Mr. Hegeman if he had read the communication signed "Nemo" which appeared in the North Plainfield Weekly Review of November 22. The latter replied that he had and had read the article carefully. He admitted that he had not spent many hours perusing the reports of the Massachusetts State Board of Health referred to in that article.

He further said that his acquaintance with nitrates, chlorates, chlorides, albumoin ammonia, oxydation, nitrofaction, bacteria and so forth, are of a very limited character, and what little he did know had been gleaned from communications appearing in the columns of the Review, bearing the ear marks of certain rabid anti-annexationists, who know that if the much needed sewers are introduced into North Plainfield, some of their "true facts" would be shown up at their true value.

He further said, "What I do know without reference to nitrates or the now famous '10,000 intestenal bacteria to twenty drops of effluent' is that North Plainfield needs a system of sewage, and that need is urgent, if we expect to make any material progress, and I do feel perfectly competent as a practical business man, with the aid of the gentlemen I have the honor to be associated with on our commission, and with the advice of such an eminent engineer as Joseph O. Osgood, to recommend to our Council a plan of sewage disposal that will give to North Plainfield what she must have in this respect at the least possible cost to her taxpayers, couplet with the highest efficiency obtainable under existing conditions.

"I do not claim that the effluent will make desirable drinking water, but so long as its discharge into the stream is lawful and within the requirements of the State Sewerage Commission, I cannot see why "Nemo" should find fault. What we need is a system which will dispose of our sewage in a manner which is satisfactory to us, and cannot be stopped by others."

OLD MAN FELL BY ROADSIDE

Aged Man Overcome by Exhaustion While Going After Medical Attendance.

NEARLY UNCONSCIOUS

Frank Hand, of Dunellen, Found Lying by Roadside and Taken to Hospital by Marshal Campbell—Suffering From Bronchitis—He Will Recover.

Frank Hand, sixty-nine years of age and a resident of Dunellen, was found yesterday afternoon lying in the center of Greenbrook road in a semi-conscious condition by some people who were passing at the time. At first it was thought that the man was dead but when Chief Marshal Campbell, of the borough, was notified and arrived on the scene he found that the man was exhausted and was apparently ill.

He had the man taken to the Muhlenburg Hospital where it was found that he was suffering from a severe attack of bronchitis and was in a serious condition. This morning Hand was able to tell how he came to be in the road and said that he started out for this town on foot for medical attendance but became exhausted on the way and was unable to go any farther.

He said he was a laborer and had a wife and family living in Dunellen. At the hospital it was learned that the man was in no danger, and would be able to be out again in a few days, unless complications arose.

ANOTHER CRAP SHOOTER

GATHERED IN BY THE POLICE AND FINED THIS MORNING.

Other Offenders Haled Before City Judge Runyon This Morning.

William Roy, whose face was missing in the city court, yesterday, when he was called to answer a charge of crap shooting, ran afoul of Patrolman McCarthy later. He was on hand this morning and had a fine of $2 or seven days imposed.

Patrick Burke, of Bayonne, was found helplessly drunk on North avenue, by Patrolman Saffron, last night. He pleaded for suspension in the city court in order to see a sick mother in Scranton and his request was granted.

Julius Rhineback, of Mountainside, "sassed" Patrolman Saffron, last night, when the policeman ordered him to take his horse and wagon away from Park avenue, where they had been standing all evening in the rain. His eight-year-old daughter was also in the wagon without any protection. Becoming more abusive, Rhineback was locked up and this morning he was given his preference of $5 or twenty days.

Arthur Johnston, a machinist, was locked up for disorderly conduct on East Front street, last night. He paid a $5 fine.

CAPT. HOBSON AT THE CASINO

Famous Naval Officer Lectured On "The United States As a World Power."

PLEASED THE AUDIENCE

Told of the Growth of the United States and Declared it Due to the High Ideals of American People—Referred Incidentally to Some of His Experiences.

Captain Richmond Pearson Hobson, U. S. N., whose bravery at the battle of Santiago during the Spanish-American war, has earned the admiration of the American people for all time, lectured last evening in the Casino on "The United States as a World Power." He not only captivated those who heard him but brought forth from the admiring audience round after round of applause as he told in a manner as interesting as it was convincing how this country had rapidly become one of the world's greatest powers.

Tall, square shouldered, and with an eye that flashed with the fire of keen patriotism, he commanded the attention of those who sat before him as he pointed out the marvelous growth of America from the time of the settlement of the thirteen colonies until the present time.

After showing how wonderful had been the growth of this nation and how it had grown to be one of the leading world powers, he said that it was due in a measure to the high ideals of American people. It was principle that caused the persecuted people of the Old World to seek a new and a free land and it was the same thing that prompted the men of only a few years ago to leave the plow and the farm to fight in the Civil War which, he said, was a sociological necessity.

At the close of his address he said that before the United States could become the leading world power it was necessary to have a navy adequate to defend the shores of America which are swept by the Atlantic as well as the Pacific oceans, and that in the rapid growth of the nation the importance of increasing the navy had apparently been overlooked. He alluded incidentally during the course of his lecture to his experiences while a Spanish prisoner of war in Santiago.

CLASS PINS.

Have Been Selected by Seniors of City High School.

The class of 1903, senior class of the City High School, has decided on a design for its class pin and will probably receive the pins in the course of a few weeks. The design represents two triangles, one smaller than the other, so placed upon each other that the vertices of the smaller rest in the center of the sides of the larger. The letters P. H. S. in gold on a white ground are placed one in each of the three small triangular spaces formed by the superposition of the triangles and the smaller triangle bears the class numerals, '03, in gold on a dark green background. At the top of the pin is a small gold owl with wings spread.

Indeed, a Hustler.

Holbert, of the International Correspondence Schools, of Scranton, Pa., has located his branch office at 1212 West Front street, near Clinton avenue, also 518 Park avenue, and are placed in charge of W. H. Miner. Mr. Holbert's many friends will be pleased to have him with them again. He has also branch offices in Bound Brook and Somerville.

Who felt they were most wise;
They tried to corner all the coal,
And boast of their prize.
But even as they planned and schemed;
They felt a twinge of pain
To see coal in Consumers' yards—
Enough to fill a train.

TWO STRONG SERMONS.

Dr. Sanders, of New York, Preached at First Baptist Church.

The First Baptist church was well filled Sunday at both services, when two exceptionally strong sermons were given by Rev. Dr. Henry M. Sanders, of New York. In the morning he pictured man's littleness as compared with the creation of the world, the moon, sun and large bodies of matter, and told how man, through God's help, had been assisted in utilizing the fiery forces of nature. In the evening his theme was along the line of faith and works, showing how the two are inseparable. At the morning service there was a violin solo by Fullerton Waldo, and a soprano solo by Miss Luella Harris.

RECEIVER FOR HYGEIA ICE CO.

Application Made for Receiver Before Vice Chancellor Emery by Company's Counsel.

APPOINTEE NOT NAMED

Many Prominent Plainfielders are Interested in Company — Object is to Straighten Out Affairs of Company Which Has Had Troubles of Late.

Before Vice Chancellor Emery today, application was made for the appointment of a receiver for the Hygeia Ice Company, of this city, for the purpose of straightening out the tangled affairs of that company. The application was made by the company's counsel, Reed & Coddington, and was brought about by the suit of Edward M. VanBuren, of this city. Who the appointee is has not yet been made public.

It will be remembered that the Hygeia Ice Company was organized about five years ago, the promoters being men of wealth and prominence in this city. The concern was capitalized at $50,000, all of which was common stock and all but sixty-five shares were sold to prominent local people. The officers who are still at the head of the concern are: President, Harry G. Runkle; vice president, O. T. Waring; secretary and treasurer, DeWitt C. Ivins. The stock holders and directors are all very prominent men in this community.

Shortly after the company was formed a $60,000 ice plant was erected along the railroad on North avenue above Berckman street where ice was manufactured in what is technically known as the "plate" system. The capacity of the plant was sufficient to supply this and other neighboring towns with ice for the entire season. Shortly after the plant was in working order it was found necessary to put in some new machinery and this meant an additional outlay. While the new machinery was being installed the firm was obliged to purchase ice from other concerns which crippled the concern financially.

When the concern was on its feet again it was found that the supply was greater than the demand and although it supplied Metuchen, and even Somerville, not to mention other small towns, it was found that the competition of the natural ice companies was very keen.

At about this time the coal strike began to be felt in this city and the concern found itself paying $7 a ton for coal where it had only been paying $3. It was this state of affairs which proved to be the last straw on the camel's back and the company found itself obliged to apply for a receiver.

It was said last evening that the company would continue to transact business. It was also said that H. G. Runkle was the last one of the stockholders to consent to the concern going into the hands of a receiver as he had kept the company going in the face of the very unsatisfactory condition of affairs until he found that the firm was going behind instead of going forward.

The offices of the company are located in the office of DeWitt C. Ivins, on Watchung avenue where F. T. Ostrom is the general superintendent.

Big Crowd Expected.

Indications point to a record-breaking attendance at the masquerade reception of the I. C. T. Club, Thanksgiving eve. The committee has sent out twice the usual number of invitations and applications are still being received. Those who will be in charge are George L. Apgar, H. S. Humes, Charles T. Overbaugh, Fred J. Huff and Raymond King.

Hare and Hound Chase.

Kenneth Robbie, the secretary of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A., has arranged for a hare and hound chase Thanksgiving Day morning. The boys will leave the association building at 9:30 and will enjoy a five mile chase, returning to the building at about 11 o'clock.

HOW THEY RETURNED FROM FOOTBALL GAME

Plainfielders Who Rode on the Tender Were Showered With Cinders and Water.

EXPERIENCE WAS NOVEL

INCIDENTALLY IT PROVED RATHER COSTLY FOR THE PARTICIPANTS.

Clothes and Overcoats Were Ruined by Combination—Climax of All Was When the Engine Took In Water on the Fly.

In connection with the Yale-Princeton football game at Princeton, a week ago, a good story has just leaked out concerning two Plainfielders who were among the crowd in the college town to see the match. Both underwent an experience they will not soon forget but exciting as it was they managed to keep the fact quiet until now.

The victims were George B. Cose and Herbert Moore, both popular young men. When the crowd stated away from the football field and swamped the trains on the small branch of the Pennsylvania road, they were unable to get abroad. Not wishing to be left behind, they clambered on top of the engine tender as did several others, expecting the train would stop at Princeton Junction where they could catch an express. Instead the engine kept puffing ahead on the main line and very soon the group on the tender was dodging cinders and trying to see the fleeting panorama through a veil of choking smoke

The climax came at Monmouth Junction when the engine took water on the fly. A continuous succession of waves dashed against them, drenching everyone thoroughly. Moore was giving a new raglan its initial outing and Cose had been looking dapper in striped trousers and patent leathers. After they had been washed over the top of the coal heap about nine times the raiment was fit for the old clo' bag and the faces of the wearers resembled the grimy visage of the engine stoker. The latter and the engineer were enjoying their discomfiture and to make matters worse, again lowered the water pan east of New Brunswick although there was no need of it and the wetting experience was repeated.

As the train rolled into Elizabeth, two sorry looking specimens of humanity dejectedly dropped down from the engine and made a bee line for a drug store where each called for stimulants. A local clothing store made several sales of new suits and coats without delay.

AGAIN THE CANTEEN

Evidence Before War Department All One Way.

CONGRESS LIKELY TO REPEAL LAW

Hundreds of Saloons Opened Near Army Posts Since Exchange Was Abolished—Some Figures on Intemperance In Army.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The war department is in constant receipt of data concerning the canteen question and the effect of its abolition upon the army. Apropos, the statement is made at the war department that only such information as has been contained in the reports of army officers upon the subject has been given to the public, and it is denied that any effort has been made to influence public opinion on the matter.

It is said at the department that the recommendations of the adjutant general in his annual report were based upon the information contained in these reports. It is pointed out that the existence of something like 1,400 saloons in the vicinity of the army posts is shown by the reports received at the department, 250 to 300 of which are said to have been opened since the closing of the canteen. This further statement is made at the department: "The majority of posts have reported that drunkenness and court martials for drunkenness have increased; that desertion and absence without leave have increased; that the effect of closing the canteen upon the morality, discipline and health of the troops has been bad, and while many post commanders are in consequence of frequent changes of garrison and from the absence of correct data upon which to base comparisons unable to report as to the degree of detriment created by the closing of the canteen it can be stated as an absolute fact that in no single case has a post commander expressed an opinion that the effect of the abolition of the sale of beer in the army has resulted in improved conditions."

With reference to the reports from the Philippines, a statement has been made public at the war department epitomizing the annual report of Brigadier General Sanger, inspector general of the division of the Philippines. After narrating the evil effects on the human system of the native liquors the statement continues:

"To remedy these conditions the post exchange, at which light beer was sold, was exercising a wholesome influence, and General Sanger believes that the exchange should be again made a possibility by removing all restrictions on the sale of beer and light wines."

To the fear so often expressed by the opponents of the canteen system that the sale of beer would initiate or induce habits of intemperance General Sanger shows from a careful census of the 342 companies of troops in the Philippine Islands that in 60 companies every enlisted man used vinous, malt or spirituous liquors at date of enlistment, in 130 companies between 90 and 100 per cent, in 58 companies between 80 and 90 per cent, in 26 companies between 70 and 80 per cent and in 20 companies between 60 and 70 per cent. Unfortunately quite a number of men habitually drink to excess, and as this number will probably increase if the men are obliged, as now, to resort to native liquors in order to satisfy what to many of them is a perfectly natural craving the result will be most deplorable.

General Sanger concludes with the remark that "it is hardly probable in view of this information that congress will continue the prohibition against the canteen when it is evident that the sale of beer would be a precaution against the pernicious habits above stated and their fatal and disastrous results."

RIOTING IN HAVANA

Strikers and Police Clash With Deadly Results.

TWO DEAD AND EIGHTY-TWO INJURED

Mayor of the City and Secretary of the Government Blamed For the Disgraceful Transactions—President Palma Called a Halt.

HAVANA, Nov. 25.—As the result of conflicts of a serious character between the police and the men on strike here two strikers are dead and eighty-two other persons are wounded. Five of the latter, one being a lieutenant of police, whose throat was cut by a striker, have injuries of a serious nature. Eight other policemen are wounded. The police have the rioters well under control, but every precaution is being taken to prevent a further outbreak of disorder, and all the police and rural guards in the suburbs have been summoned to concentrate in Havana.

The strike, which at first only concerned the cigar workers, became general by the calling out of all trades in sympathy with the cigar makers. All the tradespeople closed their doors, clerks, cooks and every class of workmen having obeyed the command of the union except the motormen and conductors of the electric cars, who refused to join in the general strike.

Trouble began early in the morning by the holding up of the electric cars by the strikers, whose wrath was naturally directed against the street railroad employees. Several cars were held up and stoned in the outskirts of the city, and the passengers were compelled to walk into Havana, among these being the British and German ministers. Several cars were wrecked, and some motormen and conductors were injured during these occurrences. The carmen, however, continued running their cars until 10 o'clock, when Superintendent Greenwood ordered a suspension of traffic. The employees were willing to remain at work, but the officers of the company in order to protect the property deemed it wise to suspend the service. Mr. Greenwood had asked for protection from the civil governor, but the authorities were unable to protect the public vehicles. A mob of strikers drove the men on the Western railroad from the trains during the morning.

The mayor of Havana and the secretary of government, Diego Tamayo, had during the past week openly sympathized with the strikers and had given orders to the police not to use force in dispersing the crowds, and under these conditions the police were unable to cope with the strikers.

The situation was approaching a critical point at noon, serious disorders having taken place in front of the palace itself, in which a police officer named Maso and a number of policemen and strikers received injuries, when President Palma sent word to the mayor that unless the city authorities could preserve order and protect the railroad company the state would intervene.

The mayor then took drastic measures and issued an edict prohibiting crowds from gathering in the streets and authorizing the chief of police to kill if such action should be necessary to preserve order. A similar show of force early in the morning would undoubtedly have prevented the trouble, but now the strikers had become emboldened, and frequent clashes between them and the police occurred in all parts of the city.

The police were obliged to charge a mob of rioters at the slaughter house, and several among the latter were injured. The vigorous attitude of the police now made itself felt, and traffic on the car lines, which had only been suspended for a brief period, was resumed and was continued from this time forth with only occasional interruptions. Most of the injuries sustained by the strikers were caused by the policemen's clubs.

The Central Veterans' union, headed by General Gomez, held a meeting and sent word to the labor unions that if the disorders continued the veterans would offer their services to President Palma to preserve order. No bread or meat was on sale during the day, and a continuance of the strike will cause much suffering to the poor. The police fear that further trouble may occur, and a detachment of rural guards has been ordered to the city.

Senor Tamayo has resigned his office of secretary of government, but President Palma will not accept his resignation until the strike has been settled.

The public blames Tamayo for his active participation in the strike and says that he and the mayor are responsible for the riots, as he openly expressed sympathy with the strikers. At a political meeting on Wednesday at which Senor Tamayo was chairman he indorsed the action of the strikers.

Cuba Not Unfriendly.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—General Emilio Nunez, governor of the province of Havana, is in Washington for the purpose of rest and recuperation and to obtain some relief from throat trouble with which he has been suffering during the last three or four months. In an interview he said: "With the blessing of unalterable peace Cuba is daily regaining the prosperity lost by the war, and I have no doubt but that the republic will overcome all the obstacles and difficulties that might oppose its consolidation." When asked regarding reports that a feeling of hostility against the United States is spreading in Cuba, he replied: "There is no more significance in these reports than there is in the hostile feelings of this or the other political man or one or two newspapers here against Great Britain, when in reality the relations between that country and the United States are close and cordial. In fine, Cuba can never forget all she owes the United States, and I am sure the immense majority of its people hope that our friendly and commercial relations will daily grow closer, although this does not mean that there is any weakening in the sentiment for independence that drove us to war and which is today the highest ideal of our people."

BUILDERS LOCKED OUT.

Trouble Follows Fines Imposed by a Labor Union.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—A lockout has been declared by the Builders and Contractors' association of New Rochelle which forced all the building trades workmen in suburbs north of New York from Mount Vernon to the Connecticut line to quit work. The number of men out is about 1,500.

The trouble grew out of a recent strike caused by a disagreement between plumbers and their employees. It was adjusted, but two journeymen went back to work before the settlement and were fined $50 by their union.

They refused to pay, and in the controversy following the Building Trades council sustained the union, while the Builders and Contractors' association declared the fines unjust and announced that a lockout would be started if the fines were not remitted by noon last Saturday. They were not, and the declaration of the employers accordingly went into effect.

Statehood Committee Returning.

ARKANSAS CITY, Kan., Nov. 25.—The subcommittee of the United States senate committee on territories investigating the statehood question has finished its work in the territory and is en route to Chicago, where the senators will separate until the latter part of the week, when they expect to assemble with the other members of the senate committee on territories at Washington. The last day's work was a busy one. After having traveled over 500 miles in Oklahoma and the Indian Territory in one day the committee took up the hearing of testimony at Oklahoma City, where a large number of representatives of all parts of the two territories had assembled. In the afternoon the committee held hearings at Guthrie, where there were other delegations which had come for many miles to be heard.

President's First Dinner.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—President and Mrs. Roosevelt gave their first dinner of the season at the White House last night. Covers were laid for eighteen persons. The table was set in the family dining room, the decorations being in white. The guests included Justice and Mrs. White, Secretary Root, the attorney general and Mrs. Knox, the admiral of the navy and Mrs. Dewey, General Crozier, Baron and Baroness Speck von Sternberg, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Strachey, Captain and Mrs. Cowles, Mrs. Grant La Farge and Miss Tuckerman. Miss Alice Roosevelt has returned to Washington after an absence of several months spent at Oyster Bay and with friends in the east.

What Miles Thinks.

MANILA, Nov. 25.—Lieutenant General Miles will leave here for China, Japan and Russia at the end of the week. Discussing the Philippines General Miles said: "I have seen 13,000 of our troops and will inspect more of them before leaving. I found them to be in fair condition. This is a hard country for campaigning. I inspected the principal natural defenses of the islands and some of the harbors which the government may fortify. I found the people generally impoverished from the effects of the war and the pestilence which followed it, and I fear some may suffer from famine."

Sculptors View Exposition Grounds.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 25.—Augustus St. Gaudens, Daniel Chester French and John Quincy Adams Ward, three noted sculptors of America, have arrived here. These gentlemen have been appointed a committee to advise regarding the sculptural scheme of the Louisiana Purchase exposition. They will counsel with F. Wellington Ruckstuhl, chief of sculpture for the Louisiana Purchase exposition. The sculptors spent considerable time examining the layout plan of the fair and its development into buildings and cascades with the view of advising regarding the sculpture treatment.

Opposed to Smoot.

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 25.—The ministerial alliance of Salt Lake City has adopted resolutions strongly opposing the proposed election to the United States senate of Reed Smoot, one of the twelve apostles of the Mormon church. A copy of the resolutions will be sent to every ministerial alliance of prominence in the country at once and also probably to President Roosevelt, every congressman and United States senator and others prominent in political life.

McGuire Given Certificate.

GUTHRIE, Okla., Nov. 25.—The territorial election board has issued a certificate of election to B. S. McGuire, the Republican candidate for delegate to congress, placing his majority at 394 over W. M. Cross, Democrat. Cross has papers of contest ready to be filed when congress convenes. The legislative certificates of election were also issued and show the joint assembly to be Democratic by a majority of one.

Judge Earl Very Low.

HERKIMER, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Robert Earl, former judge of the court of appeals, who was stricken with paralysis at his apartments in the Palmer House on Saturday evening, is now in a critical condition. Little hope is entertained of his recovery.

Letters from Women

Cured by the use of Kodol are received daily. Their troubles nearly all begin with indigestion or other stomach disorder.

If the food you eat fails to give strength to your body, it is because the juices secreted by the stomach and digestive organs are inadequate to transform the nutrient properties of the food into blood. That is indigestion. The system is deprived of the amount of nourishment required to keep up the strength, and the result is that one or more of the delicate organs gradually grows weak, and then weaker, until finally it is diseased. Here a great mistake is made. That of treating the diseased organ. The best doctors in the land make this very mistake. Why should they? It is so easy to see that the trouble is not there.

Kodol Cures

This famous remedy puts the stomach and digestive organs in a healthy condition so that rich, red blood is sent coursing through the veins and arteries of every muscle, tissue and fiber throughout every organ of the entire body, and by Nature's law of health, full strength and vigor is soon restored to each.

Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach disorders.

I have taken Kodol for nearly two months after each meal and it is the only remedy that gave relief from the terrible pains I endured. After a time I would take it but once a day, and now, while I keep a bottle handy, I seldom need it, as it has cured me.

CHAFFEE IN WASHINGTON.

Consultation With Secretary Root Regarding Army Reduction.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Major General Adna R. Chaffee, who has just assumed command of the department of the east after his long service in the Philippines, has reported to Secretary Root. He appeared in uniform and upon his arrival held an impromptu reception in the secretary's office. Later, accompanied by Adjutant General Corbin, he made official calls on Secretary Hay and Secretary Moody. Subsequently he had a long talk with Secretary Root about the conditions in the Philippines, with especial reference to the plans of the department for the reduction of the army there. As the result of his recommendations a general order relative to the methods of reducing the army will be issued.

Later in the day Secretary Root accompanied General Chaffee and the latter's aid, Captain Lindsey, to the executive offices and presented them to the president. A few minutes after they reached the executive offices they were joined by Adjutant General Corbin. The president cordially congratulated General Chaffee on his work in China and in the Philippines.

After leaving the executive offices General Chaffee went to luncheon with General Corbin at the latter's residence. General Chaffee will remain in Washington several days.

Building Appropriation Too Small.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The attention of Secretary Moody has been directed to the fact that it will be impossible to complete the buildings at the Naval academy within the limit of cost fixed by congress owing to the very large increase in the price of material. When the new academy buildings were planned, congress fixed the limit of cost at $8,000,000, and Secretary Long apportioned this sum among the various buildings and improvements. Since then it has been decided to erect a hospital and also to do certain dredge work in the Severn. Captain Bronson, superintendent of the academy, who was at the department, called the secretary's attention to the fact that since 1900 the price of building material had increased on an average 30 per cent.

Voting Machine Reverses Result.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 25.—The voting machine in the Second district of the Third ward of Ithaca was opened pursuant to order of Supreme Court Justice George F. Lyon, and as a result it was found that Miller, the Democratic candidate for mayor of Ithaca, received 140 votes, or seven more than was accredited to him by the official canvass, which indicated that the vote for mayor had been a tie between the Republican and Democratic candidates, each one having apparently received 1,648 votes. Miller is therefore apparently elected by a plurality of seven votes. The Republican committee has not yet decided what action to take, and there may be a fight in the courts.

Well Known Architect Dead.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 25.—Joseph M. Wilson, one of the best known architects and engineers in the country, has died suddenly in his office of heart disease. He was sixty-four years of age. Mr. Wilson was born in Phoenixville, Pa., and was graduated from the Rensselaer Polytechnic institute, Troy, N. Y. In 1860 he was appointed assistant engineer of the Pennsylvania railroad and was connected with that road until 1886. In 1889 Mr. Wilson made a special examination of the trade and training schools in England and France before designing the Drexel institute in this city.

REACT GORE MURDER

Suspected Russian Endures Ordeal and Is Set Free.

AN INVESTIGATION BY AMERICANS.

Consul General Gowdy Orders Physicians Resident In Paris to Conduct Autopsy and Report on Death of California Woman.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—The Gore tragedy was presented in a dramatic aspect yesterday when the French officials took De Rydzewski to the scene of the occurrence and compelled him to re-enact every detail of the affair, this being done under the practice of the French law, which requires the reconstitution of the tragedy in the presence of officials under exactly the same conditions as it was originally enacted.

The chamber was arranged as on the night of the fatality, and the same weapon was placed in De Rydzewski's hand to act out his version. As far as is known the prisoner went through the ordeal with fortitude, without wavering from his first story of the accidental fall of the revolver.

As the bullet was found buried in the hair of the victim it is impossible to verify the direction taken by the missile otherwise than by the wound. As a result of the examination the examining magistrate has decided to set De Rydzewski at liberty provisionally. Before the party left the house M. Bertillon, the criminologist, who is also investigating the case on behalf of the police, arrived and took several photographs of the room after asking De Rydzewski to place everything in exactly the same position it occupied at the moment of the tragedy. It is reported that as he did this De Rydzewski evinced considerable emotion.

At the same time the case has assumed an international aspect by the action of Consul General Gowdy in following out the instructions of the state department at Washington and appointing a commission composed of four American doctors residing in Paris to conduct an independent post mortem examination.

The questions before the American medical commission are delicate, as their conclusions as to the course of the bullet may conflict with those of the medical experts. The latter base the accident theory on the upward range of the bullet, but the American officials believe that an independent autopsy will establish the fact that the range was almost horizontal, thus indicating a direct shot from an aimed weapon.

The United States consulate staff is also taking the depositions of witnesses independent of those taken by the French officials. So far this action has not developed any new features, but the depositions furnish a complete and unprejudiced history of the case and will be forwarded to the state department at Washington. Mr. Gowdy will be represented at the examination of De Rydzewski, in whose apartment Mrs. Gore was killed, but as an observer, as care will be taken not to create an impression that there is the least official doubt of the thoroughness of French justice.

Strike Has Lasted a Year.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Nov. 25.—Fifty-two weeks ago seventy iron molders employed at the Parsons Iron foundry went on strike because the company would not grant a piecework schedule on all kinds of work. They are still out, and the company is running its foundry with nonunion men. The vicinity of the foundry is still picketed, and every week the strikers have succeeded, they say, in inducing some of the new employees to quit.

THE BASKET BALL LEAGUE.

The Plainfield Amateur Basket Ball League opened its season last evening. The opening game was to have been played a week ago but the match was postponed until last night as the Hope Y. M. A. boys were not ready. As everybody expected, the Y. M. C. A. team won but the Hope boys made a good showing considering the fact that it was really the first match game they had ever played. They lacked a single veteran on their team. With a few weeks practice, the Hope contingent may be expected to make a far better showing than it did last night.

There is no doubt that this league is going to greatly increase the local interest in that already popular sport. Basket ball has always taken well with the Plainfield public but the games heretofore have been so far apart that the enthusiasm could not be maintained as it might with a league in full sway. The only trouble will be that neither of the local gymnasiums will be able to accommodate anything like the number of people who will desire to attend these games.

Aside from the league contests, it seems probable that there will be a number of other interesting contests in Plainfield this winter. The league itself has stirred up the interest in the game to a point never before reached and not only will the league teams schedule outside games but the local schools will have teams and arrange an informal schedule among themselves. Altogether the prospects are for a season of great activity both in and out of the league.

In 1860 there was consumed in this country 1,181,054 pounds of chocolate. Then an engertic establishment, according to the Philadelphia Record, began to advertise this article, chiefly in the newspapers and magazines, and each year increased the amount of space used. In 1902 the consumption has so far been 48,785,688 pounds, or an increase of 4,030 per cent. The growth of population during the period cited was 151 per cent. There is no doubt that the advertising has been the main factor in the popularization of chocolate.

Governor Murphy is frank in his advocacy of the establishment of an Executive mansion at Trenton for the use of the governor. It is from not selfish motive, however, as he will personally have no opportunity of using it if the Legislature should decide in favor of it. Throughout the State the movement has found with little favor. The Governor declares that he is going to urge it nevertheless and believes the day will come when the people of New Jersey will see the wisdom of his advice.

ROBBERS CAUGHT.

Two Suspects, Hard Pressed by Pursuers, Give Themselves Up.

ATTLEBORO, Mass., Nov. 25.—Two men suspected of robbery who had hidden in the woods and who while concealed overheard a discussion of plans for their capture, feeling that they could not escape, gave themselves up to their pursuers. They are George Chamillard and Arthur Chase, and after a hearing at Taunton they pleaded not guilty and were held in $1,000 each for the grand jury they expressed a willingness to show the police where the stolen goods could be found.

They led the officers to a locality known as "Dead Swamp," where the quantity of stolen goods found lead the police to believe that the apprehension of Chamillard and Chase solves the mystery of many robberies in this section.

For a week the police have been dogging the trail of the men, who were considered dangerous and who were hiding in the woods. For two days the men had been surrounded, and when concealed not more than fifty feet away they heard the officers arrange plans for closing in on them and became convinced that escape was impossible.

Strike Conferences.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 25.—The scenes of the strike settlement negotiations have been suddenly shifted from this city to Washington and New York. Today the committee of nine of the independent operators is holding a conference with the presidents of the coal carrying roads regarding the position of the individual companies, and at the same time a meeting between Wayne MacVeagh and other attorneys representing the coal roads and President Mitchell and his attorneys is being held in the national capital. Scranton and the entire coal regions will in the meantime wait with considerable interest to hear what the Thanksgiving offering will be. The independents have gone to New York to find out what the large companies can do for them in the way of freight rates in case an increase in wages is decided upon. The mine workers' representatives have gone to Washington to find out what the large companies had to offer. Both ardently wish for success, but it is not within their power to say what will be the outcome.

No Cause For Action In Potter Case.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Attorney General Davies in an opinion submitted to Governor Odell in the Potter case holds that the state has no power to proceed against the Schenectady Painters' union for expelling Potter because of his membership in the national guard. No charge can be brought against the union for conspiracy, as there is no proof that the union did anything more than notify Potter's employers that he was a nonunion worker. It is believed that a bill will be introduced in the legislature next year making it a misdemeanor for any person to discriminate in any way against a man because he belongs to the national guard.

No Thanksgiving Bullfight.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 25.—Chief of Police Hayes has announced that the bullfight scheduled to take place in Convention hall on Thanksgiving evening would not be permitted. The tan bark ring has been placed in the hall, bulls and matadores from Mexico are in the city, and everything was ready for the fight when the promoters were informed that the law would not permit the fight to take place. The bullfight was made the subject of discussion in a majority of the pulpits of Kansas City on Sunday, which aroused public sentiment.

Mrs. R. A. Martin, of Jackson street, says: "I had pain in my back and loins for about a year or more, no doubt caused by my kidneys being out of order. I felt it more in the morning, just after getting up or if I did any stooping or lifting. Notwithstanding the fact that I took all kinds of medicines I never found anything which helped me until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at L. W. Randolph's drug store. They not only removed the pain, but they strengthened me in other ways."

THE TOWN HAD OFFSETS.

Consequently the Indignant Drummer's Claim for Damages Brought Only $119.34.

"I had been knocking about a Kansas town in the evening," said a drummer with a limp, to a Dallas (Tex.) News reporter, "and in heading for my hotel I walked plump into an open sewer which had no red light of warning.

"I had a bad fall and broke my hip, and I wasn't yet out of the sewer when I made up my mind to sue for $20,000 damages. I was taken to the hospital, and next day the city attorney called on me to know what I was going to do.

WALKED INTO A SEWER.

"'I am going to sue the town, of course,' I replied.

"'But what for?' he asked.

"'For personal damages. There should have been a railing or a light, but there was neither, and my injury will lay me up for weeks.'

"'But don't you know what you escaped by falling into the sewer?' he asked.

"'No.'

"'Then let me tell you that the roof of the hotel fell in last night and killed three men, and if you had been in your bed you would have been crushed to pulp. You really owe this town something instead of talking about damages.'

"When able to get out," continued the drummer, "I found that public opinion was against me and the people ready to stand a suit, and by advice of a lawyer I settled the case for $125.

"I didn't even get all that. In tumbling into the sewer I broke two planks and brought on a cave-in and the damages were assessed at $5.66 and taken out of the money."

WELCOME TO TRAMPS.

Why Weary Willie Declined to Accept a Benevolent Farmer's Invitation to Tea.

"I thought to try a little experiment on tramps," said an Ohio farmer to a Philadelphia Press man, "and I put up signs all along the road inviting them to call at my place.

"I had plenty of work for all who wanted it, and was willing to give every one a fair show.

"They read the signs, and they came my way, but they didn't stop. They'd call at every other farmhouse, but they passed me by as if we had the smallpox.

"One evening I stood at the gate

"RISKS OF WHAT?"

as one approached, and when he came up I asked:

"'Did you see my signs along the road?'

"'Plenty of 'em,' he replied.

"'Goin' to stop?'

"'Not on your life.'

"'I can give you a supper and a good place to sleep.'

"'Don't want it.'

"'See here,' I continued, as he began to walk away, 'what's the matter that all you tramps pass me by? I don't look like a man up to tricks, do I?'

"'I can't say you do, but we ain't takin' no risks, you understand.'

"'Risks of what?'

"'Why, I guess the crowd thinks you are one of them fellers who invites a tramp into supper and then keeps him at family prayers for an hour and a half afterward to get even with him.'"

In Mexico the young men can show great attention to young ladies, and at very little expense. They are, therefore, quite eager to invite them to theaters, parties, etc. And no wonder; for it is the custom in that country for the lady's father to pay for the tickets, and furnish the carriage, supper, etc.

Lace flounces are extremely fashionable, but the majority are straight at the top, and the godet flouncing of lace is shown in imitation of handsome lace.

chine or broche design and delicate colorings. The ends fall quite to the ground, and the loops are carelessly knotted over the back. Some sashes have windmill bows, one-half standing up and kept quite flat over the gown. The bouquet de corsage is in the form of a big chou or the market bunch style is affected for small compact blossoms. The trail over the shoulder appears to have quite disappeared.

TAILOR STYLE.

Russian Blouse Costumes Are Very Popular For Young People.

The Russian blouse costume is decidedly popular with the young and slender, and there are many charming novelties in make and finish. The newest Russian blouses have hoodlike collars with trimmings around the shoulders or are collarless and trimmed flat, and this fashion admits of charming little chemisettes which have a very smart effect when the fur boa or stole is removed. The furs set much better over the flat plain blouse.

The tightly draped collars are often made to turn up at the edge, a method which accentuates the effect of a hood. Now that light colored gowns are worn during the winter, borderings of dark fur are in request, and brown skunk is a very handsome fur and smart on mastic and antelope cloth, while it is also used on opera coats of light satin cloth.

Dotted white point d'esprit is the material of this simple but effective evening gown, which is trimmed with bows of black velvet.

SAM WARD'S RECIPE.

It Made Terrapin Stew Famous the World Over.

Epicures Pronounce It the Greatest of Culinary Triumphs — Taste for the Amphibian an Acquired One.

[Special Washington Letter.]

TERRAPIN time has come again. This delicacy of the rich and epicurean, is becoming well-nigh extinct. Systematic cultivation alone has prevented the entire disappearance of the once numerous amphibians.

Terrapin farming—that is, the "planting" of terrapin as it would be known in oyster terminology—is not by any means new. About twenty five years ago a man of the name of Dorlin established a terrapin pound just below Mobile where he kept young terrapin for growth, and where he claimed to be also raising terrapin from the egg. The report of the fish commission, however, denies that he did any breeding. The Dorlin terrapin farm was destroyed by one of the terrific Gulf storms, and was never reestablished.

Every year there is a scare throughout the eastern country, particularly in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington, over the likelihood of the disappearance of terrapin. Last year the report was spread at the beginning of the fall and winter season, and the wealthy were obliged to pay enormous prices. They were the more anxious to have terrapin at any price, because dealers said that another winter might come and no terrapin would be served. The report again went all over this section late the past summer when the farmers and fishermen of Maryland and Virginia were impounding terrapin for the coming winter trade. All along the shores of Chesapeake bay supplies of terrapin are being collected for the market of the immediate future. There are laws against impounding terrapin, but they are ignored.

Although there is no sale for terrapin until snow flies, which is about Christmas time, the farmers of the states contiguous to the bay are constantly on the lookout for stray terrapin, which they pick up and take home, where they hold them for the season. They do not fatten them On the contrary they seldom feed them. Terrapin hibernate. When he has had his spring or summer feed he can be put in a pen or barn and left for two or three months. He will not die. A Baltimore dealer nailed one in a box and left him there for three months, at the end of which time he claimed that the captive weighed one ounce more than he did when he was imprisoned. This story is one which is well verified, and there are other tales of terrapin longevity, which are regarded by some as of less credulity. Scientists all admit, however, that the terrapin is a hibernating amphibian.

In the neighborhood of Chincoteague island, near the eastern shore of Maryland, in Chesapeake bay, there are several houses where from 200 to 1,000 terrapin are stored in straw in good seasons. They are very curious looking fellows of all sizes and are a sight to behold. Whenever the owner wants to display them he raps hard on the side of the house before opening the door. Each terrapin sticks his head out of the straw to see what the noise is about. They have very acute hearing and manifest great curiosity whenever any unusual noises are heard. Down south they are lured to destruction by this trait. A fisherman rowing over the mud banks raps on the side of his boat. Water carries the sound, and the terrapin comes to the surface to see what made that noise, and the fisherman very promptly satisfies the curiosity of the inquirer.

The officials of the fish commission do not believe that the terrapin will become extinct so long as systematic farming is carried on, but they believe that this industry should be increased very largely.

Washington and LaFayette, Cornwallis and Tarleton knew the quality of terrapin stew, but they ate it sometimes for want of something better, and not as a luxury. Terrapin stew was one of the hardships of their military environments occasionally. There was at one time a law in Maryland providing that a man should feed only so much terrapin to his slaves, for even the slaves rebelled against such a diet. And, for that matter, no civilized white man really likes terrapin when he first eats it, but acquires the taste because it is fashionable and expensive, and because everybody tells him what a grand luxury it will be when he becomes accustomed to it. All of which is true, for the taste once acquired is everlasting.

The farmers and fishermen along the bay shores ate terrapin because it was economical to do so. The crop was so valueless that they would not take the trouble to gather any more than was sufficient for the use of their own families during the season. Naturally they would expect their slaves to take to the same kind of food, but the slaves were right out in open rebellion against terrapin. They were docile enough and endured all sorts of hardships, and injustices, but when it came to terrapin for a steady diet they declared they could not stand it. Consequently the law was enacted limiting the amount of that sort of food for the slaves. But, beginning with terrapin for the sake of economy, the white folks acquired the taste. Senator John M. Clayton, of Delaware, was very fond of terrapin. He usually bought an ox load of them for a dollar, and had them shoveled into his cellar like coals. His own people regarded his taste for terrapin as so peculiar that it became a tradition of his state until everybody began eating terrapin.

Although the negroes do not care for terrapin they are great hunters and cooks of the toothsome amphibian. They liked nothing better than to get away from plantation work and go hunting terrapin, and they are still so inclined. There was no commercial demand for terrapin previous to 1850. The waters of Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina fairly swarmed with them. They were unmolested except for home tables. But when the people of northern states began to acquire the taste the fishermen began bringing them to market. Then there was a system of southern hospitality, which was exceedingly shrewd. Relatives and other visitors from northern states were entertained lavishly, and they were given terrapin everywhere. They are regaled with stories of how to make the stew, and had it dinned into their ears until they went back north talking terrapin and nothing else.

Sam Ward, once known as the king of the lobby, was successful in all his schemes before congress primarily because he was such an unusually extravagant entertainer. He studied all of the epicurean artifices and was himself one of the best of cooks. His terrapin stew was famous, and he always either made it himself or personally supervised its making. Here is his recipe: "Immerse live terrapin in boiling water. Let it boil half an hour. Then take out, remove lower shell, carefully cutting out the meat. Take out gall bag without cutting or breaking, and throw it away. Remove liver and cut it into cubes. Remove meat from upper shell, disjoint and place in iron pot with the cubed liver and a pint of the liquor in which terrapin was boiled. Watch carefully and cook until tender. Serve in a sauce made of two ounces best butter, a pinch of flour, half pint cream, cayenne pepper and salt. On the bottom of each plate place a piece of bacon cooked crisp, so that it will easily break all to pieces."

It was with that recipe that Sam Ward captured the prince of Wales, and until this day King Edward has his terrapin stews in season, made on Sam Ward's recipe. Until the day of his death John Chamberlin, the famous restaurateur, served terrapin in the same way. After his death the rich and extravagant guests of his house said that they could not get any terrapin fit to eat there, and so John Chamberlin's famous place in this city has long been closed. It was literally built on terrapin.

Terrapin are found only in America. From Long Island sound to Texas they are to be found, and a very few have been taken on the Pacific coast. The terrapin of the northern waters receive the preference of epicures, because their flesh is more delicate. That is because they develop more slowly than the terrapin of the southern waters. The most prolific waters are those along the Virginia shore just below the mouth of the Potomac river. The terrapin of Maryland waters bring better prices than the Virginian because they are finer, but Virginia produces fully two-thirds of all the terrapin in the market. The diamondback terrapin of Chesapeake bay is the best of all, and therefore the most costly. And the most desirable diamondback is the six-inch fellow. After them are the heifers and the bulls; the latter being cheapest and used in restaurants for terrapin soup, a very inferior imitation of the genuine stew of the tables of the rich.

Suppose you save up your extra pennies, and have a terrapin stew instead of turkey for your next Christmas dinner?

Do You Wish To Borrow Money?

In order to accommodate all classes of borrowers (those who cannot borrow at a bank, as well as those who can), the Mutual Loan and Investment Company, of 118 Market street, Newark, N. J., has a department for handling quickly and confidentially loans ranging from $10 to $300 on furniture, pianos, storage receipts, etc.

The security is not removed from your possession or in any way disturbed. The honest, careful and conservative borrower will try and decide two points before borrowing. First, where he can get the best terms. Second, where he can get fair and square treatment.

This company is in a position to give you by far the most satisfactory terms ever offered by any concern or individual negotiating this class of loans.

With this company you are assured of getting the lowest rates, easiest payments and longest time for repayment. The whole transaction from the time the application is made until loan is paid is entirely confidential. We give you another advantage in case you take the loan out for six months or a year, and wish to settle the same before the time expires; we charge you only for the time you have had the money. We also take up loans from other companies and advance more money.

Kindly call and let us explain our simple and up-to-date methods. If not entirely convenient for you to call, please write and our representative will call and give you any desired information. Remember it costs nothing to make application. Loans promptly made in Elizabeth, Plainfield, Westfield, Roselle, Rahway, Perth Amboy and all suburban towns.

ADVENTURE IN MIDAIR.

Young Man Caught in a Balloon Rope Rises 3,000 Feet and Escapes Without Hurt.

Louis Ward, of Milford, Mass., aged 20 years, made an involuntary and thrilling acrobatic balloon ascension the other day. His left foot caught in the guy rope of a balloon and he was carried into the air and suspended head downward. After being carried up 3,000 feet into the air and directly across Hoag lake he landed unhurt 15 minutes later in a tree top a mile from the point where he went up.

Ward was assisting Prof. Hillman, a professional aeronaut, who has been giving balloon ascensions and parachute exhibitions at Hoag park. Hillman's balloon, a massive hot air one, was being prepared for the afternoon exhibition, and Ward and others were assisting. Everything ready, the professor gave the word, the balloon was released, and swiftly mounted into the air with the professor hanging to the parachute.

Ward started to get out of the way as the balloon was released, but his left foot caught in one of the guy ropes, and, to the horror of the several thousand spectators, he was carried into the air suspended head downward. His weight held the balloon on its side, in danger of an immediate collapse and certain death to both men. Hillman acted quickly. Ward dangled from the balloon about ten feet above the aeronaut, and beyond his reach. If the balloon was brought to an upright position there was some chance for Ward, so, after a few words of advice as to how to secure himself and draw himself upright, Hillman released the parachute when but 200 feet in the air and came safely to the ground.

The balloon, freed from this weight, righted itself and shot upward and across the lake, which is about half a mile wide. The balloon soon began its descent, coming down easily and gracefully, and Ward landed in a tree unhurt.

HUSBAND IS A WOMAN.

Baltimore Widow's Heart and Hand Are Won by a Pretty North Carolina Girl.

Under a recent date a Chicago Chronicle correspondent writes from Baltimore, Md., that a week ago Mrs. Ernestine L. Rauck, a pretty young widow of North Eutaw street, married Herman G. Wood, who had boarded in her house for some months. At night the bride went to the house of Rev. Anthony Pilkovsky, who performed the ceremony, and in a hysterical manner informed the preacher that she had been married to a woman. The police investigated and the "groom" confessed.

The "groom" is Lydia Lota Sawyer, 22 years old and not bad looking. She was locked up on the charge of obtaining $100 from Mrs. Rauck by false pretenses. In her confession Miss Sawyer stated that she belonged to a wealthy family residing near Elizabeth City, N. C. She left home five years ago, deserting an infant boy, it is said.

Disgrace and the fact that she could secure employment easily caused her to don male attire, and this she has worn for five years in this city without exciting suspicion. She made love to two women and jilted a Washington girl to wed Mrs. Rauck. Dispatches from North Carolina confirm the girl's story.

A peculiar breed of hogs has for years been raised by Ike Lawrence, of Putnam county, Ga. His hogs are not of the cloven-footed species, but all have hoofs like a horse.

SPORTING NEWS

ON THE GRIDIRON.

The North Plainfield A. C. will play two football games Thanksgiving Day. In the morning they will play the Westfield A. C. and in the afternoon the West End A. C. The games will be on Crescent Oval, North Plainfield.

An erroneous impression seems to prevail that the I. C. T. Club's football season will end with the Thanksgiving game. This is not so as the team will play regularly until December 6 when it concludes by meeting Company K.

The greatest sporting event of Thanksgiving Day will be the big game between Alis A. A. eleven and Bergen Point F. C. at Hope Common at 10:45 o'clock, when the best lineup that Alis has had on the gridiron this year will be on hand to sustain the envious record of the Alis of not being defeated once this year and of being the champion football team of Union county.

On Thanksgiving Day the Orange Field Club will play a game with the Port Richmond team of Staten Island. This will be the Orange Field Club's last appearance this season on the gridiron and the boys expect to put up a winning game with the visitors. The game will be played in the afternoon on Hope Commn. In preparation for this game the O. F. C. practiced last evening at 65 Westervelt avenue and will again tomorrow evening at the same place.

FOOTBALL.

Charles Cumberson, the I. C. T. full back, was numbered among the witnesses of the Yale-Harvard football game, Saturday afternoon.

Ben J. Harris, the I. C. T. right end, has left for his old home in Montgomery, Alabama. Football experts say he is one of the best ends that ever played in this city.

A game of football has been arranged for Saturday between Company K and Alis. The arrangements for this game, which will decide the local championship, were completed last evening in the office of The Daily Press when the managers of both teams, Harold A. Chandor, of the Alis, and Robert M Clark, of Company K, were present and made the date for the game which is to be played on Hope Common in the afternoon.

GOLF.

The programme of events for the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club on Thanksgiving Day will include in the morning the semi-final play for the Holiday cup in which the contestants will be W. M. Murray, C. C. Burke, George T. VanBoskerck and Dudley H. Barrows. There will also be a bogey handicap in the morning and in the afternoon there will be the finals for the Holiday cup. Next Saturday will conclude the active season at the club, when there will be the final play for the Golf Committee and Boys' cups.

ROD AND GUN.

Edward Mercier, Jr, and Jacob Overland, of North Plainfield, went hunting in Ash Swamp on Saturday. They shot fifteen rabbits and a raccoon.

J. W. Cross, of Jackson avenue, went hunting yesterday and returned with three squirrels and several rabbits. He found the game very plentiful in the locality of Dunellen.

Ard, Hedges and Carman. The trouble came very quickly, originating with an earache, and is one of the most peculiar the physicans have had to deal wih. The condition of the patient is critical.

Electrical Display.

A live electric light wire in front of the home of O. T. Waring on Park avenue, last evening, attracted much attention. In the light wind which was blowing at the time, the insulation, as it rubbed against a tree, became worn off and sent out long sparks from many of the branches. The electrical display was witnessed by many.

GOBBLERS ARE VERY SCARCE

BUT THE LOCAL DEALERS ARE PREPARED FOR THANKSGIVING.

All of Them Have Secured a Stock of Fine Birds—Price is Going Up.

Residents of Plainfield who delight in seeing the Great American Bird, otherwise known as the turkey, occupying the center of the table at the beginning of the Thanksgiving feast, must needs see to it that one is ordered promptly. According to the local butchers, not in many years have they been so scarce as at present and there is a chance that the demand may exceed the supply. The price has advanced somewhat and the birds are now retailing at from twenty to twenty-five cents per pound while it will probably be higher by tomorrow.

Heavy rains in the early spring is assigned as the cause of the light market, the dampness and disagreeable conditions killing the young turkeys off by hundreds. Most of those sold in this city are raised in Hunterdon county while a few come from down south. Those that did attain full growth are said to be unusually fine and plump.

Fred Endress, of West Front street, has received already a shipment of 1,000 beauties from a farmer near Everittstown. He expects another lot in tomorrow. Scheuer & Company report receiving a consignment of fine gobblers from Whitehouse, numbering 350. Their buyer had great difficulty in geting them and another lot had to be ordered from Virginia. The latter are equal in frichness to the Jersey bird but they cost the dealer more on account of freight rates.

Smalley Brothers also report having difficulty in getting their orders filled, but they succeeded in getting their pick of some choice Hunterdon county flocks. J. W. VanSickle, the North avenue market man, purchased his in the vicinity of South Somerville and Lebanon. In speaking of the scarcity he declared that he had never seen so few, as most of the farms he had visited were without a bird, while in previous years the fields were overrun with them.

ABOUT THE ROGERS SUIT

WHAT JEWELERS' CIRCULAR HAS TO SAY ABOUT IT.

The International Silver Company is Going to Fight Plainfielder in Higher Court.

The following taken from the Jewelers' Circular, a weekly publication, regarding the famous suit of the International Silver Company against the Wm. H. Rogers Corporation, of Plainfield, will be of interest to many. It was published in last week's issue and is as follows:

"John P. Bartlett, of Mitchell, Bartlett & Brownell, counsel in New York for the International Silver Company, when seen Thursday by a Circular-Weekly reporter in regard to the refusal of Vice Chancellor Stevens, of the Court of Chancery, Trenton, to grant a temporary injunction in the suit of the International Silver Company against the William H. Rogers Corporation, to restrain the latter from the further use of the name Rogers on silver plated ware, said that in reviewing the memorandum filed by Vice Chancellor Stevens he is inclined to believe that the only grounds upon which the refusal was based was that of laches.

"However," continued Mr. Bartlett, "the decision was only in regard to the temporary injunction, and we hope to be successful in our efforts to obtain a permanent injunction. We will begin on the final hearing for this injunction as soon as we can get the necessary evidence and can take testimony.

"If the final injunction is denied us we still have the United States Circuit Court in which to begin action against Rogers' customers. If we cannot stop him from manufacturing goods with our stamp on them, we can enjoin his customers from using them when they are made, and thus bring him to a halt.

"Mr. Bartlett appeared to be slightly surprised that the New Jersey Court did not follow the precedents established by the United States Courts, which have already settled the points in another controversy, in favor of the International Silver Company."

BIND IT UP.

Ever since men became weary and women minstered to them, it has been the custom to bind up any weak part of the body as the best preventative and relief for fatigue. Now the "Dorothy Dodd" Shoe is made in such a manner that it binds up the weak part of the foot, which is the arch. It strengthens and sustains the overworked muscles there which stretch at every step. But it does not itself yield. Examine a "Dorothy Dodd" after two months' service and you find the shank has lost none of its curve. Examine some other shoes ofter only two weeks' wear and see how the shank has lost its stiffness and bends at each step. No support to the arch there. And the result is that long walking becomes wearisome.

WOMAN FELL IN A CISTERN

Walked Into It In the Dark and Could Not Escape Until Aid Came.

THERE HALF AN HOUR

Rain Water Had Partially Filled It and Sides Were Too Steep and Slippery to Permit Her to Escape—Finally Rescued by a Policeman—Was Injured.

A short cut through a field between Essex and Fourth streets, near Spruce street, last night, resulted in Mrs. Martha Parkinson, of West Fourth street, meeting with a peculiar and unpleasant accident.

She was walking along a frequently traversed path which runs in the rear of a new house being erected on Spruce street. Unknown to her a deep excavation, which is to be used as a cistern, had been made directly in the way and was left unprotected. Into this she plunged headlong. Besides suffering bodily bruises she found herself partly submerged by rain water.

The steep sides offered no foothold and it was impossible for her to climb out. There was no other way out of the predicament but to call for help and this she did with a vehemence for nearly half an hour before her cries were heard by a boy. The lad was thoroughly frightened, as he could not discern the source, and made off to the home of Police Doorman Thomas McCue. Hurrying to the scene, the latter found Mrs. Parkinson in an almost exhausted condition. He was forced to call other men from nearby houses and with the aid of a plank she was finally extricated, bruised and bedraggled.

Although no bones were broken by the fall, Mrs. Parkinson is in great pain and is confined to her bed. There is a possible chance that illness may result from the exposure.

WHY THIS COUNTRY SHOULD BE GRATEFUL

Some Reasons for Thanksgiving That The American People Now Have.

THANKSGIVING SERMON

WAS PREACHED BY REV. J. W. RICHARDSON SUNDAY MORNING.

Told Congregation of Park Avenue Baptist Church How God Has Particularly Favored This Country and the Present Generation.

"Why We Should Be Grateful," was the subject of a Thanksgiving sermon preached at the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday morning by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Richardson, in which he reviewed the great blessings which have been showered upon this country from the time the Pilgrims landed on these shores to the present day of peace and plenty. The lesson which the pastor endeavored to show by his sermon was that Americans, who are continually surrounded with rich blessings, are apt to look upon them as being commonplace and are liable to forget to give thanks to Him from whom all these blessings come.

The text of the sermon was taken from the passage of scripture found in the book of Isaiah vii-5 of the King James version. The sermon was opened in showing that while God had not suspended the natural laws to work miracles in this country He has prospered the New World in a manner that has opened the eyes of the rest of the world. Americans would be blind and unreasonable indeed, he said, if they did not recognize God in His chariot at the head of the country's affairs and for this reason the people are to offer up their thanks to God for the blessings which have been greater than those enjoyed by any other nation in the history of the world. In view of God's favors thus evidenced on every hand they would be remiss, indeed, if they failed to offer thanks on high by their hearts as well as their lips.

In showing some of the things for which they should be thankful, the pastor cited the gift of this country, and said that this republic was God's own handiwork. He told of the conditions which had been going on in the Old World for years which had caused a pressure of about 1,000 pounds to the square inch which, becoming unbearable, finally resulted in the Pilgrims leaving behind home ties and loved ones to flee to the newly-discovered land.

New ideas, he said, needed new exploitations and environments. If America had been discovered in the Middle Ages the tendency to overrule democracy by aristocracy would have permiated the new world. God saw to it that the new world was to be for His people and kept it until the time was ripe for them to occupy it and when that time came the newly found America grew in His favor because it had learned in a few years the lessons which had been learned by the European nations in centuries of bloodshed and tears. It was the land of the free churches on the hills, the sacred homes on the plains, and of the machine shops and other industries on the shores. To those, who, having come to this country and were not able to appreciate these blessings, the pastor advised them to pack their trunks and get out, the sooner the better.

In speaking of the opportunity for advancement in this country the pastor said that even the rail splitter may become president and a poor newsboy and telegraph operator become one of the greatest wizards of the age. Incidentally the speaker said that in the labor troubles, which have been before the public eye for the past year, right and justice would soon come to the front. The growth of this country was also dwelt upon by the speaker who said that Solomon had a thousand galleys but what would he think if he could but see the great commercial ships and sail boats of today; Abraham had many chariots but his eyes would open if he could see the great railroads whzzing through the country at wonderful speed. In many things America leads the world commercially, industrially, in religious freedom and in growth, in population and intelligence, and that from a struggling colony of thirteen States of a total population of 3,000,000 it has grown to a country of 77,000,000 and forty-nine States.

THE HOLIDAY IN PLAINFIELD

How Thanksgiving Eve and Thanksgiving Day Will Pass in This City.

WHAT IS TO HAPPEN

This Evening Will See An Unusual Number of Social Events—Union Services at the Churches—Outdoor and Other Attractions Arranged for the Holiday.

To the youthful mind, Thanksgiving and roast turkey are inseparably joined. The mere mention of the holiday suggests that soul-satisfying condition which comes after a hearty meal of good things, with plenty of fun and merrymaking as a relish. Judging from the quantities of that proud plump bird that have been disposed of to Plainfield homes for the Thanksgiving dinner on the morrow, that good old custom is not to be allowed to die of disuse this year. Even if the turkeys are scarce and more costly than in previous years, they will grace many a festive board, groaning beneath the weight of a host of other good things.

But turkeys and family dinners are not the only attractions for the holiday tomorrow. Never has Plainfield seen such a host of things to happen on the eve of and during Thanksgiving Day. Wide is the variety of events that are scheduled to be held during the day and night and the evening preceding. Although the season for outdoor attractions is rather close to an end, there will be plenty to do and see outdoors as well as in.

Without regard to denomination, the local church-goers will unite in the First Baptist and Congregational churches at 10:30 o'clock to publicly thank the Almighty for His favors of the past year. The sermon at the First Baptist church will be delivered by Rev. E. L. Earp, pastor of Grace M. E. church. Rev. Geo. B. Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, will deliver the address at the Congregational church. Preceding these services, there will be a Christian Endeavor union meeting at the First Baptist church at 9:30 o'clock. A prayer and praise service will be held at Hope chapel at the same hour.

Thanksgiving eve will be crowded with events of a social nature. It will see the first events on the winter calendar of the society set. The In and Out Club, composed of the young society folk, will hold a "barn" dance in the commodious stables on the Barnaby estate. At the same time, the Park Club will hold the first of a series of formal dances, which have been so popular in past seasons. Company K will hold its most elaborate effort in a social line. A military ball will be held at the Casino to which several hundred have been invited. Encouraged by the success of its other dances, the I. C. T. Club will try its hand at a masquerade and reception which promises to be the most elaborate event ever held in its club rooms. St. Patrick's Alliance will conduct a ball at T. A. B. Hall while the Gesang and Turn Verein will care for its friends at a ball in Saengerbund Hall.

Of interest to men will be the Democratic smoker in headquarters on East Second street. A collation will be served during the evening.

The Horace R. Turner art exhibit was opened this afternoon and will continue tonight and the next three days. It will undoubtedly attract many on Thanksgiving Day.

In addition to the happenings already mentioned, there will be a number of private gatherings, musicales and parties.

Football and golf will be the outdoor attractions for Thanksgiving Day. In the morning, the Alis A. A. will play its most important game of the season, lining up against the crack team from the Bergen Point Field Club at 10:45. The game will be played on the gridiron on Hope Common. In the afternoon, the Orange Field Club will play on the same field against a team from Pt. Richmond, S. I. The game is called for 3 o'clock. The I. C. T. Club team will go to New Brunswick in the afternoon and play the New Brunswick Y. M. C. A. eleven on Nielson Field.

While the season of competitions has closed at the Park Golf Club, the course will be open for play all day. At Hillside, the semi-finals for the

ENDEAVORERS HELD A THANKSGIVING SOCIAL

Senior and Junior Societies of First Baptist Church United Forces for Last Evening.

WAS WELL ATTENDED

A MUSICAL PROGAAMME AND AN ADDRESS WAS GIVEN.

By a Strange Coincidence All Those Who Took Part Were From the First Presbyterian Church—The Committee in Charge.

The Senior and Junior Endeavor Societies of the First Baptist church, assisted by some of the members of the Senior Society, held a Thanksgiving social in the Sunday-school room of the church, last evening. Despite the inclement weather there was a goodly number of young folks present to enjoy the programme arranged. It was a coincidence that all those taking part happened to come from the First Presbyterian church. It was a pleasant feature, however, showing the good fellowship existing between the two churches.

The programme included piano selections by Miss Beatrice Miner and soprano solos by Miss Ada Dunham. These numbers were well given and hearty applause was accorded. Miss Dunham sang "O, Happy Day," and "Bedtime's Near," and the rendition was delightful. The selections by Miss Miner were well-chosen and the execution all to be desired. Both these young women were given encores.

A happy feature was the talk by Rev. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church. His remarks were in a happy vein and he told those present many amusing stories, all of which carried a point of truth to illustrate the subject chosen.

Following this programme, refreshments, consisting of pumpkin pie and coffee, were served by the committee in charge. In connection with the affair the decorations should not be forgotten. These comprised cornstalks, pumpkins, American flags, etc.

Later in the evening the young folks played games of one kind and another and thus a pleasant evening was spent. The committee in charge consisting of Herbert DuBois, N. Douglass Drake, the Misses TenEyck, was ably assisted by Mrs. J. B. Probasco.

BURGLARS ACTIVE.

Broke Into Two Residences at Somerville Yesterday and Captured Some Booty.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Nov. 26—Several Somerville homes were molested by burglars yesterday morning, but the aggregate of their stealings is not thought to be very large. The residence of M. N. Porter, agent for the United States Express Company, was broken into and an overcoat belonging to his son and about $5 from a pocketboook, also belonging to the young man, were taken. It is believed the thieves were frightened by hearing someone walking upstairs and fled without going above, where they would have found much richer pickings.

The home of J. W. Sullivan, nearby, was also broken into, but it is not known what is missing, as the family is away on a visit. Dogs scared the thieves away from the residence of Charles VanArsdale.

Star Recital Company.

The Star Recital Company is the name of the new organization recently formed to give "Immanuel," under the management of J. F. Billett, Thursday, December 11, at a place yet to be selected. The company is composed of the following: Mrs. F. M. Ward, contralto; Miss Ethel May Derby, soprano; William Holmes, basso; William H. Tallamy, tenor. Miss Bianca Holley, a noted soprano of New York, will also take part in the entertainment.

Social at Dunellen.

The members of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church of the city will go to Dunellen Friday evening when they will attend a social which will be given by the members of the M. E. church at that place.

Engagement Announced.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Tyler DuCharme and Dr. William Becker VanAlstyne, both of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Heckman, of Freehold, are visiting friends in the borough for a few days.

ONLY FIFTEEN KICK AT THE VALUATIONS

Commissioners of Appeal in the Borough Had a Hearing Yesterday Afternoon.

SOME OF THE REASONS

JUST FIFTEEN OBJECTED TO FIGURES FIXED BY ASSESSOR FRENCH.

Some Objected Because Taxes Were Higher, Although Assesments Weren't Increased—Unnaturalized Citizens Objected to Taxes.

A meeting of the Commissioners of Appeal was held in the Borough Council Chambers yesterday which lasted about two hours, during which time only fifteen people applied to appeal from Assessor French's figures. This small number of appeals is quite remarkable when the unsettled political condition of the borough is considered.

There were a number who appeared, not because they thought the assessed valuation was too high, but simply because their bills were higher than they were last year. It was explained to them that the Assessor's valuation was correct and that he had no control over the rate of taxation, as that is fixed by the different governing bodies as the Council and School Board.

A few shareholders of the City National Bank stock wanted to know why their assessments were raised and they were answered that it was because of the fact that the stock had increased its value. This was referred to Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed. Among the fifteen who were present at the meeting were several unnaturalized citizens who, not being able to vote, wanted the $1 poll tax taken off, but it was explained to them that their idea of a poll tax was very much confused and that if they came to this country and did not want to pay for protection and for the privilege of living in a free country, they were not good citizens of the kind that are wanted in the borough of North Plainfield.

After all the appeals had been heard, some of the older bills were taken under advisement and the meeting adjourned until this morning when these were satisfactorally adjusted. The Commissioners of Appeals who were present yesterday were William C. Smith, and Lewis E. Barkelew, the other member, Dr. J. H. Cooley, being absent.

PLAINFIELD ENTRIES.

Local Horses Are Being Shown in Orange's Big Show.

In the list of entries in the Orange Horse Show this week are seen the names of Harvey Fisk, who has some of his saddle horses booked for the show. L. E. Waring will also have some of his horses on review. A new team belonging to J. T. McIlvane, which he has recently brought up from Kentucky, is also listed among the steppers. He also has his much admired gray team, Lord and Lady Saphire, entered for this fair. This team is very frequently seen in this city and are always the object of much admiration.

Star Course Entertainment.

Edward H. Frye, monologist, will give "Rip Van Winkle" and the Euterpean Glee Club will render pleasing selections in the Y. M. C. A. Star Course, Thanksgiving night. "Rip" is still a delight to the American public "causing merry laughter to bubble up and the fountain of tears to pay tribute."

Juniors at Service.

The local councils of Jr. O. U. A. M., together with the Daughters of America and Daughters of Liberty, will attend divine service at the Park Avenue Baptist church, Sunday evening. The pastor, Rev. J. W. Richardson, will preach a Thanksgiving sermon.

Sattel's New Store.

Joseph Sattels, the piano and organ dealer, expects to open up his new store on North avenue within a few days. The finishing touches are now being made preparatory to taking possession.

Grand Concert.

The B. McA's will conduct a grand concert in Saengerbund Hall Thanksgiving night, when a well-known colored orchestra from Elizabeth will supply the music.

Endeavor Thanksgiving.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Crescent Avenue church will hold a Thanksgiving service in the chapel of the church, Friday evening.

THE WEST END WANTS BRIDGE

Need of Some Means of Crossing the Railroad Between Clinton and Grant Aves.

IT WOULD SAVE LIVES

Councilman Lee Will Champion a Plan to Open Public Right of Way and Build Foot Bridge Over the Tracks—Will Bring Subject to the Attention of the Council.

Residents of the West End who have long been clamoring for some means of crossing the tracks of the New Jersey Central Railroad, between Grant and Clinton avenues, have a champion in the person of Councilman Robert L. Lee. He has given the matter his personal attention and will shortly air his ideas before the City Fathers with a view to having them take action.

The stretch in question is just a mile in length and people living either side of the railroad, wishing to go in the opposite direction, must walk either to Clinton or Grant avenues, where there are bridges, or else cross the tracks with its consequent risks.

The latter is generally done with the result in the last few years that many persons have met death or had narrow escapes from being struck by trains. Pond Tool Works employes have made many paths over the tracks and their footsteps have been followed by pupils of the Irving school living on the north side of the road.

One of the most frequently used is at the head of Albert street and terminates on the opposite side at the west end of the Pond fence. It is Councilman Lee's idea to get a public right of way at this point and as the tracks are in a slight cut, erect a footbridge over them. Officials of the Pond shop are heartily in favor of the project and have signified their intention of granting the right for a path through their property. The bridge could be made of steel at this plant and erected by its workmen at a very small cost, while the benefit to the residents is beyond estimation.

When the Irving school was built at Monroe avenue and Fourth street, members of the Board of Education at that time were confronted with the problem of children getting to it from Front street but no solution was reached. It has since been brought to their notice at frequent intervals and if the Council decides to act upon Councilman Lee's suggestion it will be heartily seconded by the school board.

INJURED AT DETROIT.

Former Pond Employe Had An Arm Crushed in Machine—Amputated.

Word has been received in this city that Gustav Maller, who recently resigned his position at the Pond Tool Works, met with a serious accident in the Allis-Chalmers Works in Detroit, Mich. His left arm was caught in a machine and was badly crushed.

According to the report the member was amputated and he is now in a critical condition in the Detroit General Hospital. Maller was sent to this country by the German government in order to study American machinery and spent several months in Ponds. He will be remembered by the members of Hope chapel as the pianist who took part in a recent reception.

RURAL DANCE.

Local Newspaper Men are Planning a Unique Event.

Arrangements have been completed by the Pad and Pencil Club for a unique "country" dance with all its rural features, in the I. C. T. rooms, about the middle of next month. Men will be asked to attend in "working" clothes and broad brimmed straw hats, while the women folks must be clad in calico or gingham with sunbonnets. The committee having the affair in charge, according to the invitations, consists of Ephraim Firstbrook, Ezra Muir and Eliphalet Hacquer.

SOME OF ATTRACTIONS TO BE FOUND AT LOCAL STORES.

A Few Interesting Items Concerning Greater Plainfield's Merchants

Peck has made ample provision for the holiday trade with his usual line of fine goods. Every woman in Plainfield who has good judgment and taste can tell you about Peck's superior goods.

The handsome oil paintings which are given away at E. S. F. Randolph's drug store with each bottle of white Pine and Tar Cough Syrup, make very handsome pictures for framing for Christmas gifts.

Powers' Somerset street pharmacy has just received its Huyler's candy for Thanksgiving. Finish off the day's pleasure with a box of these delicious confections. Telephone 756 will secure your share for you.

Every time you take your laundry to be washed did you wish you knew of a place where the clothes were not torn to pieces? If you patronize C. Meissner's hand laundry on Watchung avenue, you will escape this annoyance.

The turkey will look splendid to morrow, if it is flanked with some nice baked blue fish. And of course, you shouldn't leave oysters off the menu. The Rogers Seafood Company can supply both and will promptly deliver them at the time agreed upon.

In ye olden time it was a rare thing to hear of one receiving a piano as a holiday present. Nowadays it is frequent. If you think of giving such a present inspect those fine makes of pianos at G. H. Kenyon's on West Front street. They will surely please you.

Drop around to T. L. Walsh's North avenue market, this evening, and see the display of vegetables from which selections may be made for tomorrow's dinner. The assortment is complete in every detail while the price is extremely moderate in comparison with others.

At this season of the year there is nothing that is more attractive than a well set table. This can be accomplished in no better way than it purchasing some of that handsome linen just received by Woodhull & Martin. No table will be complete without one for the holiday season.

What would Thanksgiving be without the turkey dinner? What would the dinner be without fresh vegetables and fruits secured from the grocery store of F. H. Firstbrook? If it is desired to have a genuine Thanksgiving dinner it is necessary to secure your provisions from a first-class grocery.

In the hurry to prepare for the holidays, don't forget that now is the time to prepare your residential grounds for next summer. Place your orders immediately with the Belleview Avenue Nursery for shrubbery and plants and have them set out. The nursery has a complete stock at present.

This is just the kind of weather that one is likely to catch cold and there is no quicker way of getting rid of it than to take a Turkish bath at Dr. Cooley's well-appointed baths on Somerset street. Mr. Howe is the efficient man in charge during the men's hours, while a thoroughly competent woman takes charge during the hours for the women.

A. in the morning. The Independent Gun Club will hold a shoot during the day. There will be an interesting match at Campbell's clubhouse.

Several entertainments will serve to furnish pleasure for Thanksgiving night. The Y. M. C. A. Star Course entertainment will be held at Y. M. C. A. Hall and an excellent programme has been arranged. Edward H. Frye and the Enterpean Glee Club will provide it. Central Lodge, A. O. U. W., will entertain its members and other Workmen with a good time in its hall. The T. A. B. Society has made plans for one of its popular dances in its hall on West Fourth street. Central Theatre will be open with a special holiday programme and will also have a holiday matinee.

ful progress in this country," the pastor said, "and today a man must strive harder to remain an ignoramus than he would to acquire knowledge in America. Colleges only a few decades ago were for gentlemen of wealthy parents, but now it is possible for any one to receive an education, in fine colleges where opportunities are offered to young men, both poor and wealthy, and correspondence schools which enable those studiously inclined to advance rapidly. It was a studious rail splitter which became the prophet of his country and it is the poor boy today that is bound to advance to prominence.

"The daily newspaper and the magazine and periodical which are read at home are sources of information as well as the free lectures which are given in all our large cities. These have taught the farmer to sow his seed scientifically instead of the haphazard manner in which he used to sow it, and creates a natural telephone which enables him to know what kind of seed the ground in a certain field prefers. Alexandria boasted of 400,000 volumes in its library but today we have in our homes throughout our country millions of volumes. These with the papers and magazines shows education at the feet of the ignorant and for this fact, if for no other we have reason to give thanks to God."

The pastor touched on the bountiful supply of food in this land. "Which," he declared, "enables us to not only feed our own people but to supply the world besides. We have occasion to be thankful for peace and prosperity," said the preacher, "for peace is the Gibraltar of America. When we should be especially thankful for eyesight, hearing, clothing, and all the other blessings which are wonderful blessings but which we become so accustomed to that we are inclined to consider them as being commonplace, but once deprived of them we would at once realize the value of tehm."

"The infidel and the unbeliever," said the pastor in closing, "will say there is no God, and it is written that 'the fool in his heart has said that there is no God.' The world may be going to the devil on a mad gallop and cannot be stopped by the saiyngs of athiests and infidels. We must not forget to thank God for the work being done by the missionaries at home and abroad, so on Thanksgiving Day let us thank God from whom all blessings flow."

—Luther Morris, of West Front street, is improving his residential property and is having his hosue painted.

—John Fisher, of Coplay, Pa., is the new night operator at the North Avenue station, succeeding Edward Golden, who has been transferred to Bound Brook.

—Unity Lodge, No. 102, K. of P., met last evening and worked the third degree on three candidates. The meeting night was changed this week on account of Thanksgiving time.

A Thanksgiving Dinner.

Heavy eating is usually the first cause of indigestion. Repeated attacks inflame the mucous membranes lining the stomach, exposes the nerves of the stomach, producing a swelling after eating, heartburn, headache, sour risings and finally catarrh of the stomach. Kodol relieves the inflammation, protects the nerves and cures catarrh. Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia, all stomach troubles by cleansing and sweetening the glands of the stomach. L. W. THE CZAR ALL RIGHT

Ambassador Tower Sets Wild Stories at Rest.

ENJOYING BEST POSSIBLE HEALTH.

The Czarina Also Entirely Recovered—Mr. and Mrs. Tower So Report After a Luncheon at the Livadia Country Home.

VIENNA, Nov. 26.—Ambassador Charlemagne Tower has arrived here from Livadia, where he was received in farewell audience by the czar. He said, "The czar and czarina are both enjoying the best possible health." Mr. and Mrs. Tower took lunch informally with their majesties, no other guests being present. Both the czar and czarina talked freely and with animation on American affairs. The ambassador says he found the czarina entirely recovered from her recent indisposition, and she is now looking as well as he ever saw her since he went to Russia.

Mr. and Mrs. Tower had to drive in a carriage from Sebastopol to the imperial residence at Yalta, a distance of forty miles, as no railroad approaches the czar's secluded country home. After bidding goodby to the emperor and empress they traveled west across Russia to the Austrian frontier, finding everywhere, says Mr. Tower, evidences of peace and order.

The ambassador and Mrs. Tower proceed today to Paris for a week's stay and thence will go to Berlin to take up his new ambassadorial post.

Stories About Czar Untrue.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, speaking of the reports contained in the press dispatches from St. Petersburg relative to the czar, said: "The statements contained in the press dispatch from St. Petersburg pertaining to the czar can have no foundation. For instance, it is stated among other things that his ministers made certain remonstrances. Under no circumstances would the ministers take any such action. Without going into details I will say that the statements are all entirely unfounded. As for the czar's health, I received dispatches which state that he is in the best of health."

Body of Long Lost Woman Found.

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Nov. 26.—The skull and other decomposed parts of the body of Miss Annie Butler, aged twenty years, who has been missing since July 13, have been found by hunters in the center of a wooded swamp not much over a mile from the home of her father, Patrick Butler of Millville, Mass. Miss Butler was an epileptic and almost unable to talk, and after her disappearance the river was dragged and woods and fields searched by men and bloodhounds, but without avail. It is the general opinion that the girl wandered away from the house into the woods and, becoming confused, finally died from exhaustion.

"Jack the Clipper" Abroad.

FULTONVILLE, N. Y., Nov. 26.—The women of this town have been thrown into a state of panic through fear of a night prowler to whom has been given the name of "Jack the Clipper." He first appeared a few nights ago, when he attacked Miss Nellie Goudry as she was about to enter her home and clipped off one of her long braids of hair. Monday night he seized Mrs. Floyd Wormuth and after gagging her looked in her face, exclaiming, "You are not the one," releassd her and fled. Women refuse to venture out at night unescorted, and the men of the town are organizing in patrol parties in the hope of capturing the scoundrel.

President Chooses Two Judges.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The president has decided to appoint Judge Francis M. Wright, now judge of the circuit and appellate court of Illinois, to the vacancy on the court of claims caused by the death of John Davis. Judge Wright was indorsed by the Illinois delegation in congress. He is from the district represented by Congressman Warner and a veteran of the civil war. The president also announced his decision to appoint Ashby M. Gould of this city, at present district attorney for the District of Columbia, as associate justice of the supreme court of the District of Columbia.

Fainted at the Bar.

BALLSTON, N. Y., Nov. 26.—Miss Blanche Coffy, aged nineteen years, of Waterford was convicted in the county court here of unlawfully interfering with Miss Jessie F. Wheeler of Mechanicsville, a passenger who was getting off a Hudson Valley railway car during the recent strike riots. When arraigned for sentence, Miss Coffy fell in a faint. On her recovery Judge Rockwood postponed sentence and paroled her in charge of her counsel.

A Farm Hand's Strange Act.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., Nov. 26.—Willis E. Duncan, a farm hand employed at Maple Springs, on Chautauqua lake, fired a shotgun at Edgar Lewis and his four-year-old daughter, who were passing. The child was critically injured. Lewis' injuries are not serious. Duncan was arrested while hiding in a barn and was lodged in jail. There is no known cause for the act.

Receiver For Automobile Company.

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 26.—United States Judge Ray has appointed L. N. Southworth of this city receiver for the Remington Automobile company, which was last week forced into involuntary bankruptcy. The company is said to have $57,600 debts and $25,000 assets.

BALKS CANAL PLANS

Colombia Rejects the Terms Proposed.

ACTION EXCITES GRAVE SUSPICIONS.

Secretary Hay Makes Discouraging Report on Negotiations to President and Cabinet—Nicaragua Route May Yet Be Taken.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—A question of the gravest international importance occupied almost the entire attention of the president and the cabinet at their regular meeting. It concerned the negotiations with Colombia for the conclusion of a Panama canal treaty.

Secretary Hay made a minute explanation of the status of the negotiations, and his report was not only discouraging, but indicated that the attitude of the Colombian government was such as to render it uncertain whether it would give its consent to the construction of the canal.

The negotiations have come to a standstill. In fact, it is not going too far to say that they are virtually on the point of breaking off.

It is understood that Mr. Hay told the cabinet that the Colombian minister in Washington, Senor Concha, who declares that he possesses plenary powers to negotiate a treaty, had rejected the terms proposed by the United States for a canal right of way. This government is unwilling to offer more liberal terms, and, as one officer of the administration expressed it, is "marking time."

This state of affairs will stimulate the negotiations with Nicaragua and Costa Rica for the alternate route, but it now appears that the diplomatic representatives of those countries are not disposed to allow themselves to be used to coerce Colombia and therefore are desirous of remaining in the background until it shall be clearly established that no treaty can be made between Colombia and the United States.

One of the statements of fact in connection with the Panama route which has been brought to the attention of the state department is that the original canal concessions will expire in 1904, and it has been suggested that the Colombian government has that fact in mind and is disposed to refrain from making a treaty now in the expectation that the franchise will lapse and it thus may be in a position to build the canal itself or to sell a new concession. Such a course would raise a very serious question between the Colombian government, the Panama Canal company, the French government and the government of the United States as to whether or not a supplementary decree extending the concession ten years from 1904 was valid.

President Roosevelt laid before the cabinet his annual message to congress in completed form. It was then sent to the printer. Most of the features of the document were familiar to the members of the cabinet, and only such parts of the message as had not been considered previously were read in full. All the members were present except Secretary Root.

For a Department of Commerce.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—President Roosevelt has informed Representative Hepburn, chairman of the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce, that he would appoint at once a representative from each of the government departments to confer with his committee as to the creation by congress of a department of commerce and to furnish any information desired. Mr. Hepburn is confident that a bill creating the department of commerce will be passed at the approaching session of congress.

Secretary Root Called Home.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Secretary Root has been called home by the very serious illness of Mrs. Root's father, Salem H. Wales. Mr. Wales, who is a journalist and a prominent citizen, has suffered a stroke of apoplexy, and owing to his advanced age, seventy-seven years, the case is regarded as critical. Mrs. Root is still in Europe with her two sons, but is expected to sail for New York not later than Saturday.

Mme. La Bonta Arrested.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 26.—Mme. La Bonta, who is wanted at Butte, Mont., in connection with the murder of Dr. Coley last October, has been arrested here. Mme. La Bonta came here several days ago from Seattle. In an interview she stated that Dr. Coley was killed as the result of an accidental discharge of his own gun and that she merely indulged in a friendly scuffle with him.

Old Man's Death Charged to Son.

READING, Pa., Nov. 26.—John Blankenhorn, aged eighty-one, was found dead in the house in which he lived alone. The old man's death is said to have been the result of injuries. There were marks of violence on the head and hands to support this view. A warrant has been served on the son, John Blankenhorn, Jr., charging him with aggravated assault on his father.

General Hood Retired.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Brigadier General Charles C. Hood has been retired at his own request. His successor will not be selected until after congress meets. There is an impression in military circles that Colonel H. C. Hasbrouck, artillery corps, commanding the post at Fort Adams, R. I., will be promoted to the vacancy.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The Marquis of Salisbury returned to London from the French Riviera greatly improved in health as a result of his stay at Beaulieu.

NO SETTLEMENT NOW

Coal Controversy Will Be Referred to Commission.

ADJUSTMENT PLANS FALL FLAT.

Operators at a Meeting In New York Decline to Meet Mitchell and Decide That the Hearing Shall Go On.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—A serious hitch has occurred in the plans for a settlement of the coal controversy by conference between the coal operators and the miners' union, and it is now most probable that the final adjustment of the points at issue will be again referred to the Gray commission.

At a meeting between the presidents of the coal roads and a large number of independent operatbrs a strong protest was entered by the latter against treating directly with the miners. An invitation to meet Mr. Mitchell at Washington on Friday was peremptorily declined, and it was unanimously agreed that, in the judgment of the operators, it was best for the present to go on with the hearing before the commission.

At the conclusion of the conference between representatives of the independent coal operators and presidents of the coal carrying roads, held in the office of President Baer of the Reading railroad, Mr. Baer made public this statement:

"A number of operators today met the coal presidents who had signed the request to the president of the United States.

"They presented a protest against any adjustment being made at this time, insisting that the principles involved were so serious and affected so many interests that it was necessary now to have the commission hear all the facts and pass its judgment upon the whole controversy.

"Mr. Simpson, as chairman, read a paper expressing their views, and other gentlemen expressed decided opinions.

"In the midst of the conference the request came from Washington to the operators of both classes to meet Mr. Mitchell and his associates next Friday morning at 10 o'clock. The parties present, without dissent, instructed Mr. Baer to make the following answer:

"'The conditions are such that no substantial progress toward an adjustment can be made by the suggested meeting. The general judgment of the operators is that it will be best for the present to go on with the hearing.'"

The independent coal operators laid before Presidents Baer, Thomas, Truesdale, Olyphant, Fowler and Walters a vigorous protest against any settlement with the miners out of court. The protest was signed by all of the independent operators and strongly opposed any settlement, especially on the basis which had been suggested.

They said that if the differences were settled outside of the commission in this way the permanent power of the union coal miners would be established and they would be at liberty to "continue to perpetrate their injustices."

They characterized the proposed settlement as a confession of "all the guilt that has been charged by the miners." The statement says that the independent operators believe that the presidents of the coal roads have furnished the commission with a perfect defense and that any monetary award which might be rendered by the commission would be far less than the amount the independent operators understand is to be conceded, especially to the miners and their laborers, by the coal presidents.

The independents further protested against a settlement on the ground that the commission is composed of unbiased, fair minded men of unusual experience and good judgment and who will make a declaration which will forever put a ban on all unlawful practices and the oppression of the nonunion miners.

THE WASHINGTON CONFERENCE.

Abrupt End to What Promised to Be a Successful Meeting.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—All prospects for an understanding between the United Mine Workers and the coal operators outside the anthracite coal strike commission came to a sudden termination through the receipt of a dispatch to Mr. Wayne MacVeagh, representing the Pennsylvania Coal company and the Hillside Coal and Iron company, notifying him that at a meeting of the anthracite coal road men in New York it had been decided not to grant an interview to Mr. Mitchell and his associates, which had been suggested for Friday next.

The announcement, coming as it did after an all day's conference in this city between Mr. MacVeagh and Mr. Mitchell and his associates, attended part of the time by Carroll D. Wright, in an endeavor to adjust some details of the proposed agreement between the operators and the miners, completely surprised every one here. From a reliable source it is learned that the proposition that the operators meet Mr. Mitchell on Friday next was made at the instance of Mr. MacVeagh, who was no less surprised than Mr. Mitchell himself at the turn affairs took.

From statements made by Mr. Darrow early in the day the impression had spread that a complete agreement would be effected at the conference, but when the meeting broke up Mr. Darrow read to the newspaper men in the corridor outside his room in Willard's hotel a statement which made it clear that no final agreement had been reached and that no further conferences were likely.

THANKSGIVING.

According to the desires of President Roosevelt and Governor Murphy, as expressed in their Thanksgiving proclamations, Plainfield will observe a day of thanksgiving tomorrow. Many citizens will gather in the churches and unite in that way to show their appreciation of the good things of life that have been showered on them. There will hardly be a household where there will not be some demonstration in honor of the day. Although there may be trouble for some, there is much to be thankful for and it is really only right and proper that this busy people should devote at least one day a year to a proper observance of that fact.

As a city, Plainfield has much for which to be thankful. Never has the winter begun with this city in such a prosperous condition as it is now. Signs of its growth and prosperity are to be found on every side. It is not a mushroom growth, which springs up in a night to disappear as quickly, but a sturdy substantial one brought about by healthy conditions. New industries are locating here and it is necessary to house them. Old industries are faring so well that their present limits have to be enlarged. Thanks to these and other interests, new families are constantly coming here. They, too, must be cared for. Vacant houses, which at one time lined many thoroughfares, are infrequent sights and new and improved residences are springing up on every side.

Where other cities are puzzling over the problem of freeing their municipal affairs from corruption and fraud, the people of Plainfield may be thankful that this city is well and honestly governed. There is not a city in New Jersey or any of the neighboring States that can boast of possessing a better city government than this. In return for their taxes, the people are given many municipal advantages. The city affairs are carefully and economically conducted on business principles. Where is there a city that can boast of such a system of streets, or such an efficient fire department? Plainfield's police department is not called upon to meet the conditions existing in some cities where vice and immorality are so prominent but it accomplishes that which there is to do in a satisfactory manner. Crime is comparatively infrequent here.

Because Plainfield possesses all these things, there are some who are apt to forget that fact. It requires the absence of them to bring about a proper appreciation. It will be well, however, for the people of this city to pause a moment tomorrow and, in connection with the general thanksgiving, rejoice that they live in Plainfield and that it is such a model city. Plainfield possesses an individuality of its own which cannot be copied. It has a wonderful future before it. And those who give thanks now for the present blessings and assist in continuing and increasing the present prosperity will have occasion in the future to be thankful to an even greater degree.

In all this general thanksgiving, when one begins to count up some of the blessings with which he is favored, it will be well to remember that all are not as fortunate. A little offering, particularly at this time, will never be missed and it may be the means of relieving some one whose Thanksgiving Day does not promise to dawn brightly. A cash contribution or offering of another nature will be sure to find its way to the proper one if sent to the Plainfield Relief Association.

Thanksgiving Day promises to be a busy day as far as Plainfield is concerned. Social circles have numerous attractions arranged.

As tomorrow will be Thanksgiving Day, a legal holiday in the State of New Jersey, The Daily Press will not be issued that day.

Like the baseball season, the football games promise to continue longer this fall than is ordinarily the custom.

One Minute Cough Cure

Is the only harmless cough cure that gives quick relief. Cures coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, pneumonia, asthma, lagrippe and all throat, chest and lung troubles. I got soaked by rain, says Gertrude E. Fenner, Muncie, Ind., and contracted a severe cold and cough. I failed rapidly; lost 48 lbs. My druggist recommended One Minute Cough Cure. The first bottle brought relief; several cured me. I am back to my old weight, 148 lbs. One Minute Cough Cure cuts the phlegm, relieves the cough at once, draws out inflammation, cures croup. An ideal remedy for children. L. W. Randolph.

The Home Building and Loan Ass'n.

ORGANIZED 1888.

At a special meeting of The Home Building and Loan Association held November 17th, 1902, a resolution was passed to amend its by-laws pertaining to interest on loans, which was heretofore six per cent. per annum—permitting the Board of management to loan money at a reduced rate of interest on future loans. Prospective home buyers will do well to apply to the Secretary for particulars.

The Home Building and Loan Association during fifteen years of business has redeemed seven semi-annual series. It has at this time an investment of over $150,000.00 divided among about eighty members; and has paid 5½ to 6 per cent. compound interest to its investors. Total number of members 350.

The Association meets the third Monday of each month from 7 to 9 p. m., at 120 East Front Street, Plainfield. Shares $1.00 per month. Entrance fee 25 cents per share.

DUNELLEN.

The end of a curious dispute between two well-known residents of this place was reached yesterday. Some time ago Herbert Pierce desired to start a grocery business at this place with Fred Ward. He went to O M. Hetfield and agreed to hire a store in the latter's building. When the went to take possession Mr. Hetfield refused him, as in the meantime he had received an offer for the purchase of his building. The would-be purchaser made the proviso that the stores in the building should be vacant. Mr., Pierce threatened to bring suit for damages. It was finally agreed to choose a commission of seven men to arbitrate the matter. Those chosen were James Manning, Robert Lourie, DeWitt Giles, Nelson Blackford, Lewis Walker, John Dayton and William Dunham. They finally settled the matter by deciding that Mr. Hetfield should pay Mr. Pierce $227 and the latter should relinquish claim for the store.

The old man, who was found unconscious in Plainfield yesterday and was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital and who gave his name as Frank Hand, of Dunellen, is not known here. No such name is on the registry list.

CARSON CASE.

Legal Proceedings Before Vice Chancellor Emery Yesterday.

The case of James Carson against his wife, Sadie Carson, to take from her possession her three children, came up before Vice Chancellor Emery at Newark, yesterday on a notice given by counsel for Mr. Carson that a part of the return made to the writ of habeas corpus should be stricken out, and that in case the motion was not granted, leave would be asked to file an answer to the return. The motion to strike out was made by W. S. Angleman and opposed by S. S. Swackhamer, of the firm of Codington & Swackhamer. The motion was denied and the defendant allowed to put in answer to the return. The case will be tried December 19, when witnesses will be sworn and the case be argued on its merits.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 30, "A Cure For the World's Woe"—Text, Isa. xlv, 12-23.

"Look unto me and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth, for I am God, and there is none else."

This message was first spoken for the encouragement of a people who had seen their land invaded and devastated, their cities captured and destroyed, their temple and all their ancient sanctuaries of religion defiled or burned, their armies defeated, multitudes slain, themselves driven captive to a faroff land and many made slaves. Desolation of all they held dear and sacred and discouragement of heart was complete. Their case seemed hopeless. Their land was one wide desolation scarcely habitable even for a miserable remnant of people, exposed to constant dangers. Their ancient religion was dishonored. On every side they saw temples and continual service of idols. Immense wealth, luxury and the refinement of a civilization ages old were conspicuous in their Babylonian home.

They were but one among many people whom the rapacity of their conquerors had ruined and then transported to enrich the lands near their capital. No other people had ever recovered their land, their nationality, prosperity and religion. Others adopted the worship and customs of the new country and gradually became absorbed into the great body of its population, losing all distinctive life.

What better fate than this could be hoped for by the people of Judah? Their only hope lay in the character of their duty and the views of truth which some of their prophets persistently proclaimed.

This lesson is taken from the midst of a passage unlike almost anything else in the whole range of literature. From chapter xl to lv of Isaiah is the sublimest message of encouragement ever spoken to any people. It seems to have come to the people of Judah in the darkest hour of their captivity, when their trust in the God of their fathers was ready to give way and they seemed about to abandon all their past and lose themselves in the mass of the worshipers around them. Then the great prophet speaks in trumpet tones the message from Jehovah, "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people!" There is no qnavering in his strong notes. Jehovah is the only God. He rules the heavens and earth. Kings are His servants. Babylon shall soon be punished for her great wickedness and destroyed forever. Watch the rising power of Media. Cyrus is a messiah from Jehovah. Jerusalem shall be rebuilded. Israel shall be once more planted in her own land. Idols are vain, and all who trust in them shall be put to shame. Trust in Jehovah, for He alone rules.

This prophet gets a view of Jehovah's purpose none before him had seen. The heathen are no more objects of wrath, merely to be destroyed. There is hope for them also. Israel has been humbled and has learned the lesson prosperity could not teach her, that Jehovah alone can save. She shall now learn her true calling as servant of Jehovah to instruct and lead the people to Him who alone can cure them.

The Degree of Blameworthiness.

The shades of niceties of blameworthiness are infinite even to our dull perceptions. There will be no rough and ready measurements by the wise and patient Christ. It is a joy to remember that it is recorded of Him, He needed not that any should bear witness of man, for He knew what was in man. Under His wise administration every one will be judged according to his capabilities, motives and deeds. We shall reap what we have sown. Measure for measure will be the rule. Procrustes reduced all that fell into his hands to one standard. Draco visited nearly every breach of law with great severity, but the Christ, so happily constituted, will be guilty of no such foolishness. He will judge righteous judgment.—Rev. W. T. Acomb of Maidstone, England.

A Good Day's Work.

This is the way to do a good day's work: Begin it with God; do all in the name of the Lord Jesus and for the glory of God; count nothing common or unclean in itself—it can be so only when the motive of your life is low. Be not content with eye service, but, as servants of God, do everything from the heart and for His "Well done." Ask Him to kindle and maintain in your heart the loftiest motives, and be as men who watch for the coming of the master of the house.—F. B. Meyer.

The Harvest of Action.

Nothing with God can be accidental. Every sequence, sweet or bitter, is the harvest of sown action. God has no favorites who can hold fire in the hand and escape pain or harrow and till without treasure. Heaven here or yonder is the place of ends, the harvest home with its garnered sheaves, accomplished triumph, transport of self completion.—Clarence Lathbury.

A Universal Sin.

Unbelief is the most universal of all sins. It is wider than infidelity and more subtle than atheism. Indifference alone can express it. Where one exists the other is sure to be.—Presbyterian Journal.

The Greatest Problem.

There are great problems ahead of us as a nation, but the really greatest problem is the problem of making better men and better women of all of us. —President Roosevelt at Dover, N. H.

The Master's Work.

The Master's work may make weary feet, but it leaves the spirit glad.—Episcopal Recorder.

Mrs. R. A. Martin, of Jackson street, says: "I had pain in my back and loins for about a year or more, no doubt caused by my kidneys being out of order. I felt it more in the morning, just after getting up or if I did any stooping or lifting. Notwithstanding the fact that I took all kinds of medicines I never found anything which helped me until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at L. W. Randolph's drug store. They not only removed the pain, but they strengthened me in other ways."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 30—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Missions; a meeting in the interests of foreign missions. The world for Christ.—Isa. xlv, 12-23.

The Christian church should desire to win the whole world to Christ, because the world needs Christ as its Saviour. "There is no other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved" except the name of Jesus. The world is in sin and needs a Saviour. Not only did the gentile world sink into corruption and into sin, but even God's people wandered away from Him, so that "there is none that doeth good—no, not one." The world stands judged and condemned because of sin, and this judgment can only be set aside and condemnation averted by faith in Jesus Christ. But many have not heard of Christ, and therefore the church should bestir itself to send the gospel heralds everywhere that men may hear and believe and be saved.

Christ's command, as well as the world's need, should inspire Christian people to interest in and support of worldwide missions. "Go ye into all the world," said the Master, "and preach the gospel to every creature." In the face of this command no Christian should hesitate to respond. How can we claim to be Christians if we disobey? Have we any right to elect to obey some of Christ's commands and to disobey others? Yet many who could not be induced to neglect the command, "This do in remembrance of Me," will lightly declare, "I do not believe in foreign missions." Yet the same tongue that said, "This do in remembrance of Me," also said, "Preach the gospel to every creature."

But can the world be won for Christ, and, if so, how? As we review the labors of the past nineteen centuries the task seems almost too great. And yet it can be done and must be done. The divine edict has gone forth that unto Christ every knee must bow and every tongue confess that He is Lord. God's prophecy must be fulfilled. From a human standpoint it may seem next to impossible, yet all things are possible to God. Moreover, what has been done is an earnest of what may be done if Christ's church would only be stir herself. A small band of devout and consecrated disciples of Christ preached the gospel to the world of their day, when Rome was the world and the world was Rome, and what has been done can be.

The church of Christ in the world could and should evangelize every creature. It should tell the story of the cross to every living human being. If our great Christian denominations were greatly aroused and would march forth in the spirit of Paul and Livingstone and Judson and Carey and Brainerd, God would bless their efforts, and the whole world would be reached. The only way to win the world is to win it. Men must be sent. The church must send them. God has revealed no other way. Will the church realize its privilege and rise to its responsibility?

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. lii, 7; Nah. i, 15; Ps. ii, 1-12; lxxii, 1-11; Matt. xxviii, 19, 20; Acts i, 8; xiii, 1-3; Phil. ii, 1-11; Rev. xxii, 17.

Christian Endeavor Abroad.

The Rev. Francis E. Clark, who recently returned from Europe, in speaking of Christian Endeavor work abroad says: "In London I found about 700 societies, with a membership of 50,000 persons. This carries it ahead of our two leading cities; Philadelphia and Chicago, in each of which there are about 600 societies. In Great Britain there are, all told, about 10,000 societies, with a membership of about half a million. On the continent I found that the movement was making great strides in Germany, where there are many societies. France also is making rapid progress, and the adaptability of Christian Endeavor to non-English speaking peoples, its spread and the interest with which it has been received are truly wonderful."

Christian Endeavor the Modern Way

The church ought to be abreast of the times. It is folly for us to try to do things the way they did fifty or 100 years ago. We might as well be plowing with Elijah's crooked stick, or go into battle with Saul's armor, or prefer a canalboat to an express train, as to be clinging to old things.—Rev. Dr. T. De Witt Talmage.

A Sermon Defined.

"Will you not kindly define a sermon?" was asked Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, D.D., and he replied, "A sermon is anything that puts God's truth into the hearts of men."

Four Missionary Paragraphs.

The power of all mission work is really prayer.—Pastor Storjahann.

Some church members believe in missions, and some in omissions.—Ram's Horn.

He who is not a missionary Christian will be a missing Christian when the great day comes for bestowing the rewards of service.—Rev. Dr. A. J. Gordon.

A Brahman said to a missionary: "We are finding you out. You are not as good as your book. If you were as good as your book you could conquer India for Christ in five years." Does not this illustrate the truth of Ezek. xxxvi, 23.—Tongues of Fire (London).

Quiz Box.

THE PHILOSOPHER.

BY BARRY PAIN.

The professor took his book of cigarette papers and his tobacco pouch out of his pocket.

"As an instance of what I have been saying," he said, "it was years before I could roll a cigarette himself."

He tore two papers from the book instead of one. He separated the two papers laboriously and with difficulty. In doing so he dropped his open pouch, and the tobacco spread itself on the floor. As he was endeavoring to collect it, the draught from the window swept the two loose papers into the fireplace. The young man watched him with interest; he proffered his cigarette case.

"No, thanks," said the professor. "I have at last taught myself to roll a cigarette, and I do not wish to get out of practice. To resume, this manual dexterity—unless it is, as in my case, a very difficult acquisition—may be taken as almost certain evidence of an incapacity for abstract thought. On the other hand, show me a man who is clumsy with his fingers, who cannot use the simplest apparatus without blundering, and I will show you a great thinker. Blame it!" he added softly, as he broke his third cigarette paper and started afresh.

"Yet some chaps who can use their hands are supposed to be clever," said the young man. "Surgeons, for instance, who perform delicate operations.

"Cleverness of a finite, materialistic, worthless kind. No man who could, say, prepare microscopic slides could ever by any chance be a metaphysician. I was watching you at tennis this afternoon I do not understand the game, but I take it that it consists in part in hitting a ball, and, moreover, in hitting it with some regard for force and direction."

"That is it, roughly speaking," said the young man.

"You seemed to me to be good at it," said the professor, severely.

"Not particularly," said the young man. "I'm a crock compared to some of them."

"Certainly," said the professor, "and blame it again." His half-made cigarette had dropped from his fingers, and the work had to begun once more. "You are wise to recognize your limitations. It has frequently happened to me to give the converse of that diagnosis, and to detect the greatness of a man's mind from observing his extraordinary clumsiness. Ah, I remember one case—a sad case in some respects but interesting!"

The young man saw that he was to ask to be told about it, and did so obediently. He was a modest young man, and respected age.

"One day I was in one of the London parks. There were few people about in that part of it, it chanced. There I saw a young fellow, of about your age. He had with him a small hand camera. He threw this into the air, took a savage kick at it and missed. He repeated the operation again and missed. Then he put the camera down and jumped on it, until it was completely wrecked. He walked away from it and took a chair under the trees. There he sat with his head thrown back and his eyes closed. Now what does that look to you like?"

"Well,—er—drunk?" suggested the young man, hesitatingly.

"I am ashamed that the same suspicion did for an instant cross my own mind. However, I took the next chair to him, and we soon began to talk. Kindred souls recognize one another rapidly. He had very soon told me the whole story. It appears that the camera he had is one of the simplest cameras made; the advertisements assert—and, I believe, with truth—that a child can work it. This young fellow—his name was Smith—understood the theory of the camera completely. Yet he had just taken six snapshots on the same plate. It was not the first or the second time that he had done this. It was his habitual blunder. It always exasperated him, and that morning it had gone beyond endurance. That was why he had broken up the camera. 'It seems to me,' he said, 'that I can't touch the simplest apparatus without making a fool of myself. I am only safe when I am sitting still with my eyes shut.' If you will excuse my digression, can you tell me why the gummed edge of this paper adheres freely to my fingers, but not to the other edge of the paper?"

"Possibly you've licked the wrong side."

"It may be so; that had not occurred to me. Well, this confession of Smith's made an impression upon me. I drew my bow at a venture. 'And what is your theory of the camera?' I asked. He began on it at once. That was at 11 in the morning, and we sat there talking until six in the evening. The man was marvelous—a miracle. He had not any remarkable range of knowledge—rather the contrary. There were many books, especially in the German language, with which he should have been familiar, but he was not. But there was the right type of mind. His theory was brilliant and audacious, and to the best of my knowledge quite original. I need hardly say that I disagreed with it in toto—my own theory is, I believe, well known. But I urged him to work it out fully, and he promised me he would. The last time I saw him that night he had just fallen into the mud while attempting to enter an omnibus in motion—his was no mind for finite matters.

"Did he work it out?" asked the young man, patiently, suppressing a yawn.

"He did not. It is lost—unless I do something with it myself. He died in an asylum a few months afterwards. Ah! You will observe that I have now made my cigarette. It looks, perhaps, a little unshapely, and I fear it will take some time to dry."

"Have one of mine in the meantime," said the young man.

"Thank you," said the Philosopher. "I think that after all perhaps I will."—London Black and White.

The Queen's Rebuke.

Some years ago, when the present queen of England was princess of Wales and her children were very small, they were staying at a quiet watering place. The Montreal Star repeats this little story of the royal family, which shows that Queen Alexandra is much like other good mothers, and that her children are like children the world over:

Once on returning from a short sail one of the little princesses was walking up the plank. An old sailor instinctively said:

"Take care, little lady!"

The child drew herself up haughtily and said:

"I'm not a lady. I'm a princess!"

The princess of Wales, who overheard the kindly injunction and the rather ill-bred reply, said quickly:

"Tell the good sailor you are not a little lady yet, but you hope to be some day."

THE STANDARD AMALGAMATED GOLD PLACER MINING CO.

with a capital stock of $1,000,000, divided into shares par value of $1 each, full paid and forever non-assessable, offer to the public for a limited time only these shares at 10c each.

This company owns seven placer claims on Trout Creek in the famous Gold Belt district of Montana, one of the best paying districts in the world today. Last season three men on the same creek, with nothing but gold pans, took out over $60,000. Judge for yourself then what the profits will amount to when this company finish putting in their machinery. We propose to sell a small amount of this stock for the purpose of buying more amalgamaters and hydraulic elevators, at the extremely low price of

10c per share

Don't delay, as this offer will not remain open long. Send right away for our illustrated prospectus, explaining exactly what we have done and propose to do.

RAILWAY INCOMES.

Net Earnings of $3,091 Per Mile. Previous Years Outdone.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The preliminary report of the interstate commerce commission on the income account of railways in the United States for the year ended June 30 last contains returns of railway companies operating 195,945 miles of line, or probably 98 per cent of the total railway mileage of the United States. The passenger earnings of these railways were $472,429,165 and the freight earnings $1,200,885,653. Including these and other earnings from operation gross earnings amounted to $1,711,754,200, or $8,736 per mile of line, and operating expenses $1,106,137,405, or $5,645 per mile of line, showing that net earnings were $635,616,795, or $3,091 per mile. The net earnings were $51,395,421 greater than during the previous year.

The total income of the operating roads of the country, including $52,714,492 derived from investments and miscellaneous sources, was $688,331,287. The deductions from income aggregated $458,455,361. This amount comprised interest on funded debt, rent of leased lines, betterments charged to income, taxes ($49,426,675) and various minor expenditures. The dividends declared on stocks amounted to $150,685,959, substantially $29,834,690 greater than for the previous year. The surplus from the operations of the roads was $79,185,367. The complete report for the previous year gave a surplus of $84,764,782.

Postmaster Arrested.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Nov. 26.—James M. Lurvey, for two years in charge of the fourth class postoffice at Goff's Falls, has been placed under arrest. He is suspected of being the masked robber who stole an express package containing $2,710 at the Goff's Falls depot on Aug. 27 last, using red pepper on the express clerk. For that crime American Express company detectives caused the arrest of Joseph H. McDermott, a telegrapher of Waverley, Mass., who was temporarily in charge of the depot. The September grand jury refused to indict McDermott, who has since brought suit against the company for $10,000. Lurvey will be arraigned today. He is fifty-five years old and a war veteran.

APPRAISERS OBJECT.

Not in Favor of Plan to Merge Drake Land Companies Into Another Concern.

Aaron Turnstall and Christopher Carthlige, of Trenton, recently applied to Vice Chancellor Pitney for the appointment of appraisers to appraise the stock of the land companies represented by S. D. Drake. This application resulted in the appointment of J. Wesley Johnson, of this city, and Mr. Fell and Mr. Hartley, of Trenton. It has been said that the appraisers were not in accord with the merger plan, whereby these various companies were merged into the Columbia Realty Company.

As a matter of fact, it is said, that Mr. Turnstall is a director of the four companies mentioned, an officer and voted at each meeting for the merger. He is also a director of the Columbia Realty Company and voted at a meeting of that company for the combination. This action does not affect the business of the company. The stock is valuable and will doubtless become more so. Mr. Drake has engaged A. A. Clark, of Somerville, to represent the company in the matter.

CITY SCHOOLS VISIT TURNER ART EXHIBITION

Exhibit Opens Today and It Will Continue the Remainder of This Week.

FOR PUBLIC AS WELL

PHOTOGRAPHS OF FAMOUS PAINTINGS, SCULPTURE AND ARCHITECTURE.

Horace K. Turner's Art Exhibit Was Thrown Open to Public This Morning in Franklin School Hall—The Pupils Visit It.

An interesting collection of carbon photographs of paintings by some of the world's old masters and also by some of the more modern painters of note, known as the Horace H. Turner art exhibit, has been placed on exhibition in Franklin School hall at the corner of Arlington avenue and West Fourth street and was opened for public inspection this morning, when there were a number of people present to view the artistic display.

The collection has been chosen from the best works of several of the world's wholesale art dealers. The idea of the exhibition is to broaden and cultivate the minds and characters of the pupils. Some of the photographs of the paintings are from the works of the old masters, including some of Raphael's famous works and copies of the paintings of Merillo, Michelangelo, Buonarroti and Van-Dyck, as well as some of the latter day artists of note including Iness, Millet, Lancier, Thompson, Seeley and others of prominence. Included in the collection are pictures of architectural ruins and masterpieces in sculpture which are of great interest to school children and to their elders alike.

Each school will have an opportunity of examining the collection which has been thrown open to the public. Tuesday the Bryant school visited the hall, and the Irving and Lincoln schools were to have visited the collection yesterday but on account of the rain it was decided to postpone the visit until Friday. Today at the morning session the pupils of the High School viewed the pictures and this afternoon the members of the Franklin and Washington schools will have an opportunity of seeing the display. Each morning, afternoon and evening a musical programme will be rendered by local talent.

SCHOOL OFFERINGS.

Food Stuffs and Provisions Given to Children's Home—Cash Donations for Good Cause.

The pupils of the North Plainfield High School brought to the school yesterday a large quantity of food stuffs and provisions as Thanksgiving offering which were sent to the Children's Home. The gifts of the children filled almost a dozen barrels and the main hall in the north wing of the school looked like the shipping department of a large grocery store.

Superintendent Wightman was also handed a large amount of money which will be used to purchase shoes for children, who not being able to secure shoes, are unable to attend school. There are from sixteen to twenty-five children who will thus be enabled to attend the school through the generosity of the pupils.

HAVANA STRIKE ENDS.

General Gomez Given Credit For Prompt Settlement.

HAVANA, Nov. 26.—The Central Labor union decided last night to call off the strike, and committees were appointed to inform the various unions of this decision. There will probably be a complete resumption of work at once.

Much of the credit for the settlement of the strike is due to General Gomez, who headed the committee which consulted the managers of the Havana Commercial company, against whom the strike was first directed. After the conference General Gomez and the majority of the committee expressed themselves as satisfied at the stand that the company had taken. The managers maintained that they had not discriminated against Cuban apprentices, the fact being that the company's books showed that over 90 per cent of their apprentices were Cubans. The company would maintain and even increase this ratio, but it refused to treat with the Central Labor union in matters pertaining to their employees. The managers said that they were always willing to meet a committee made up of workers from their factories, and they agreed to open the factories again if the men returned to work.

General Gomez and the committee afterward met the Central Labor union, and the old warrior did not spare words in his condemnation of the action of the union in calling out the workmen. He said it was a revolution and not a strike and that the war veterans stood ready to take up arms in support of the government in order to maintain order. That ended the strife as far as the Central Labor union was concerned.

As a result of the strike riot four persons are reported dead and 106 wounded.

French Diplomas For Americans.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The state department has been notified by the French embassy here that the president of the French republic has conferred diplomas of the order of the Legion of Honor on the following officers of the state, war and navy departments for the part played by them in the dedication of the Rochambeau monument: State department—Mr. Edwin Morgan, commander. War department—Major General John R. Brooke, commander; Brigadier General S. B. M. Young, commander; Colonel Albert L. Mills, officer. Navy department—Rear Admiral F. J. Higginson, commander; Captain Willard H. Brownson, officer; Captain Henry W. Lyon, officer; Captain Joseph N. Hemphill, officer. These diplomas are in addition to a number transmitted to the state department several months ago, and, like them, they cannot be accepted until congress has given its approval.

RURAL BARN DANCE ENJOYED BY SOCIETY

The In and Out Club Held Its First Dance Under Strictly Unique Circumstances.

TYPICAL DECORATIONS

AFFAIR WAS HELD IN THE COMMODIOUS BARNS OF F. A. BARNABY.

Banquet Table Arrived at Midnight in a Large Hay Wagon—Some of the Guests Who Were Present at the Affair.

A typical rural barn dance was held in the large barn on the Barnaby estate on Plainfield avenue, Wednesday evening, which, in point of the decorations and the originality of the arrangements, made the first dance of the In and Out Club one of the most brilliant and decidedly the most unique social function seen in this city in several years. The general scheme was to hold an autumnal barn dance and those who conceived the idea carried out the plan in every particular.

Hung about the ceiling were clusters of cornstalks and golden ears of corn while in the corners and on the rafters were arranged jack-o'-lanterns and bunches of red peppers and sheaves of wheat giving the appearance of a barn full of the autumn harvest freshly gathered from the fields. On the spacious grounds were hung lanterns of many shapes and sizes which gave the appearance of a perfect fairy land of scintilating lights of various colors.

Inside the barn soft strains of music eminating from behind a bower of graceful cornstalks and clusters of greens set the time for the dances. All those who were present were attired in outing suits, the women being gowned in shirtwaists and white duck skirts and the men in trousers of the same material.

At about midnight there was a sound of the approach of horse's hoofs on the gravel driveway and the blowing of horns and the sound of bells announced the arrival of a large hay wagon loaded with cornstalks and hay and in the center of which was a table laden with the banquet which was a royal one. The driver and his companion, representing Reuben and Cynthia, were Frederick W. Goddard and Mrs. E. M. VanBuren. They were blowing tin horns and ringing a large dinner bell. The banquet was served in a corner of the barn and where the wall were hung with hunting prints of great value.

Following the banquet came the principal event of the evening, the cotillion which was led by Thomas R. VanBoskerck. His partner was Miss May Evans. The favors of large straw bonnets for the women and rosettes for the men were distributed by the patronesses who were: Miss May Evans, Mrs. Edward M. VanBuren, Miss Lucy Otterson, Miss May Holly and Mrs. Frank Austin Barnaby. Included in the favors distributed were toy animals, rakes, hoes, silk flags, horse's heads, baskets of candy eggs, pumpkins filled with candy eggs and musical instruments.

Some of the features of the German were figures representing scare crows, churning maids, maypole dancers, and horse show habitatues. Those who arranged for the dance and who conceived the idea of the affair were: Miss May Evans, Mrs. Edward M. VanBuren, Miss May Holly, Miss Margaret Holly and Miss Lucy Otterson.

Among those who were present were: Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. VanBuren, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Timpson, Mr and Mrs. L. E. Waring, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Tyler, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. McGee, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. James Blake and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Murphy.

The Misses May Waring, Maud Van Boskerck, Daisy VanBoskerck, Efna Strong, Betty Steele, Mary Anderson Reinhart, May Rodman, Lucy Otterson, Mabel Pierson, Helen Bushnell, Marion Bowen, Fanny C. PARK CLUB HOLIDAY DANCE

FORMAL DANCE HELD AT THAT CLUB THANKSGIVING EVE.

Was Well Attended and Passed Off Very Successfully—The Committee in Charge.

The annual Thanksgiving Eve dance at the Park Club attracted a large number of society folk from this city, as well as the borough. It was in every particular a delightful occasion. The clubhouse, as on previous occasions, was too small for dancing, but the young folks made the best of it and altogether they had a good time.

The decorations were appropriate to the season and consisted of potted plants, palms, ferns and flowers. These were tastefully arranged about the large and small rooms.

The affair was given under the auspices of the entertainment committee consisting of Mr. and Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen, Mr. and Mrs. William L. Saunders, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. McGee and C. Everitt Murray and they received the guests and assisted largely in making the event one of great pleasure to all. Later in the evening there was an intermission and refreshments were served. The dancing was then continued until the small hours.

LOCAL DEMOCRATS HOSTS

THANKSGIVING EVE SMOKER GIVEN IN DEMOCRATIC HEADQUARTERS.

Programme of Local Talent Very Pleasantly Entertained a Large Crowd.

The smoker given Wednesday evening by the Plainfield Democratic Club in its rooms in East Second street was a great success, not only in point of the attendance but in the entertainment which helped make the evening an enjoyable one.

New York entertainers were provided by the entertainment committee but at the eleventh hour they sent word that they would not be able to be present so local talent was substituted which proved to be very acceptable. Among those who took part in the programme were Frederick Bowden, John and James Galvin, William Moran, James Dougherty, Bert Collins and John Vardon, including the male part of the company now playing at the Central theatre.

The committee in charge of the arrangements were: John D. McAleer, chairman; John Kane, Victor Troice, J. V. T. Dilts and Frank McCabe. Among the guests present were James E. Martine, B. Frank Coriell, the newly-elected sheriff of Union county; David Carney and George A. Pierre. Refreshments of sandwiches and coffee were served.

ALIS FOOTBALL TEAM MEETS FIRST DEFEAT

Beaten by Bergen Point Field Club on Hope Common by the Score of 6 to 0.

YESTERDAY MORNING

UNFORTUNATE FUMBLE GAVE BERGEN POINT BALL CLOSE TO ALIS' GOAL.

Visitors' Line Was Invincible and Their Backs Hammered Alis Line for Many Gains—Alis' Fast Work Around Ends Saved Them.

Its first defeat of the season, administered to the crack Alis A. A. eleven by the Bergen Point Field Club yesterday morning on Hope Common, furnished Plainfield with one of the most exciting football games of the season. The score was 6 to 0, and might have been 0 to 0 but for an unfortunate fumble which gave the Bergen Points the ball right before Alis' goal.

From the start it was evident that Alis had the toughest proposition of the season to deal with. The visitors had the heavier team and they played together well. Their line was invincible and Alis had to confine its gaining to end plays where fast work and good interference counted. Alis put up a splendid defensive game in the first half. The ball stayed near the middle of the field most of the time, both sides repeatedly losing it on downs. Alis, through fast end plays, carried the ball to Bergen Point's twenty yard line there to lose it on downs. Then Bergen Point hammered the line and the ball zigzaged up and down the field again.

Bergen Point kicked off in the second half. Phillips caught the ball and started to run back. He was thrown heavily and the ball bounded away when a Bergen Point end fell on it on Alis' twenty yard line. Then the visitors bucked the line steadily until the goal line was crossed by Green for a touchdown. An easy goal was kicked by Longstreet.

After that, the Alis boys made a desperate effort to score but without avail. They were forced to kick and Pond punted well down the field. Once a punt gave Bergen Point the ball on its five yard line. Alis attempted to hold for downs but Bergen Point's line bucking was too strong and the ball was carried out of danger. Both sides played hard and there were frequent delays on account of arguments. A large crowd witnessed the game. Although the turf was soft and slippery, there was little or no fumbling by either side.

The teams lined up as follows:

Alis.		Bergen Point.
Smith	LE	Houghton
Wilson	LT	Allen
Hardingham	LG	Longstreet
Guinn	C	Tuttle
Egan	RG	Whitney
Pond	RT	Langforth
Cathcart	RE	E. Stalling
Phillips	QB	Waters
Woolston	LH	Green
Cuming	RH	W. Stalling
Davis	FB	Daw

The officials were: Referee, H. S. Taylor, of Orange A. C.; umpire, Charles Dupee, of Yale, '01; field linesman, A. Willis West, of Plainfield; linesmen, Harry Verdenberg, of Bayonne, and Charles B. Morse, of Plainfield; time-keepers, E. S. F. Randolph, of Plainfield, and J. C. Martin, of Bayonne.

AFTER THE DINNER EACH GUEST HAD TO TELL OF HIMSELF.

Made a Happy Thanksgiving for Those Who Might Have Otherwise Had a Dreary Holiday—The Committee in Charge.

Thanksgiving Day was made very pleasant for a large number of young men, who have only recently arrived in Plainfield and who would otherwise have passed a very dreary holiday, at a dinner and entertainment at the Young Men's Christian Association late yesterday afternoon and last evening. The affair was held in the rooms in the boy's department, up stairs, where a committee of active workers in the association, assisted by several women who are also interested in the work, arranged the dinner which was a sumptuous one.

Secretary J. Harry Manning presided at the table and Kenneth Robbie, the secretary of boys' department, acted as toast master. After the last course had been served each one present was called upon to make a speech in which he was especially requested to tell where he was born, when he came to this city, what his business was, and to tell his name and whether he was married or not. This proved to be a very interesting feature of the dinner and was the source of much amusement.

After the speech making was over, a social time was enjoyed after which those present were invited to attend the entertainment in the Association Hall, for which tickets were presented to each member of the company. Ten States and countries were represented in the gathering, New York, California, West Virginia, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Connecticut, New Jersey, Holland and Scotland.

BIG MACHINE JUST BUILT

A MAGNETIC CLUTCH PLANER COMPLETED AT POND TOOL WORKS.

Built Specially for Shops of Pennsylvania Railroad at Altoona, Pa.

Last week saw the completion at the Pond Machine Tool Works of one of the largest machines ever built at the shop and the largest of the kind ever constructed. It is called a magnetic clutch planer and was made from special designs for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for use in its shops at Altoona. Completely fitted up, the machine weighs 120 tons and will reuire five cars for transportation.

In detail the contrivance is fifty-nine feet, six inches long and measures six feet between the uprights. The table is thirty-four feet long and weighs thirty-five tons. The bed is in one piece and weighs forty tons. Not a belt of any kind is to be used on the machine, the power being transmitted by what is termed "magnetic clutch." This is gained by electricity from a motor of immense size. The clutches were patented and built at the General Electric plant at Schenectady, N. Y. One gear alone made of brass weights 1,300 pounds and represents an expenditure of $1,400.

HAHNE & CO.'S NEW STORE.

That Mammoth Establishment Now Makes Its Holiday Announcement.

This great establishment, with an area larger than any store in New York, and with an incomparable stock of merchandise that presents as wide a range of choice as any New York store, has made extraordinary preparations for the coming Yuletide season. There isn't a thing missing, except exorbitant prices.

Every feature of Christmas gift giving is completely represented. The markets of Europe as well as our own country have contributed to the holiday show, and they are ready as never before to meet the demands of every boy and girl in the State.

Dolls, of course, form an important part of the display—and such dolls. When you look at the price tags you wonder how they can be made and sold at such little prices. There's no secret. Hahne & Co. have a large stock of all the best choosings that the market affords than all the stores of Newark assembled into one. Quantity always makes price, and you find both—big quantities and low prices.

The Home Building and Loan Ass'n.
ORGANIZED 1888.

At a special meeting of The Home Building and Loan Association held November 17th, 1902, a resolution was passed to amend its by-laws pertaining to interest on loans, which was heretofore six per cent. per annum—permitting the Board of management to loan money at a reduced rate of interest on future loans. Prospective home buyers will do well to apply to the Secretary for particulars.

The Home Building and Loan Association during fifteen years of business has redeemed seven semi-annual series. It has at this time an investment of over $150,000.00 divided among about eighty members; and has paid 5½ to 6 per cent. compound interest to its investors. Total number of members 350.

The Association meets the third Monday of each month from 7 to 9 p. m., at 120 East Front Street, Plainfield. Shares $1.00 per month. Entrance fee 25 cents per share.

TEA TABLE TALK.

Short Sketches That Are Not Always News, But Just as Interesting.

Despite the fact that it is now several months since the location of the city offices has been changed, there were taxpayers looking for Collector Smith in the Coward building on Park avenue, last week. One woman sat on the stairs leading to the old office, for two hours waiting for Mr. Smith to return, while a taxpayer living just out of the city, made three trips to town on different days to see the collector. He eventually found him at his office in the Smalley building on North avenue.

LITERARY.

Fourteen consecutive numbers of a first-class magazine, including an elaborate Christmas issue, sold at retail for 25 cents, a beautifully executed Art Calendar, finely lithographed on three sheets—such is the offer which Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly, of 141 Fifth avenue, New York City, makes to any reader of this paper who will send $1 subscriptions at once. The calendar bears on each of its three sheets a graceful figure of a college girl, dressed appropriately in the colors of one of the great colleges, the college seal and the college yell, the whole embodying the complete college idea.

The December number of The Popular Science Monthly contains the following articles "The Higher Education of Women," by President David Starr Jordan; "The Significance of the Condition of Young Birds at Birth," by W. P. Pycraft; "Solomon's House," by Francis Bacon; "Nitrogen-fixing Bacteria," by J. G. Lipman; "Some Arachnids at Hanover, Cape Colony," by S. C. Cronwright Schreiner; "Zoology in America," by Professor T. D. A. Cockerell; "Mental and Moral Heredity in Royalty," by Dr. Frederick Adams Woods; "The Size of Alaska," by George B. Hollister; "A Biographical Index of the Men of Science of the United States," by Professor J. Mc Keen Cattell; "The Smithsonian Institution and its Dependencies;" "The University President;" "The John Fritz Medal;" "Gases in Interplanetary Space;" "The Destruction of Forests by Fire."

An Adding Machine.

Among the improvements recently made in Tax Collector F. H. Smith's office is that of an adding machine, such as are used in the First National and City National Banks. It is up to the finance committee of the Council as to whether this will be a fixture of the office, but it is no doubt a great help to the collector in doing his work expeditiously.

HARD FOUGHT FIELDS

Closing Games of College Football Hotly Contested.

PENNSYLVANIA DEFEATS CORNELL.

Columbia and Syracuse Struggle Ends In a Tie—Carlisle Indians Lay Out the Georgetown Eleven.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—The University of Pennsylvania football eleven defeated the Cornell team by the score of 12 to 11. The Ithacans kicked a goal from placement and scored a touchdown from which a goal resulted in the first half, while Pennsylvania scored two touchdowns and kicked two goals in the second half. Never has a more intensely exciting and uncertain contest been witnessed on Franklin field. Until the final blast of the referee's whistle announced the cessation of hostilities there was a painful uncertainty in the hearts of the Pennsylvania supporters. Cornell had thrice carried the ball dangerously near Pennsylvania's goal and once carried it over. Another touchdown or an opportunity for a second goal from placement would probably mean defeat for the local eleven, but as the time drew near for the close of the contest Pennsylvania's play became more fierce, while that of Cornell grew correspondingly weak, and the game ended with the ball in Cornell's possession on her twenty-five yard line.

There was scarcely a moment during the seventy minutes' struggle that there was not something occurring. Spectacular runs, sensational tackles and terrific line plunges came with such frequency that the spectators were kept almost continually bobbing up and down in their seats. Both teams played brilliantly. Pennsylvania's offense was superior to that of Cornell, and her defense, particularly within ten minutes of the close of the game, has never been excelled by a Pennsylvania eleven. When the two elevens trotted on for the second half, the score stood 11 to 0 in favor of Cornell, and there were few Pennsylvanians who dared hope for a victory.

Columbia-Syracuse a Tie Game.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Playing easily in its best form of the season, Columbia's football team played a tie game with Syracuse at the Polo grounds, the final score being 6—6. Syracuse escaped defeat only by a narrow margin, as, with the score 6—5 for Columbia, in Boland's attempted goal the ball hit the crossbar and, fortunately for Syracuse, rolled over the stick of wood for the point that tied the score. Columbia played a brilliant game and surpassed the hopes of its admirers. Its defense was the best shown by the team this season. Twice Columbia held in downs at its eight and ten yard line. Both teams played desperately in the first half, but neither eleven was able to score.

Indians Defeat Georgetown.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28. — The Georgetown football team went down before the Indians from Carlisle on the Georgetown campus and suffered defeat by the score of 21 to 0. The visitors' victory, however, did not commence until the opening of the second half, and then the game resolved itself not into a contest for supremacy, but numerical greatness. The whole twenty-one points chalked up to the Indians' credit were made in this half.

Wolverines Beat Gophers.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 28.—By a score of 23 to 6 Michigan defeated Minnesota on Ferry field and earned the undisputed title to the western football championship. It took seventy minutes of furious play to finish the game. At times both teams, especially Michigan, were brilliant. At times the game on both sides was ragged, but it never ceased to be desperate.

Chicago Outplayed Wisconsin.

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—Chicago outplayed Wisconsin on Marshall field before a crowd of 8,000 enthusiastic rooters and won by the score of 11 to 0 in a hard fought but not brilliant game of football. Chicago made only one touchdown from which a goal was kicked.

Nebraskans Have Clear Record.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 28.—The University of Nebraska football team finished the season without once having been scored against, defeating Northwestern university 12 to 0.

Herr Krupp Exonerated.

ROME, Nov. 28.—An inquiry instituted into the scandals concerning the late Herr Krupp at Capri island is said to have completely cleared the deceased's character, and it has been decided that the government will prosecute the newspapers which made the defamatory statement. It is stated that the accusations against Herr Krupp have been traced to a German painter resident in Capri, whose arrest was ordered, but he disappeared.

Conductor Falls Under an Engine.

CORNING, N. Y., Nov. 28.—Stephen Haight, a yard conductor in charge of an Erie switch engine, was killed in the yards here. Missing his footing, he was thrown under the wheels. His neck was broken, and he was otherwise crushed. He leaves a wife and two children.

NATION'S FEAST DAY

Thanksgiving Generally Observed at Home and Abroad.

NEW YORK'S UNFORTUNATES WELL FED

Religious Services a Prominent Feature—Sports Attract Large Numbers—The President Dines on Rhode Island Turkey.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—New Yorkers looked out on a dismal scene Thanksgiving morning. The fog hung low and a heavy mist filled the air, but at noon the clouds broke, and the afternoon was fair and unusually mild for this time of the year.

Religious services were a prominent feature of the day. Next to this sport lovers had planned most extensively. Aside from the two big football games—Syracuse versus Columbia in this city and Cornell versus Pennsylvania in Philadelphia—golf occupied the attention of the greatest number, although the weather interfered somewhat.

At all the public institutions, penal and charitable, the inmates were entertained, and there were numerous private and semipublic feasts for the great mass of unfortunates.

The day was appropriately observed at Bellevue hospital and its allied institutions, turkey, chicken and other good things being served to all of the 800 inmates of Bellevue who were not restricted by diet.

The Salvation Army and the Volunteers of America each fed an army of poor people, and the various branches of the Young Men's Christian association appeased the hunger of many more.

William Waldorf Astor's annual dinner to newsboys was given in the evening at the Newsboys' lodging house, 9 Duane street, Randolph Guggenheimer delivering an address.

The American Female Guardian Society and Home For the Friendless held its sixty-ninth Thanksgiving celebration in its new home, 936 Woodycrest avenue.

Warden Van de Carr made the 375 prisoners in the Tombs as happy as he could, giving them plenty to eat and drink, besides an entertainment.

On Ellis island the government gave a dinner of turkey and mince and pumpkin pie to 800 detained immigrants.

Although the majority of New Yorkers ate their dinner in this city, a great many took trains for family reunions in other parts. Up to 9 o'clock in the morning 40,000 persons had left the Grand Central station alone. The trains on both the Central and the Pennsylvania were run in sections all night.

Thanksgiving Dinner In London.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Nearly 500 American citizens and a sprinkling of distinguished English men and women participated in the annual Thanksgiving dinner held at the Cecil hotel under the auspices of the American society of London. The company included Ambassador Choate and Mrs. Choate, all the members of the embassy staff now here, Robert McCormick, American ambassador to Russia; Consul General Evans, the Right Hon. H. H. Asquith, Lord Reay, Lord Fairfax, the American peer; Field Marshal Lord Roberts and Sir Henry Norman. The speeches were numerous and abounded in good feeling and reciprocal compliments.

The President's Thanksgiving.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—President and Mrs. Roosevelt ate their Thanksgiving dinner with their children, Captain and Mrs. William S. Cowles and a few additional guests, among whom was Secretary Root. Kermit, the second son of the president, was the only absentee. He is at school in Groton, Mass. The feature of the president's menu was a thirty-two pound chestnut fed turkey, which reached the White House Tuesday night. It was sent by Horace Vose of Westerly, R. I., who for a quarter of a century has supplied a fine specimen of the noble American bird for the Thanksgiving dinner of the president of the United States.

Thanksgiving Celebration In Rome.

ROME, Nov. 28.—Hundreds of stars and stripes hanging from the houses of Americans announced Thanksgiving day to the people here. A special service was held in the American church, Rev. Dr. McCracken of New York officiating. Mr. Francis MacNutt, a papal cavalier of the Cape and Sword and the highest American layman at the Vatican, gave a magnificent dinner in honor of the day. The guests included Archbishop Chapelle of New Orleans. Professor Norton, the director of the American School of Classical Studies, gave an entertainment to his students.

Festival Kept In Berlin.

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—Three hundred Americans celebrated Thanksgiving day by dining together at the Kaiserhof. Retiring Ambassador White, who presided, proposed the healths of the German emperor and President Roosevelt, who, he said, were in many respects alike. Consul General Mason proposed a toast to Ambassador White and also to Secretary J. B. Jackson, who leaves for Athens in a few days. A telegram of good wishes was sent by the assembly to President Roosevelt.

Quiet Observance In Paris.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—Thanksgiving day was quietly observed here by the American colony. Special services were held in several churches. The Rev. Dr. Thurber, pastor of the American church, said that the "cause of the world's thanksgiving is that the nations are beginning to completely accept international arbitration in place of the arbitrament of the sword."

DESERVES SUPPORT.

It is to be hoped that Councilman Lee will be successful in his attempt to secure the co-operation of the Common Council in a plan to establish some means of crossing the Jersey Central's tracks between Grant and Clinton avenues. Under the existing arrangement, hundreds of men, women and children daily cross the tracks at the imminent risk of being dashed into eternity without warning. Several people have been struck and it is surprising that with so many trains passing that the accidents are so few. The railroad company is blameless as there is no legal path or right of way at that spot and those who do cross the railroad are realy nothing more than trespassers on the company's property.

It is useless to expect that pedestrians will go way round by the way of Clinton or Grant avenues. Employes of the Pond Tool Works, living on the north side of the track, are going to take the nearest route to their work. So are the children bound for school. Even the occasional death of one of their number will not deter them. The only feasible way, therefore, is to open a right of way at some point of convenience. As the railroad is in a slight cut at that point an overhead bridge would be possible and its erection would be the means of keeping hundreds off the tracks. That might mean the saving of several lives.

Councilman Lee's plan has some excellent features about it and deserves careful attention from the City Fathers. Either this plan or some other should be followed to relieve the present method of its dangerous features. Precious human lives cannot be placed in jeopardy so constantly. It is up to the Common Council to take some means of remedying it without fail.

Even if turkeys were scarce and cost considerably more than last year, that famous American bird reigned supreme at hundreds of Plainfield homes yesterday.

DINNER FOR LITTLE ONES.

Bounteous Thanksgiving Repast Served at the Children's Home.

Through the generosity of the good friends of the Children's Home the little folks, to the number of thirty, were able to enjoy a fine Thanksgiving dinner yesterday afternoon. The dinner was donated entirely by friends of the Home and there was plenty of everything. No one was obliged to go hungry.

During the dinner hour, several friends stopped at the Home as guests to witness the happy scene. The children were appreciative of the sumptuous repast and if those who made the dinner possible could have been present, their hearts would have been made glad by the sight.

WED A SOMERVILLE BRIDE

THE MARRIAGE OF MISS MARGARET H. HOLMES TO JOS. J. MARTIN.

Ceremony Took Place at Bride's Home in Somerville Yesterday Afternoon.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Nov. 28—A very pretty wedding was celebrated yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock, when Miss Margaret H. Holmes and Joseph J. Martin, of Plainfield, were married in the presence of nearly seventy guests at the home of the bride in this place. It was a pink and white wedding. Rev. Dr. J. R. Bryan, formerly pastor of the M. E. church, but now of Plainfield, performed the ceremony.

The couple were married beneath a floral arch, in the centre of which was a floral bell. As the bridal party entered the parlor, the Loehengrin wedding march was played by Miss Clara Mundy, of Somerville, and the words were sung by Miss Lillian Still and George Still, of Yonkers, N. Y. The bride was given away by her brother, W. J. Holmes, of Bernardsville.

The bride was gowned in white mull and carried white carnations. She was attended by Miss Sarah Holmes, of New York, and Miss Christine Miller, of Yonkers, as bridemaids, who were gowned in white swiss over pink and carried pink and white carnations. The maid-of-honor was Miss May Holmes, of Somerville, who wore a gown of white organdie and carried pink carnations. The flower girls were the Misses Ethel and Edna Runyon, of Somerville. They were dressed in white and carried white carnations.

The groom was attended by S. R. Thompson, of Winthrop, Mass., and the ushers were Frank J. McGuire, of New York, and Clarence Coleman, of Raritan.

After the ceremony a reception followed and supper was served. There were guests present from New York, Plainfield, Raritan, Pittstown, Yonkers, Bernardsville, Clinton and Elizabeth. Later in the evening the bride and groom went to Bound Brook in a coach and there they took a train for an extended wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside in Plainfield. There were a great many handsome presents received by the couple.

LARGE CROWD WAS PLEASED

Y. M. C. A. STAR COURSE ENTERTAINMENT WAS HELD LAST EVENING.

Given by Edwrrd H. Frye, the Monologist, and the Euterpean Glee Club.

A rare combination of music and recitation was the attraction which filled the Association Hall in the Y. M. C. A. building to overflowing, last evening, when the second of the Star Course of entertainments provided by the asso iation, was held.

At 8 o'clock the Euterpean Glee Club opened the evening's programme with some of its very clever songs which were received by the large audience with loud applause and two encores. The club is composed of Elmer D. Cutting, first tenor; E. Maxwell Honeyman, second tenor; Sydney R. Titsworth, first bass, and R. Wilson Derby, second bass. The Euterpean quartette is rapidly attaining the reputation of being the finest organization in the city.

Next upon the programme was Edward H. Frye who, in a masterful manner, recited Joseph Jefferson's immortal "Rip VanWinkle" in a way which captured his audience completely. His recital of the awakening of Rip on the summit of the mountains was very realistic and the pathetic closing scene of the piece as the aged hero of the story meets again his family in the little town of Falling Water, appealed to the sympathy of the audience to a marked degree. Mr. Frye has a masterful way of reciting the story which moves his hearers to tears in one moment only to change the tears to hearty bursts of laughter when he brings out the humorous part of the story.

The entertainment of last evening was a great success and shows that the course of entertainments this year are by no means inferior to those of preceding seasons.

—Percy W. Vail will move today from Somerset street to Pearl street.

—F. H. Andrews will lead the monthly missionary meeting at Warren chapel, this evening.

—The regular meeting of the McAll Auxiliary will be held at the Public Library, Wednesday morning, December 3, at 11 o'clock.

STAR RUN WON THE GAME

SHERWIN SAVED THE DAY FOR THE ORANGE FIELD CLUB.

Exciting Football Game Between O. F. C. and Port Richmond Y. M. C. A.

The football game yesterday afternoon on the Hope Common between the Orange Field Club and the Port Richmond Y. M. C. A. was witnessed by a large number of people who cheered the local players on to a winning score of 11 to 5 in one of the most interesting games played by the Orange Field Club this season. It was a battle fought out by the merits of each individual player in which the excellent training of the past week was shown in the results.

In the first half the local players forced the visitors to play on the defensive as the Port Richmonds were much the heavier team. Smith made a touchdown but the O. F. C. was unable to kick the goal. In the second half it looked as though the score would remain 5-0 but the visitors scored a touchdown by a long run by Lovell but they were unable to kick the goal making the score 5-5. This was the score until the last three minutes when it began to look gloomy for the local team until Sherwin made the star run of the game by taking the ball down the entire length of the field and scored a touchdown which was kicked by Emmons. Score, 11-5.

The visitors were dined at the Kensington, by the O. F. C. after the game.

YOUNG WOMAN DEAD.

Miss Katherine Kratzel, of Dunellen, Passed Away Yesterday.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen Nov. 28—Very sad was the death which occurred yesterday morning of Miss Katherine Kratzel, eldest daughter of Paul Kratzel, of this place, at the home of her sister, Mrs. C. A. Zimmerman, of Plainfield. Miss Kratzel had been ailing but a short time, and about a week was taken to Plainfield in the hopes that the change would do her good. All efforts proved without avail, however, and she passed away yesterday morning. Hasty consumption was the immediate cause of death.

The deceased was only twenty years of age and was the eldest of several daughters. The body was removed yesterday afternoon to the home of another sister, Mrs. Henry Weidenhaupt, of North avenue, where the funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon at 1:30. Rev. S. K. Doolittle, of the Methodist church, will officiate and interment will be made in the Bound Brook cemetery.

A particularly sad feature of her death was that she was engaged to be married to Harry Page, of Harrisburg, Pa.; a former resident of Plainfield. The marriage was to have taken place within a very short time. Mr. Page has been sent for and is expected today.

THE NEGRO PROBLEM

South Carolinians Answered by the President.

RACE OR COLOR NOT CONSIDERED.

Taken to Task For Naming Colored Man For Office In Charleston, Roosevelt Leaves No Doubt as to His Position.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The president has sent an important communication to a prominent citizen of Charleston, S. C., the main features of which are as follows:

"My Dear Sir.—I am in receipt of your letter of Nov. 10 and of one from Mr. ——, under date of Nov. 11, in reference to the appointment of Dr. Crum as collector of the port of Charleston.

"In your letter you make certain specific charges against Dr. Crum tending to show his unfitness in several respects for the office sought. These charges are entitled to the utmost consideration from me, and I shall go over them carefully before taking any action. After making these charges you add as a further reason for opposition to him that he is a colored man, and after reciting the misdeeds that followed carpetbag rule and negro domination in South Carolina you say that 'we have sworn never again to submit to the rule of the African, and such an appointment as that of Dr. Crum to any such office forces us to protest unanimously against this insult to the white blood,' and you add that you understood me to say that I would never force a negro on such a community as yours. Mr. —— puts the objection of color first, saying, 'First, he is a colored man, and that of itself ought to bar him from the office.' In view of these last statements I think I ought to make clear to you why I am concerned and pained by your making them and what my attitude is as regards all such appointments. How any one could have gained the idea that I had said I would not appoint reputable and upright colored men to office when objection was made to them solely on account of their color I confess I am wholly unable to understand. At the time of my visit to Charleston last spring I had made, and since that time I have made, a number of such appointments from several states in which there is a considerable colored population. The great majority of my appointments in every state have been of white men. North and south alike it has been my endeavor to appoint only men of high character and good capacity, whether white or black. But it has been my consistent policy in every state where their numbers warranted it to recognize colored men of good repute and standing in making appointments to office.

"These appointments of colored men have in no state made more than a small proportion of the total number of appointments. I am unable to see how I can legitimately be asked to make an exception for South Carolina. In South Carolina to the four most important positions in the state I have appointed three men and continued in office a fourth, all of them white men, three of them originally Gold Democrats, two of them, as I am informed, the sons of Confederate soldiers. I have been informed by the citizens of Charleston whom I have met that these four men represent a high grade of public service.

"I do not intend to appoint any unfit man to office. So far as I legitimately can I shall always endeavor to pay regard to the wishes and feelings of the people of each locality, but I cannot consent to take the position that the door of hope, the door of opportunity, is to be shut upon any man, no matter how worthy, purely upon the grounds of race or color. Such an attitude would, according to my convictions, be fundamentally wrong.

"The question of 'negro domination' does not enter into the matter at all. It might as well be asserted that when I was governor of New York I sought to bring about negro domination in that state because I appointed two colored men of good character and standing to responsible positions, one of them to a position paying a salary twice as large as that paid in the office now under consideration, one of them as a director of the Buffalo exposition. The question raised by you and Mr. —— in the statements to which I refer is simply whether it is to be declared that under no circumstances shall any man of color, no matter how upright and honest, no matter how good a citizen, no matter how fair in his dealings with all his fellows, be permitted to hold any office under our government. I certainly cannot assume such an attitude, and you must permit me to say that in my view it is an attitude no man should assume, whether he looks at it from the standpoint of the true interest of the white man of the south or of the colored man of the south, not to speak of any other section of the Union.

"Without any regard as to what my decision may be on the merits of this particular applicant for this particular place I feel that I ought to let you know clearly my attitude on the far broader question raised by you and Mr. ——, an attitude from which I have not varied during my term of office."

FOR HANDSOME GOWNS.

Embroideries, Ribbon Work and Fagoting Are All Used.

Embroideries of every description are used on day gowns, but the raised ribbon work is not very popular. Scrolls, sprays and leaves cut from velvet are applied on thin materials, and of these black marguerites of velvet with centers of yellow beads are quite charming on pink and yellow gowns.

Lace is also cut in medallions and outlined with passementerie or a combination of jet and fancy stitching.

Colored velvet ribbons are much used, especially to run through lace or to form stripes between tucks or plaits.

EVENING GOWN.

The latter are connected with herringbone stitching, which has a pretty effect over the colored velvet. A great deal of ruching in silk and chiffon is used, and fringe is revived and attached to lace with a handsome effect.

An elaborate Parisian gown is here shown. The material is white crepe de chine inlet with Persian medallions. The lace is a delicate cream.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

SMART COSTUMES.

Braiding Is Being Revived—A Harmony In Gray.

Braiding is revived, and graduated lines of waved braid have a novel effect on a skirt. This method is repeated on the blouse and sleeves. Bunches of tassels, fringes and tags are much used, and those tiny buttons which have the effect of nail heads are still in vogue. Parisians are fond of tassels and fringes, and a smart model made for a recent wedding had the deep overskirt edged with a handsome gray fringe to match the faced cloth and headed by a border of Irish lace dyed to a soft ficelle tint.

The entire costume was a harmony in gray and ficelle lace, the gray shades varying in tone and the whole completed by touches of orchid pink and an exquisite stole and bag muff of chinchilla fur. The hat, quite flat and spreading, was of dark mouse colored velvet draped with old lace falling in ends at the back and fastened with a chou of silver spangled tulle in a paler gray and a big brush osprey in white under the left side, which was slightly raised. Inside, the projecting front folds of the pink velvet were caught down with two small glittering buckles.

The automobile coat in the illustration is of mastic cloth lined with fur and having fronts and revers of sable. The toque is of sable, with a lace crown.

Barber—What do you think of this soap?

Victim—Never tasted better.—Life.

HIS ONLY LOVE.

BY JOHN H. RAFTERY.

Dr. James Concannon Rexford was what you might call a "model man," and he knew it. He couldn't help but know it, because he had spent years of patient, self-denying effort to become so. He had a devoutly religious mind and a disciplined heart. He had never done anything frivolous or very sinful, never smoked tobacco, drank liquor or used the name of God in vain. He had practiced economy first from necessity, then for precautionary reasons and finally from habit. When he got his medical diploma and put out his shingle he realized that he must begin to mix with the world. He didn't care for women—particularly, but he learned to dance because that is an easy way "to mix," and he saw that mixing paid. He danced as he sawed a bone or bound a ligament—dutifully and with no aid from either his imagination or his heart. Some of his dancing companions became his patients, so it was a wise move.

When, by dint of incessant economy and hard work, his practice began to grow profitable, he was 35 and tired of boarding houses. He didn't have many friends, because, he explained to himself, friends are time wasters; they cost money, they lead one into shiftless ways. But he began to think it might add to his professional dignity, to his circle of acquaintances, to his personal comfort, if he were a married man. He began to "cast about" for a wife, much in the same way that he had "cast about" for a sound, city broke, handsome, gentle driving horse for his buggy. Having never given rein to whatever aptitude he had for lovemaking, he was a little awkward about it at first, but he was gratified to notice that there were plenty of "nice girls" always ready to "meet him half way." You see, besides being on the road to affluence and not wholly repulsive in appearance, Dr. Rexford was widely and well known of mothers, fathers, brothers and daughters as a "model man."

Having never made a mistake in any of the considerable affairs of life, Dr. Rexford was intensely determined to make no false matrimonial step. He "tried out" a dozen of the most feasible connubial possibilities, taking his time to the process and devoting his best mental energies and quite a sum of money to the business of uncovering and vivisecting the character, habits, temperaments, religious and domestic views, hopes, tendencies and ambitions of the several "candidates" for his marital favor. This, he knew by the books he had read and the sermons he had heard, was the proper manner to address the momentous question of matrimony. But he couldn't find a single woman who exactly measured up to his standard. Ginevra, who was mentally and spiritually O. K., had a catarrhal tendency; Lucy, a perfect physical specimen, was capricious and too fond of adulation; Jane had a penchant for religious heterodoxy that suggested future misunderstanding; Helen had everlastingly condemned herself with the admission that if she were married "her husband might go barefoot before she'd mend his sox!" Edith came very near touching the high mark of his approval, though even she showed occasional signs of having a mind of her own. And so it went. Poor Rexford began to think that the world did not contain the one, onliest one.

It was in this frame of mind that he started on his summer vacation. He was sitting on a bench in a little park at the edge of the small town of Brookhaven one evening, when a singularly beautiful young woman approached him and said:

"Would you be so kind as to direct me to the railway station?"

He rose to escort her, for he was a well-trained man, and was surprised at the frank look of admiration which she bent upon him.

"You are going with me? Oh, how kind it is of you!" And she took his arm with evident delight. He talked about the weather and other very proper subjects such as were best handled by men of his type, but was so impressed by her attention to his words that when they reached the station he gave her his card. She said:

"My name is Judith—Judith Homer—yes, Miss Judith," she laughed.

"I was afraid you were married," he answered, trying to thing of some gallant bit o persiflage.

"No, no, I have—that is, I'm afraid I haven't—"

"Met the right man?" he helped her out. He was wonderfully impressed by her girlish, dependent manner, and continued, surprised at his own speed, "Who knows, Judith?"

"Ah, sir," glancing at the card, "ah, James. May I call you James?"

The doctor pinched himself to find whether he was awake.

"I sometimes fear I may never find him, but if I did, if I were married?" She blinked tearfully at the dim station light.

"How would you treat your husband, Judith?" he asked with a revulsion of "horse sense."

"I would be his willing, yearning slave, sir!" she cried, with odd emotion. "You see I have yet the oriental idea of the woman's place, though I am an ardent Christian too. How would I treat him? I would hang upon his every syllable, I would toil for him, watch over him as a mother watches over her child; poverty could not dim the glory of my adoration; wealth could not dull the luster of my love for him. I—"

"Are you going to catch this train?" he interrupted, glancing at his watch and hoping that she would say no.

"Shall I? Shall I, James?" she whispered, coming closer to him, so that her sweet voice sounded in his ear above the shrill scream of the whistle.

"I would like to know more of you, Judith," he said. "Strange as it may seem, our brief acquaintance has convinced me that you may be the one woman in the world after my own heart."

(There was an unconscious joke in that last line, but the doctor didn't see it, because he was such a practical man, and, besides, he was excited.)

"I have never believed in love at first sight," he was saying, "but you look all right to me."

(That was horribly commonplace, but Rexford had not practice in such affairs).

"And something tells me that I could learn to love y—"

"Here she is," shouted a gruff voice behind them, and a husky man with two assistants came rudely forward and took her arms.

"Excuse the interruption," grinned the first, "she's one of my patients—escaped from the 'tractable ward this afternoon; glad you found her—yes, put her in the carriage good-bye."—Chicago Record-Herald.

BEFORE BUYING

STOCKS

Of Any Kind Look Into This Proposition.

THE STANDARD AMALGAMATED GOLD PLACER MINING CO.

with a capital stock of $1,000,000, divided into shares par value of $1 each, full paid and forever non-assessable, offer to the public for a limited time only these shares at 10c each.

This company owns seven placer claims on Trout Creek in the famous Gold Belt district of Montana, one of the best paying districts in the world today. Last season three men on the same creek, with nothing but gold pans, took out over $60,000. Judge for yourself then what the profits will amount to when this company finds putting in their machinery. We propose to sell a small amount of this stock for the purpose of buying more amalgamaters and hydraulic elevators, at th extremely low price of

10c per share

Don't delay, as this offer will not remain open long. Send right away for our illustrated prospectus, explaining exactly what we have done and propose to do.

Do You Wish To Borrow Money?

In order to accommodate all classes of borrowers (those who cannot borrow at a bank, as well as those who can), the Mutual Loan and Investment Company, of 118 Market street, Newark, N. J., has a department for handling quickly and confidentially loans ranging from $10 to $300 on furniture, pianos, storage receipts, etc.

The security is not removed from your possession or in any way disturbed. The honest, careful and conservative borrower will try and decide two points before borrowing. First, where he can get the best terms. Second, where he can get fair and square treatment.

This company is in a position to give you by far the most satisfactory terms ever offered by any concern or individual negotiating this class of loans.

We also take up loans from other companies and advance more money.

Kindly call and let us explain our simple and up-to-date methods. If not entirely convenient for you to call, please write and our representative will call and give you any desired information. Remember it costs nothing to make application. Loans promptly made in Elizabeth, Plainfield, Westfield, Roselle, Rahway, Perth Amboy and all suburban towns.

A CATTLE EPIDEMIC

Secretary Wilson Quarantines New England Stock.

FOOT AND MOUTH PLAGUE PREVAILS

Stringent Means Adopted by National and State Authorities to Stamp Out the Disease In the East.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Secretary of Agriculture Wilson has issued a sweeping order establishing a quarantine of cattle, sheep and swine in the New England states and prohibiting their exportation from Boston until further orders.

Investigations by the department of agriculture disclosed the fact that what is known as foot and mouth disease exists to an alarming extent in Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Vermont. The experts of the department—Dr. Mohler, Dr. Leonard Pearson of the University of Pennsylvania and Dr. James Law of Cornell—visited the infected districts and united in a recommendation that in order to prevent the spread of the disease a quarantine should immediately be established.

Secretary Wilson said that this is the most serious matter the department has had to handle for some time, but that all the resources of the department would be employed in stamping out the disease.

FIGHTING THE EPIDEMIC.

Brighton Stockyards at Boston Quarantined Because of Disease.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—The order of the secretary of agriculture placing an embargo on the shipment of cattle from the port of Boston and declaring in quarantine cattle and swine of Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut gives assistance to the Massachusetts cattle commission in its effort to stamp out the epidemic of foot and mouth disease in this state. At the same time the order threatens curtailment of the foreign commerce of Boston in that it is likely to temporarily cut off the shipment to Europe of an average of 2,500 head of cattle a week.

The order follows one issued by the state commissioners quarantining the Brighton stockyard, which is the clearing house for the Boston milk district and to which the foot and mouth disease has been traced.

Going back still further, the local authorities believe that the disease came originally from southern Rhode Island and was brought to Brighton by cows known as "strippers."

Since then the disease has broken out in herds of cows in a dozen towns in Middlesex and Worcester counties, from which sections the great bulk of the milk supply of Boston is received.

It is with the hope of preventing further infection, especially in the western part of the state, and of stamping out the disease where it now exists that the department of agriculture and the state authorities have joined hands.

New York Harbor Improvements.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—At the earnest solicitation of the representatives of the commercial interests at New York the army engineers are using their best endeavors to expedite the work on Ambrose channel, in New York harbor, as it is recognized that under existing conditions it will take at least ten years of unimpeded dredging to make the channel navigable for deep ocean going vessels. It is conceded that the contractor is meeting all the requirements of his contract and that he is employing all the possible available machinery. In order to assist in the prosecution of the work General Gillespie has recommended that one of the army transports be transformed into a seagoing hydraulic dredge for special use in dredging operations on this project.

Two Riot Victims Dead.

HAVANA, Nov. 28.—Two of the men who were wounded Wednesday evening while on a street car by shots fired from neighboring houses have since died. There have been no further disturbances. The mayor has ordered the police to arrest all the occupants of the houses from which the shots may have been fired at the street cars. The special judge in charge of the rioting cases has ordered the arrest of Arnauto Cervantes, editor of the Reconcentrado, on charges of sedition.

Further Destruction In St. Vincent.

KINGSTOWN, St. Vincent, Nov. 28.—Wednesday's eruption of La Soufriere occurred at the head of the dry river Rabacca, where huge quantities of volcanic deposits had blocked the water course since the eruptions last May in spite of the subsequent heavy rainfall. At 1 o'clock yesterday morning steaming torrent flowed from the base of La Soufriere and swept down the Rabacca, completing the destruction of the sugar works there. Sand at the same time fell on Georgetown.

Large Southern Shipments of Coal.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 28.—About 3,250,000 bushels of coal have been shipped to the southern markets by the Pittsburg river shippers. A swell in the Monongahela river made these shipments possible, but the rise was so slight that boats that were below will not be able to get to port until later.

Frau Krupp's Munificence.

ESSEN, Prussia, Nov. 28.—Frau Krupp has given $750,000 to establish a benefit fund for the workmen here in memory of her late husband.

A Thanksgiving Dinner.

Heavy eating is usually the first cause of indigestion. Repeated attacks inflame the mucous membranes lining the stomach, exposes the nerves of the stomach, producing a swelling after eating, heartburn, headache, sour risings and finally catarrh of the stomach. Kodol relieves the inflammation, protects the nerves and cures catarrh. Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia, all stomach troubles by cleansing and sweetening the glands of the stomach. L. W. WEDDING WAS A SURPRISE

MISS AGNES MINFORD QUIETLY MARRIED TO R. V. MARTINSEN.

Ceremony Took Place Wednesday Evening—Both Young People Were Well Known in Society.

Miss Agnes Armour Minford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Minford, of Watchung avenue, and Rudolph V. Martinsen, of New York, were quietly wedded Wednesday evening at the home of Rev. J. W. Richardson, of East Ninth street. The ceremony was performed by that clergyman. It was witnessed by the Misses Borsum, of Netherwood, intimate friends of the young woman.

While the young people have been intimate for some time, the news of their wedding was a surprise to their friends. The bride's parents knew of the match and, while they would have much preferred to give their daughter a suitable wedding in due time, they did not offer serious objection to the determination of the young people to wed at once. They had intended to have Rev. W. Montgomery Downey to perform the ceremony but he was not at home. After the marriage the young couple left for New York where they will take up their residence.

Miss Minford is well-known in local society circles where she has a host of friends. To them the news of her marriage was very unexpected. Mr. Martinsen resided in Washington Park a year ago and made many friends here. He has since taken up his residence in New York where he is secretary of an automobile manufacturing company.

BURGLARS AGAIN.

Operated at Dunellen Wednesday Night, and Secured But Very Little Booty.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Nov. 28—Burglars made another raid upon Dunellen Wednesday night but, as usual, departed without getting much booty. The houses entered were all on the New Market road and near together. They were A. F. Simpson, Stephen Brown, Mrs. Chas. Carpenter, E. A. Hayes, and Robert Bogardus.

The only place where anything was gotten was at Sampson's where a gold ring belonging to Mr. Sampson was taken. The thieves, however, made sort of an exchange, leaving a brand new spade with which they obtained entrance. When they went to go up stairs they came across the dog and Mr. Sampson thinks one of them was bitten. At Carpenter's they were frightened away as the inmates noticed a bright light on the lower floor and called, thinking it one of the family coming in late.

At the other places entrance was easily obtained but as money was evidently desired and none found nothing was disturbed. At several other residences traces were seen of the noctional visitors but they were evidently scared away without getting in.

FRIENDS GREETED HER.

Reception Given to Miss Bertha Annas, of Alfred University, '02.

A pleasant holiday affair was the reception given last evening by Dr. Frank S. Wells and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weeks at the home of Dr. Wells on Grant avenue. The event was given in honor of Miss Bertha Annas, a graduate of Alfred University, class of '02, and now teaching at Paterson, N. Y. Miss Annas has been spending the week with her friends in this city and last evening's reception was given so that all might have an opportunity of greeting Miss Annas.

The evening was pleasantly passed in a social way, a feature being the singing of Alfred University songs. Refreshments were served during the social hour. Among the out-of-town guests present were Dr. L. W. Potter and Rev. Eli F. Loofboro, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, of New York.

—The Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church will hold a Thanksgiving service this evening.

—All members of the Young Men's class are especially requested to be in attendance at a meeting of the Monroe Avenue church to be held in the Epworth House, Monday evening. Business of importance is to be transacted.

There is no improvement in the condition of Charles Whitall, of East Fifth street, and the physicians have given up hopes of his recovery.

The condition of J. A. Smith, of Central avenue, is not so favorable today. He has a return of the fever and his temperature was 103 this morning.

MANY GAVE THANKS AT LOCAL CHURCHES

Union Thanksgiving Services Were Held in This City Yesterday Morning.

HELD AT TWO CHURCHES

SERVICES AT FIRST BAPTIST AND CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES.

Services Were Preached by Rev. E. L. Earp and Rev. George B. Shaw—Other Clergymen Were Present to Assist.

The Union Thanksgiving service of all the churches on the north side of the railroad was held yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock in the First Baptist church. The attendance was encouraging and altogether the service was one of great help and profit to all. The special music was in charge of the regular church choir and aside from the anthems rendered, there were solo parts by Miss Luella C. Harris, soprano; Mrs. F. M. Ward, contralto; Geo. Smith, tenor, and Wm. Holmes, bass, while Mrs. Ward and Mr. Holmes sang a beautiful duet selection.

Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the church, conducted the responsive reading from the Psalms and offered an opening prayer. Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass read the Scripture selection while Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., offered prayer.

The sermon was delivered by Rev. Edward L. Earp, pastor of Grace M. E. church, and it was a strong Gospel discourse upon the topic of "The Altruism of Jesus." The speaker referred to the relation of the fortunate to the unfortunate and the obligation implied. He told how best the fortunate could serve those who have had the least advantages. He believed that it was in the quality and not quantity that discontent is fostered.

Continuing Mr. Earp referred to three special points to illustrate his text, namely "Selfishness," "Unselfishness," and "Reward." He believed that it is the duty of all Christians to have due regard for others and thus exemplify the ideal altruism represented in Christ. At the close of the sermon, the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Dr. Yerkes.

One of the largest attendance at any service given in keeping with the day, was the one at the Congreagtional church, in the morning. It was intended for all worshippers south of the New Jersey Central tracks and many denominations were represented.

Rev. George B. Shaw, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, was in charge, and delivered a convincing discourse on the appropriateness of offering thanks. He selected his text from Psalm cvii :2, "Let the redeemed of the Lord say so," and dwelt on the need of expressing gratitude for blessings and not by simple feeling. America's prosperity has been made manifest in many ways, he said, and it is the duty of every citizen to render thanks to the Father who has watched its progress. Prayer was offered by Rev. J. W. Richardson.

Music for the service was furnished by the regular church choir.

The church has been in the course of erection for almost a year and is now completed except for some minor parts which have been delayed on account of being shipped from the west to another part of the country.

At 3:30, the services will begin when Rev. John MacMurray will read the Scripture and Rev. J. W. Richardson will offer prayer. Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregation church, will preach the dedicatory sermon in English. After the sermon, Rev. O. G. Norseen, the pastor of the church, will read his report as chairman of the building committee after which he will offer the dedicatory prayer followed by a closing prayer by Rev. Edwin L. Earp, pastor of the Grace M. E. church.

In the evening the same programme will be carried out in the Swedish language when Rev. C. E. Peterson, of East Orange, will make the principal address. Rev. T. Englund, of Perth Amboy, will speak and read the Scripture. Rev. C. G. Ellstrom, of the Pilgrim church, Brooklyn, is expected to be present. Rev. O. G. Norseen will read his report again at the evening service.

The music will be sepecially fine at both the services as a special choir has been provided for the occasion and it will probably be the choir which will sing at the church regularly.

AN OPEN LETTER.

Consumers' League of New York Appeals to Christmas Shoppers.

To Christmas shoppers:

The season of Christmas shopping is approaching. "Cruelties in the form of overwork among children and women travesty the festival of rejoicing over the coming of the Holy Child."

It some cases horses are treated better than the employes. Last year a driver was compelled to work so many hours delivering good that it was 3 o'clock in the morning before he reached home; the horse had been changed once en route. A boy of sixteen after delivering packages until late at night, was so exhausted that he lay down in the wagon, pulled his his blanket over him and slept in the stable. He was found frozen to death New Year's morning.

The Consumers' League appeals to all to do their shopping soon and early in the day and not to insist that goods be delivered on the same day purchased. An amelioration of the hardships of the holiday season may thus be secured.

Mrs. D. H. Rowland,
Plainfield representative, Consumers' League of New Jersey.

Not in Accord.

In the article referring to the appointment of appraisers for the land interests represented by S. D. Drake, it was said that the appraisers objected to the merger of these companies into the Columbia Realty Company. It should have been that the applicants, who are stockholders, objected to the merger. It is understood that they were not in accord with the plans of merger, despite the fact that they voted for it.

Not Enough Evidence.

In the assault and battery case of the State against Patrick Nero Russio on the complaint of Fanny Zoppy, which was tried before Justice Huff on Wednesday, the defendant was discharged. FAREWELL TO THE PASTOR RECEPTION GIVEN TO REV. AND MRS. N. W. CADWELL AT WESTFIELD.

Congregation Presented Him With $250 in Gold—Regretted His Departure.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, Nov. 29—The farewell reception to Rev. and Mrs. N. W. Cadwell in the Presbyterian church, Tuesday evening, attracted a large company of friends, including a great many members of the church. The Sunday-school room of the church, where the reception was held, was attractively decorated for the occasion.

Besides those present from this place, the nearby towns were represented. Rev. Dr. George F. Greene, of Cranford, who is to be the moderator of the session after tomorrow, was present, as well as the local clergymen. Rev. A. B. Robinson was in charge of the programme which included a prayer by Dr. Greene, selections by a mixed quartette, recitations by Mrs. Floyd, a solo with violin obligato by Miss Reger and J. C. Ketcham, an address by Rev. Dr. Danforth.

After the rendition of the programme, Prof. Savitz, in a few well-chosen words, presented Mr. and Mrs. Cadwell with a minature dress case containing $350 in gold. The recipients were too much overcome to say anything for the time being, but finally Mr. Cadwell found himself and made a happy response, recounting the many kindnesses in the past. He thanked one and all in behalf of his wife and himself for the magnificent gift. In conclusion Mr. Cadwell stated that he had not yet decided just where he would locate.

Mrs. George H. Starr followed with a short address in which she expressed the appreciation of all for the noble, self-sacrificing labors of Mrs. Cadwell, and happy remarks were also made by Rev. Dr. Anderson. The rest of the evening was spent in social intercourse, during which refreshments were served. Before the guests departed each one inscribed his and her name in a book provided for that purpose. The book will be kept by the pastor and his wife.

READY FOR INTRUDER.

Residents of Greenbrook Road Are Determined to Catch Thief Who Has Visited Their Hen Coops.

People residing along Greenbrook road have been annoyed of late by the visits of chicken thieves in the neighborhood and they have resorted to all sorts of contrivances to catch the next visitor at the coops.

Monday night Bohrens, the bottler, had eight fouls stolen from his coops and last night he lost a dozen more. Today he has been rigging up a self discharging shot gun in the coop and the next man that comes near the coop will touch the spring and will be loaded with some grape shot. Several other people in this vicinity have complained of the visits of the chicken thieves.

Sankey heard this delightful soloist and, at the close of the meeting, secured her promise to devote her voice to the service of God.

HOPE FIVE WON AT BASKET BALL

Defeated Alis A. A. in Hope Y. M. A. Gymnasium by Score of 25 to 20.

SECOND LEAGUE GAME

Accurate Goal Throwing by Dilks With Fast Playing by All the Hope Men Gave Them a Lead in the First Half Which Could Not Be Overcome.

There was a decided surprise in store for the basket ball team of the Alis A. A. when it played its initial game in the Plainfield Amateur Basket Ball League against the Hope Y. M. A. in the latter's gymnasium last night. At home in their own gymnasium, the Hope boys played such a clever game that the crack visitors went down before them by a score of 25 to 20. An audience of enthusiasts filled the visitors' gallery and howled itself hoarse in the excitement.

From the very first, the Hope boys played with a confidence and aggressiveness which was lacking in their first game against the Y. M. C. A. Alis was put on the defensive. Only a few minutes of play served to demonstrate that the home players had improved their accuracy in goal throwing. In that line, the Alis boys were woefully weak. In the first five minutes of play, the store stood 5 to 1. Dilks had a backward throw for goal which was wonderfully accurate and which even a veteran like Walter L. Long had difficulty in blocking. Save for a pretty goal from the centre of the floor by Porter, Dilks did all the scoring from the field in the first half. While the Alis forwards had occasional opportunities to throw for goals, they were inaccurate. Mc Combe and Porter as guards, were both playing a fast game and managed to keep the ball away from their goal most of the time. The first half ended with the score 14 to 5 in favor of Hope.

Several changes were made in the Alis team in the second half, George Proctor Smith, one of the best known of the local players, going in. Some very pretty exhibitions of team play were given by Long, Smith and Moraller but the gymnasium was too small to make it very effective. Hope's fast game, combined with accurate work by its forwards, enabled that team to almost keep pace with the Alis boys. While Alis gained slightly in the second half, it was not enough to overcome the big lead secured in the first half.

With its trio of veteran players, it was generally supposed that Alis would have no difficulty in winning from Hope. But the Hope boys have been practicing hard and their superior physical condition helped them materially. Alis' new men felt the strain of the hard game while the older players found the gymnasium new and strange. Its smallness was somewhat condusive to rough play and, as a result, ten fouls were called on each side. Those who witnessed Hope's first game last Monday could not help but see the great improvement made by the Hope players. The guards, in particluar, tended strictly to business and covered their men. Many a promising throw was spoiled by the quick work.

Last night's game has given an added interest to the next league game which will be played in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Monday evening between the Y. M. C. A. and the Alis A. A.

The teams lined up as follows:

HOPE Y.M. A.		ALIS A. A.
Dilks	right forward	Robison
Whitley	left forward	Kieb, Long
Foster	centre	Chandor: Kieb
McCombe	right guard	Long, Smith
Porter	left guard	Moraller

Score—Hope Y. M. A., 25; Alis A. A., 20. Goals from the field—Dilks (6), Whitley (3), Porter, Robison (2), Long (4), Kieb, Smith. Goals on fouls—Whitley (3), McCombe (2) Kieb, Long, Smith (2). Fouls—Hope Y. M. A., 10; Alis A. A., 13. Referee—George Fuller. Umpires—S. B Joseph and Charles B. Morse Timekeepers—Fred Wharton and Harry Cuming. Scorer—Herbert Monroe.

SHOOTING IN CITY LIMITS

HUNTERS OVERRUN BACK YARDS IN SOUTHERN END OF CITY.

Indiscriminate Use of Shot Guns and Rifles Threaten Residents With Bodily Injury.

Residents of Union avenue in the southern section of the city are up in arms over the indiscriminate shooting which has been occurring in the nearby fields since the hunting season began. Although it is within the municipal limits men and boys roam about at will with shotguns and rifles sending missiles in all directions. Several times residents have had to order hunters out of their back yards, whither they had gone in pursuit of rabbits, and timid women are afraid to venture out of doors.

On Thanksgiving Day the violation of the city ordinance in regard to shooting was continuous and the sharp crack of rifles was incessant. A group of four hunters who were stamping about in the rear of the Murray place near Randolph road, sighted a rabbit and all discharged their weapons at once. The cotton tail was blown to pieces while grains of shot riddled picket fences and nearby barns. The matter has been brought to the attention of the police and future violations may result in arrests.

GIFT FOR LEAGUE.

Dunellen Epworth League Visited Visited by Plainfield Leagues—One Brought a Surprise.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Nov. 29—A sign of the good will which exists between the Epworth League societies, of the various Methodist churches in this vicinity, was shown in the local Methodist church, last evening, when three Plainfield leagues came here and furnished entertainment for an evening's enjoyment. The societies represented were from the First Methodist church, the Monroe Avenue church and the Grace M. E. church.

All the societies took part in a measure but the balance of the evening's programme fell upon the society of the First Methodist church. The entertainment took the form of tableaux in which various well known advertisements seen in magazines were portrayed. Many of the representatives were very funny and kept the large audience in a gale of laughter throughout the evening. Among the best were, the Force, Omega Oil, Wabash Railway and Quaker Oats advertisements. After the tableaux were concluded the society of the First Methodist church presented the sum of $100 to the church to help raise the church debt. The offering was unsolicited and shows the brotherly spirit existing between the two churches.

At the close of the evening refreshments were served, consisting of ice cream. The room where the entertainment were held was prettily decorated with greens and flowers.

WANTED TO WORK.

But Police Believe That Supposed Plumbers Were Members of Gang of Thieves.

Two young men, whom the local police believe to be part of a gang working this part of the State, attempted to gain entrance to a house on Richmond street near Front, yesterday morning, by representing themselves as tinners and plumbers. The woman of the house refused to allow them to start work as she was positive her husband had not ordered any work done. They finally left and her suspicions were confirmed when she informed her husband of the matter.

At a residence in Morristown, last week, two men gained admittance on the pretext that they were gas and electric wire inspectors. They departed with a $200 diamond ring and a $75 watch.

PYTHIAN KNIGHTS AT A DISTRICT MEETING

Grand Lodge Officers Present at Meeting Held in Perseverance Castle Hall.

REPORTS WERE HEARD

SHOWED PERSEVERANCE NEXT TO LARGEST LODGE IN THE STATE.

After the Business Session Was Over, Speeches and Musical Selections Were Given—Big Delegations Present.

Grand Lodge officers and members of the order of Knights of Pythias from many parts of the State were in this city, last evening, attending the meeting of district No. 14, which embraces Unity and Perseverance Lodges. It was called by District Deputy Jeremiah Van Winkle and was held in Perseverance Castle Hall. In addition to the out of town visitors, large delegations were present from the lodges of the district.

The Grand Lodge members who were present were Grand Chancellor P. Hall Parker, of Long Branch; Grand Vice Chancellor Colonel Shanley, of Jersey City; Grand Prelate George Laws, of Jersey City; Supreme Representative Walter Hayhurst, of Trenton; State Organizer Champion, of Atlantic Highlands. In the early part of the evening, these officers conferred the past chancellor rank upon seven applicants from the two lodges.

During the business session reports of the existing condition of the lodges in the district were read by Keepers of Records and Seals Charles McGinley, of Perseverance, and Frank Putnam, of Unity. The former organization was shown to be the second largest in point of membership in the State, having a total of 297. It has added thirty-nine within the past year. It is also exceptionally prosperous otherwise. Unity Lodge has been retarded in its growth by a combination of circumstances, chief of which was the total destruction of its paraphernalia in the Babcock building fire last March. While no increase in membership was reported its finances are exceedingly healthy and conditions point to speedy growth in every way. The only other item of business was the mentioning of Charles McGinley, of Perseverance, for appointment as the next district deputy.

In the course of proceedings, speeches were made by all the Grand Lodge officers, Chancellor Commander William N. Runyon, Vice Chancellor Charles M. Ulrich, Past Chancellors Stephen Higham and Charles McGinley, of Perseverance, District Deputy VanWinkle and Past Chancellor Horace J. Martin, of Unity. Vocal selections were given by William N. Runyon, Elmer D. Cutting and Thomas Muir and Harvey L. Patterson contributed piano solos.

The Grand Lodge officers and several invited guests were entertained at dinner, last evening, by District Deputy VanWinkle at his home on East Seventh street.

WHAT OTHERS SAY.

Clippings From Other Newspapers Which May be of Interest to Plainfield and Its Citizens.

The Hunterdon County Board of Freeholders, angered because the people of Flemington voted so heartily for its abolishment, has decided to hold its meetings in out-of-the-way places in the county where the sentiment in favor of a three-man commission was not so pronounced. When the members of the board recover their temper somewhat, they will not see so much fun in cutting off their noses to spite their faces. Like the prodigal son, they are likely to repent in the husk-fodder far country and return to the county seat for food and drink.—Newark News.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey follows quickly the example of the Pennsylvania. Mr. Besler, the manager, announces that the employes of this company "shall be treated as well as those of its neighbors, and where recent increases made by railroads in this territory make the average rate of wages higher than those paid by the Jersey Central, the wages of such classes of its employes will be equalized to meet the prevailing rates paid." Two things are very clearly shown by this announcement. First, the Central railroad's managers are in sympathy with their employes and are imbued with the same spirit of enterprise which has made other roads successful. Second, the day was when the Central couldn't pay old wages, let alone increased wages, but now, it is on a paying basis again and doing well. Health to the new management!—Elizabeth Journal.

The proposition for the erection of a new county out of Monmouth county is renewed, the new county to comprise the seacoast section, with Long Branch as it sseat. Monmouth had 82,057 population in 1900, and if the county should be divided equally as to its inhabitants, each half would be of less population than Atlantic, and each would have a representative in the State Senate.

To divide one of the smaller counties and give the population two Senators would be an aggravation of a constitutional wrong, and make it more difficult in the future to have that wrong undone. The small county majority in the Senate is now only one. Split Monmouth to make twenty-two counties and the majority will be two.

Against any and all propositions for the erection of new counties out of the smaller ones, the votes of Essex, Hudson, Passaic, Union and Camden will be arrayed in the Assembly. Essex, Hudson and Passaic, with either Union or Camden, have a majority vote in that body. The interests at Long Branch that have projected this latest idea of a new county may as well abandon it until Senatorial districts shall be established in New Jersey. Then the counties can divide themselves up as they please.—Newark Advertiser.

The numerous recounts which have been ordered in various parts of the State are so many arguments in favor of voting machines.

Recounts would be unnecessary if machines were in use. A photograph of the back of the machine would answer all questions of fact and the courts would take care of the law.

The recounts show many peculiarities in ballots which could not occur if ballots were abolished and there are strong suspicions of fraud which are not removed by a recount.

Besides the extra expense involved in the present system as compared with mechanical voting and the possibility of fraud connected with paper ballots there are large number disfranchised every year by rejected ballots. The average number of ballots rejected in this State has been 2,500, and it seems probable that this number was exceeded in the last election when there were so many matters submitted by referendum.

After the official canvass of the State is completed and the record published by the Secretary of State, it should be marked as an exhibit in the case of the people's appeal to the Legislature for voting machines.—Jersey City Journal.

TRADE CONDITIONS.

Great Scarcity of Pig Iron—Wheat and Corn Prices Decline.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Weather conditions have provided the only important developments of the past week in the business world. Excessive rains in some sections, notably in the southwest, facilitated distribution of heavy footwear, overshoes and kindred lines, while seasonably low temperature at other points increased the movement of winter wearing apparel. These influences, together with a large Thanksgiving trade in food products, stimulated retail dealings very materially.

Inquiries for pig iron become more urgent as the scarcity grows more acute. Furnaces are added to the idle list when there is full occupation for every plant in the country, but the fuel shortage is not perceptibly improved. Coke commands high premiums, according to the needs of consumers, and iron is similarly held at an abnormal position by the insufficient supply. Even foreign pig iron has not arrived at specified dates, while new orders have been placed abroad covering distant deliveries. It is fully apparent that domestic needs will continue to exceed available supplies for many months to come.

Quotations of the great staples have tended downward on the whole, without any severe loss except in the case of corn.

The advance in cotton culminated on Monday with news of floods and frost in various parts of the south. Subsequently there was profit taking, accelerated by an authoritative estimate that the yield would be 11,000,000 bales.

Failures for the week numbered 213 in the United States against 182 last year and 16 in Canada compared with 25 a year ago.

STATUS OF MRS. ASHTON.

Pensioner the Widow of Three Veterans and Wife of a Fourth.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Commissioner of Pensions Ware recently concluded an investigation made to determine the pensionable status of Mrs. Ashton of New Albany, Ind., who is the widow of three Union veterans and the wife of a fourth, and has decided to await the outcome of Mrs. Ashton's most recent matrimonial venture before taking any action.

Upon the death of her first husband Mrs. Ashton applied for a pension and got it. When she married the second time, the pension stopped, but upon the death of her second husband she secured two pension allowances from the bureau. Then she married another veteran, and both pensions ceased. Upon the death of the third husband Mrs. Ashton promptly applied for three pensions, which staggered the officials of the bureau. While the case was under consideration Mrs. Ashton grew tired of a life of single blessedness and again selected a Union veteran for a life partner. He is still alive, and the question of how many pensions Mrs. Ashton is entitled to will await further developments.

Cattle Question Alarms England.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The exclusion of American cattle has caused a feeling almost amounting to consternation in the shipping and meat trades. Fears are expressed that the interdiction may be extended to imports from other United States ports, which would result in a great rise in the price of meat, as only a few steamers have large refrigeration space for dead meat. The board of agriculture is exercising the utmost precautions. The steamer Sachem, which arrived in the Mersey from Boston with a cargo of cattle and sheep, was not allowed to discharge. The animals were all scrutinized by experts, and no disease was found among them, but they will all be re-examined after an interval of forty-eight hours.

Secretary Root Returns.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Secretary Root has returned to Washington from New York, but owing to the serious condition of his father-in-law he is not able to attend the West Point-Annapolis football game at Philadelphia today. He had invited a party of forty ladies and gentlemen to be his guests on that occasion. Assistant Secretary Sanger will act as host in his stead.

Another Football Tragedy.

WEST CHESTER, Pa., Nov. 29.—Charles Carr, colored, twenty-one years of age, of Philadelphia is dead at the Chester county hospital from injuries received during a football game. Carr's neck was injured in a mass play, and he was rendered unconscious.

John Dillon Has Recovered.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—John Dillon, the Irish parliamentary leader, has practically recovered from his illness. The authorities at Mercy hospital, where he has been under treatment, said that he probably will leave there tomorrow.

Football Player Dead.

MARSHALL, Mo., Nov. 29.—Bunce Quarles of Boonville, a Kemper college student who was injured here two weeks ago in a football game, has died from his injuries. His neck was dislocated.

CONDENSED DISPATCHES.

The Michigan supreme court has declared the state inheritance tax law unconstitutional.

A St. Louis flier on the Big Four road was wrecked near Avon, Ind. Many persons were injured.

The honorary degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon Professor Adolf Lorenz, the noted Vienna physician, by the Northwestern university, Chicago.

HELD IN QUAKER CITY

Kelly, Former Speaker of St. Louis House, Captured.

HAD JUST LANDED FROM EUROPE.

Man Who Suddenly Disappeared When Bribery Case Was Being Probed Found After Many Months.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—After eluding arrest for several months Charles F. Kelly, the former speaker of the St. Louis house of delegates, who is wanted in the western city in connection with the bribery cases unearthed there some time ago, has been arrested in this city.

Kelly arrived in New York on the steamer Celtic from Liverpool and had just stepped from the western express in the Broad street station of the Pennsylvania railroad here when he was taken into custody by Detective James Tate, Sr., of the detective bureau of this city. He admitted his identity and is now locked up in the central police station. He will be given a hearing this morning by Magistrate Kochersperger and will be held to await requisition papers from the state of Missouri. Kelly was crestfallen when he reached the police station. In an interview he said:

"I was on my way back to St. Louis and meant to announce my arrival there Monday and give myself up to answer whatever charges have been laid against me. I had been absent in Europe for several months and spent most of my time in Ireland. On my arrival in New York yesterday morning I received word that my eleven-year-old boy had died in St. Louis. As soon as I stepped from the steamer it was suggested to me by an old acquaintance that I come to Philadelphia for a few days. I came here, and now I find myself under arrest. That's all there is to it."

The accused man was dressed in a dark blue suit. He carried considerable baggage, and the labels on it indicated that he had been in Naples, Paris, London, Berlin, Dublin and Killarney.

Kelly a Much Wanted Man.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 29.—Charles F. Kelly, former speaker of the city council, known as the house of delegates, was the one most wanted of all the members of the coterie known as the "combine," indicted on charges of bribery in connection with the passage of the municipal lighting bill. Kelly was wanted because he was charged with handling the $47,500 bribe money which, according to evidence, had been distributed among the nineteen members of the "combine." It was believed that Kelly could tell where this money came from. He was indicted on Sept. 5. He was at the four courts when the indictment was returned against him. A deputy sheriff told him he was wanted. Kelly asked permission to go to the council chamber to attend to an important matter, saying, "If you need me before I get back, telephone me at the house of delegates." That was the last time he was seen by any officers of the law until his arrest in Philadelphia. A reward of $800 from the state had been offered for Kelly's arrest.

Schenectady Citizens Organize.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 29.—As an outcome of the recent boycott against the Schenectady Railway company the citizens' committee, which was first formed while the boycott was on, has taken definite shape in an organization composed of the leading business and professional men. A clause of the constitution says: "Its fundamental doctrine shall be freedom, political, social and industrial. It shall stand for law and for an orderly respect for law. It shall lend all proper aid and support to sufferers from lawlessness of whatever nature."

Gray's Inn Burned.

JACKSON, N. H., Nov. 29.—Gray's inn, one of the best known summer hotels in the White mountains, was totally burned last night, together with Woodbury hall and all outbuildings, including two cottages and the casino. The total loss will be $175,000, with an insurance of about $60,000. The property was owned by Charles W. Gray, who, with his family, was living at the hotel during the winter. The fire was due to a defective light wire. The hotel had accommodations for about 250 guests.

A Disastrous Fire.

RAT PORTAGE, Ont., Nov. 29.—A spark blown into a pile of cedar started a disastrous conflagration in the Rat Portage Lumber company's yards at Norman, Ont. Twenty-five million feet of lumber has been burned, and Lemay's shipyards, six steamboats, two barges and eleven houses have so far been destroyed. Desperate attempts are being made to prevent the flames reaching the resident portion of the town.

Reward Offered For Murder.

GENEVA, N. Y., Nov. 29.—Jacob Glick, the proprietor of a variety store, has received a letter from Seneca Falls asking him to find a person who would murder F. G. Miller, a real estate agent of Seneca Falls. The letter contained a ten dollar bill "for expenses" and said $1,000 would be paid to the person who did the job. The case is being investigated.

She Remembered Jefferson.

NEWTON, Kan., Nov. 29.—Kate Vance, a colored woman of this city, died here last night, aged 123 years. She had a daughter ninety years of age, and her husband died at the age of 105. She claimed to have remembered with distinctness Jefferson's administration and the war of 1812.

NO TREATY NEEDED?

Purchase of Panama Title Considered Sufficient.

THE VIEWS OF SENATOR CULLOM.

Head of Senate Foreign Relations Committee Thinks We May Proceed With Canal Without Waiting For Colombia.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Senator Cullom, chairman of the senate committee on foreign relations, inclines to the belief that it is unnecessary for the United States to make a treaty with Colombia in order to acquire the right to build a canal across the isthmus of Panama. Mr. Cullom will not make a positive statement to this effect, but it is known that he may take this position positively and publicly in the near future.

Senator Cullom called on the president to talk about the isthmian canal question. He inquired if steps were not to be taken soon to appoint the permanent canal commission, and the president told him that the consideration of this subject at present would, in his opinion, be premature. He wishes to consider the Colombian situation a little further before deciding upon a line of action looking to the appointment of the commission and the actual construction of the waterway.

The theory held by Senator Cullom and others who believe that it is unnecessary to negotiate a treaty with the Colombian government is based on the belief that the United States will acquire all the necessary rights and privileges for building the canal when it hands over to the new Panama Canal company of France the $40,000,000 in payment for the title which Attorney General Knox recently declared valid.

The attorney general will answer no question about the proposition that a treaty with Colombia is unnecessary, and the state department is likewise silent on the subject. The belief is widespread, however, that the United States government cannot be balked in its effort to construct the isthmian canal over the Panama route by any obstacle which the government of Colombia may seek to put in the way.

Prison Death Rate Lowered.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 29.—In his annual report, now being prepared for presentation to the legislature, Superintendent of Prisons C. V. Collins will report surprising results of the system of care for consumptive patients which he inaugurated during the five years of his administration. As compared with the five years next preceding Mr. Collins' assumption of his office there has been a decrease of 65 per cent in the annual death rate in the prisons and a decrease of 71 per cent in the number of deaths due to consumption. This has been brought about by the transfer where possible of all prisoners suffering from consumption to Dannemora, where they were subjected to a special course of treatment by Dr. Ransome, resident physician of the prison and an expert on pulmonary diseases.

Pensions For Employees.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 29.—Rules and regulations for a pension system which will go into effect Jan. 1, 1903, have been completed by officials of the Union Pacific Railroad company by which its old employees will be retired on pensions. The details of the system will not be made public until later, but it is officially stated that the details of perfecting the system have been worked out and the regulations printed. It is also stated that it will involve the annual distribution of more than $300,000 and is intended to cultivate a closer relation between the railroad and its employees.

Colombia Invaders Beaten.

CARACAS, Venezuela, Nov. 29.—The Colombian invaders under Generals Garbiras and Espiritu Morales, after several defeats, were obliged to recross the frontier Nov. 25. They left numerous prisoners in the hands of the Venezuelan troops, among them Chief of Staff Briceno, who was abandoned in a wounded condition, and a quantity of ammunition. The revolutionary general Matos is still lying sick at Willemstad, Curacao.

Stabbed Six Times.

NYACK, N. Y., Nov. 29.—John McElree, a well known resident of Suffern, was murderously assaulted on a quiet street of that village. He is now in the Suffern hospital in a critical condition, unable to tell who committed the assault. He was stabbed six times with some sharp instrument in the jaw, back, head, hip and sides. McElree was found by the roadside by an officer, who arrested three Italians on suspicion.

Carlisle Indians See the President.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—President Roosevelt received the members of the Carlisle Indian school football team, who defeated the Georgetown university team Thursday. The Indians were introduced individually, and the president had a pleasant word for each, asking him about his tribe or some famous Indian chief.

Deadly Duel Over a Waitress.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 29.—At Armourdale, Kan., near here, Ernest Damns and Charles W. Tucker, packing house employees, fought a pistol duel over Mabel Randall, a waitress. Damns was mortally wounded, but before he died he shot Tucker twice, fatally wounding him. Tucker is still alive.

Weather Probabilities.

Rain and warmer; diminishing northwest winds.

KILLED IN SAMAR.

Constabulary Inspector Hendryx Dispatched by Ladrones.

MANILA, Nov. 29.—Constabulary Inspector Hendryx, who has been stationed in Samar island, was killed last Tuesday by a band of ladrones. The reports regarding his death are meager and indicate that Hendryx was attacked by a superior force of ladrones. His detachment of constabulary was routed, and Hendryx, with one soldier, was surrounded and killed.

The sultan of Bacolod, after professing friendship for America, has written a letter to Captain Pershing, at Camp Vicars, in which he calls Americans "hogs who eat hogs" and challenges them to fight. It is probable that Captain Pershing will be ordered to take a column to Bacolod. The military men, however, doubt whether the sultan will really fight.

Silver is being sold commercially here at 270, ten points below the official rate. Unless the market rallies the government will be forced to change the official rate to meet the market rate. Every decline in the price of silver increases the seriousness of the business situation in these islands.

Governor Taft and Archbishop Guidi have commenced the negotiations for the settlement of the pending questions between the church and the state and have agreed to hold at least three sessions weekly until a conclusion has been reached. Governor Taft will give a dinner in honor of Mgr. Guidi next Monday.

CROKER DISMISSED.

New York's Fire Chief Found Guilty on Five Charges.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Fire Chief Edward F. Croker was last evening ordered dismissed from the fire department by Commissioner Thomas Sturgis, the order of dismissal to take effect Monday morning at 8 o'clock.

Chief Croker was found guilty by the fire commissioner on five of the seven charges filed against him.

Simultaneously with the announcement of the commissioner that he had decided to dismiss Chief Croker a statement was given out by Mayor Low in which the mayor upheld the commissioner's finding, saying, "No one can read the findings of the commissioner with an open mind without appreciating both that he has tried to bring a candid judgment to his task and also that some of the charges upon which he finds the chief guilty are of very serious moment."

Chief Croker received the news at the office of his counsel, John J. Delaney, at 27 William street. When asked for a statement Mr. Delaney announced that the chief would have nothing to say and that he himself would not talk until he had read the decision.

Commissioner Sturgis' decision is a very voluminous one, going into each charge in great detail.

Bannockburn's Crew May Be Safe.

MONTREAL, Nov. 29.—News from various sources received here regarding the missing steamer Bannockburn has inspired the hope that her crew of twenty men may be safe ashore somewhere on the mainland north of Michipicoten island. While some doubt still exists, the company officials are confident that the crew escaped, although the Bannockburn lies a wreck on the rocky north shore of Lake Superior.

Hudson Navigation Company.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 29.—The Hudson Navigation company, capital $4,000,000, has been incorporated here to operate a steamship line on the Hudson river. The incorporators are Theodore L. Hermann of New York, William C. Taylor of Brooklyn and Charles N. King of Jersey City.

HAITI'S TROUBLES.

General Nord May Bring on a Civil War.

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti, Nov. 29.—General Alexis Nord, who was war minister of the provisional government and who is at St. Marc with about 8,000 to 10,000 men from Gonaives, has sent an ultimatum to the government here demanding the invalidation of the election of the deputies who are members of the party headed by M. Firmin, the self exiled leader of the recent rebellion.

If the chamber refuses to cancel the election of these deputies, the outbreak of another civil war is probable. The general opinion is that the chamber will reject the general's demand.

On General Nord's entry into St. Marc he was received by the army and the population with cries of "Long live General Nord, president of Haiti!"

His candidacy for the presidency is gaining ground here. Several attempts to hold a meeting of the chamber have failed, it being impossible to obtain a quorum. The followers of Callisthene Fouchard, formerly minister of finance and now an aspirant for the presidency, and of Deetjen Senequist, president of the chamber, are divided and appear to be powerless to resist General Nord.

TWO MILLIONS GIVEN.

That Is the Amount Contributed In Aid of Strikers.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 29.—It was officially announced at the national headquarters of the mine workers that when the miners meet in national convention here in January to prepare a new wage scale Secretary Wilson will report that the amount of money given by them for the strike was more than $2,000,000.

The convention here last January changed the constitution of the organization so that the officers are elected by the referendum plan. The locals make the nominations, and every member has a vote on the candidates.

A list of the nominations has been received, but Secretary Wilson was not prepared to give it out. It is not likely that President Mitchell, Secretary Wilson or Vice President Lewis will have any serious opposition, although it has been rumored for some time that W. D. Ryan, secretary of the Illinois miners, and J. P. Reese, president of the Iowa miners, might be brought out for Mr. Lewis' place.

It was also officially announced that the assessment of miners for the strike ceased Nov. 15.

TUKISH BARBARITY.

Turkish Treatment of Macedonian Peasants Reported.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Mail advices received here from Constantinople say:

"In spite of all official denials the porte is adopting barbarous methods in crushing the Macedonian peasants. The winter has set in, and the danger from revolutionary bands is over, yet the Turkish authorities seem to think the time has come to act. In the face of promises of free pardon to those who returned to their homes Christian villagers have been shockingly tortured to make them betray alleged concealed depots of arms or give information regarding the working of the Macedonian committees.

"The bastinado has been frequently employed until the victims were crippled for life, their feet being beaten to a pulp by Turkish soldiers. Peasants were also hung by their heels to the ceiling, and boiling hot eggs were put in their armpits. Even priests were not spared, while the troops openly plunder the peasants, who are being driven to despair."

Worldwide Reciprocity.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Reciprocity primarily with Cuba and Canada and eventually with the whole civilized world is the result aimed at by the National Nonpartisan Reciprocity league, which has sent out more than a thousand invitations to its first annual convention, to be held in Detroit Dec. 10 and 11. Governors of all the north and midwestern states are to be asked to take part in the convention, as are also the Canadian cabinet and many members of the Canadian parliament. Boards of trade and similar organizations all over the middle west are expected to be represented, and the plans of the reciprocity league, which at first contemplated a small gathering, have grown greatly.

To Shut Out Cornell.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—In view of the possibility that the stewards of the Henley regatta will at their meeting on Dec. 12 propose a new rule aiming to exclude from participation in the contests crews which have been coached by professionals within a month of the opening of the regatta it is understood that friends of Cornell university here will advise Cornell that its entry is not wanted. It is said here that Cornell is likely to abide by that advice and not enter a crew.

Riots In Barcelona Continue.

BARCELONA, Nov. 29.—The riots which have resulted from the publication of decrees restricting the use of the Catalan language continue here. The gendarmes in endeavoring to preserve order received volleys of stones and were at first compelled to retire, but eventually they forced their way into the university and arrested a number of students who were the leading spirits in the disorder.

Anniversary of Ohio's Constitution.

CHILLICOTHE, O., Nov. 29.—The observance of the hundredth anniversary of the adoption of the constitution of Ohio took place here today. The celebration began in the morning with the unveiling of a bronze memorial tablet. A meeting later was addressed by Hon. Daniel J. Ryan on "The First Constitution."

TAMAYO IS DROPPED

Palma Does Not Ask Secretary to Reconsider.

A BLOW TO CUBAN NATIONALISTS.

Resignation Resulting From Differences Regarding Recent Strike Accepted by Cabinet—President Between Two Fires.

HAVANA, Nov. 29.—At a special meeting of the cabinet presided over by President Palma it was unanimously decided to accept the resignation of Secretary of Government Tamayo, Secretary of Instruction Yero assuming the duties of the vacant post until a new secretary has been appointed. The fact that President Palma did not request Tamayo to reconsider his resignation was not expected by the Nationalist party, which has hitherto been in the front of Cuban politics.

The Republicans are jubilant at the practical removal of the president of the Nationalist party from the most important cabinet position and claim that this step means the breaking up of the party.

President Palma was confronted with difficulty whatever course he might take. It is understood that Secretary of State Zaldo had taken the removal of Tamayo as a personal matter since the morning of the rioting, when he accused Tamayo of mixing up in politics.

The two men had hot words over the strike in the presence of President Palma, and it was then that Tamayo resigned his portfolio. Secretary Zaldo said that unless President Palma accepted Tamayo's resignation he would resign himself and intimated that Secretary of Finance Montes and Secretary of Public Works Diaz would go out with him.

President Palma and late Secretary Tamayo have always been close friends, and it is rumored that the president will provide a position for him in connection with the work of sanitation. Secretary Zaldo is the most likely candidate for Tamayo's post, and it is understood that he wants it. It is possible that the positions of secretary of state and secretary of government will be combined, as was previously the case, though it is probable that nothing will be done until after the conclusion of the reciprocity treaty negotiations now being carried on by Secretary Zaldo and General Tasker Bliss.

Dr. Joseph Parker Dead.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Dr. Joseph Parker, minister of the City temple, who had been seriously ill for some time past, is dead. For over thirty-two years Dr. Parker ministered to the congregation of the City temple. Few pulpit orators were more eloquent, more outspoken or more fearless than he. Neither rank nor money had any influence with him, and if he thought a prominent man was following a wrong course of conduct he would denounce him bitterly. Among those so denounced by him were King Edward and the sultan of Turkey.

Large Shipment of Cotton.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 29.—The steamship City of Memphis of the Ocean Steamship company has sailed for Boston with 10,222 bales of cotton and 786 tons of pig iron. This is the record coastwise cargo from this port. The cotton is worth in round figures $300,000. In number of bales larger cargoes of cotton have been shipped to foreign ports, but this is the largest and most valuable domestic shipment of cotton that ever left the port.

Three Boys Killed While Hunting.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 29.—Harold H. Merrick, aged fourteen, a high school student of this city, accidentally shot and killed himself while hunting near Wolcott, Kan. James Gist, aged fourteen, was shot and killed at Oxford, Kan., by his brother while they were hunting. The fourteen-year-old son of H. N. Boyd of Belleville, Kan., was killed while hunting, his gun being discharged while he was pulling it through a fence.

A Place For Youngs.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The president has decided to appoint W. J. Youngs of Oyster Bay United States district attorney for the eastern district of New York to succeed George H. Pettit, whose term expires Dec. 20. The president during the day made his decision known to Senator Platt. The selection of Mr. Youngs will be in the nature of a personal appointment.

American Corsets Lead.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—"American corsets rule this market," says United States Consul Mahing, reporting to the state department from Nottingham, England, on popular American wares in England. He says so popular have the American styles become that the French makers are compelled to get their patterns from the United States.

Usual Uproar In the Reichstag.

BERLIN, Nov. 29. — The stormy scenes which were enacted Thursday were renewed in the reichstag yesterday, and at one point in the proceedings the uproar reached such a pitch that Vice President Buesing, who was in the chair, had to resort to a suspension of the sitting, a measure without precedent in the reichstag.

A GOOD WORK.

Among the many things which the Y. M. C. A. has done for young men of this city, there is probably nothing which really carried more genuine happiness to twenty stalwart young hearts than the Thanksgiving dinner which was given to young men who were comparative strangers here and were unable to return to their homes to spend the holiday. A Thanksgiving Day in a strange city is an experience by no means pleasant to the young man who is accustomed to participate in the usual family gathering on that day. This rather novel affair, given by the Y. M. C. A., was therefore decidedly timely and along the ideal lines laid down for an association aiming to better the conditions of the young men.

This dinner was made possible by the generosity of certain friends of the association. If they could have all been present and seen how effectively the dinner did what it was intended to do, take the place of the family feast and brighten the day for the young men far away from home, they would have declared the money well spent. It was something which it is to be hoped will continue in future years. To Boys' Secretary Kenneth Roblie is due the credit for suggesting it.

Although Plainfield is freer of temptations to young men than many cities, the Y. M. C. A. has its place here and the success with which it has been met shows that there is need of it. It has done much to give the young men of the city many advantages. Particularly does it appeal to the young man whose home is elsewhere and who is forced to look outside of his boarding place for amusement and instruction. That dinner Thursday evening was a new attempt to reach this element. Its success should lead the old supporters of the association to stand by it and should encourage others to contribute toward its support. It is only by voluntary contributions that the Y. M. C. A. is enabled to continue its work and every additional contribution will permit it to enlarge its field of operations.

While the election of Borough Assessor Elston M. French, a Democrat, in such a Republican stronghold at North Plainfield, gave undisputable evidence of his personal popularity, the hearing before the Borough Commissioners of Appeal, Tuesday afternoon demonstrated how efficient a public official he is. Only fifteen objectors appeared before the commissioners to protest against the assessments as fixed by Mr. French. When the charges made by some of the anti-annexationists that Mr. French was doctoring the assessments to advance the cause of the Greater Plainfield project are remembered, this significant showing tells the truth better than any words can. It must be very gratifying to both Mr. French and his friends to know that even in such troublous times in the borough as these that so little fault can be found with his work as a public official.

The Oracle will soon be heard from. Such is the title of the monthly publication which the pupils of the City High School are planning. It promises to be quite a clever little newspaper. This season seems to be a flourishing one for school papers. The Lealonian, published by the boys of Leal's School, already appears on a substantial foundation while the monthly paper of the North Plainfield High School makes it appearance regularly.

This afternoon will see the close of the local golf season. Competitions at the Park Golf Club closed Election Day but they have been continued at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club until now. While there will still be opportunity for play at both clubs, the real season ends today and most of the local players will stow away their clubs for the winter if they have not already done so.

What a Thanksgiving this would have been for all concerned if only Plainfield and North Plainfield had been united. Although Somerville was properly thankful when the annexation project was defeated, it is reasonable to believe that much of that thankfulness has ceased to exist since Somerset elected two Democratic candidates.

According to the official count, Congressman Fowler's plurality in the Fifth district was 1,149. It will be remembered that The Daily Press predicted Mr. Fowler's election but by a smaller plurality. Morris county was the uncertain quality and where a plurality of not over 500 was generally expected it turned out to be over 1,000.

Thanksgiving Day is usually looked upon as the windup of the football season but the local teams are not quite content to bring it to an end just yet. There are several games which they want to play before the gridiron is abandoned and they have been scheduled for this and next Saturday afternoons.

That proposed ordinance which will change the name of LaGrande avenue to East Seventh street will probably come before the Common Council for final action Monday night. Although all the residents of that thoroughfare do not favor the change, it does not seem likely that there will be active opposition.

It is very evident that Cuba is fast getting Americanized. It has street car strikes now and the police have to be called on to assist in resuming traffice. Where the American policeman are usually content to use clubs, the Cubans took advantage of their revolvers with serious results.

Food Hungered For

Food is sometimes indigestible though appetizing in appearance; and it is sometimes digestible when it may not be attractive to the sight or taste.

To place before the household or the guest food that is always both appetite-stimulating and digestible, that is the trick of the expert cook. That is the perfect food—the Food Hungered For.

Royal Baking Powder is a specific aid to this end. The flavor from a hot Royal Baking Powder biscuit whets the appetite and the morsel itself is delicious to the taste and digestible and nutritious. Royal Baking Powder renders hot-breads wholesome. Food raised with Royal "tempts the appetite," and is also superlatively wholesome.

Short Sketches That Are Not Always News, But Just as Interesting.

"What the employer has to say regarding profit-sharing," is the subject of a highly interesting and well-written article in the last issue of "The World's Work." It is from the pen of Fullerton Waldo, of this city.

In some of the old maps and archives on file with the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, New Jersey is designated as "Jerzy" and also "Jerze." The name was given to the territory originally in honor of Sir George Carteret, whose ancestors came from the island of Jersey. It is interesting to note the origin of some of the names of the towns and localities in the State. Long Branch village was given its name from a long branch of Shrewsbury Inlet in the vicinity. Squan Beach and Manasquan Inlet are named from the Indians found at one time upon the east coast. Many of the tribes names ended in "squan." "Manas" signifies elbow or indentation in the coast line, such as a harbor makes. Barne Gat is a corruption of the old Dutch appellation. The Dutch in 1623 named this inlet Het Brandende Gat (the Gat of the breakers). It alludes to the breaking and movement of the waves of the sea. The Dutch gave Egg Island. The English translated the Dutch name into Egg Harbor and gave the name also still to another inlet, separating both by the addition of "Great Egg Harbor" and "Little Egg Harbor." Absecom Inlet had its name introduced by the settlers of the interior of New Jersey, where a little river existed with the Indian name, "Absecombe River." Hereford Inlet received its name in comparatively recent years. The old Dutch name was "Peere Gat." The English first translated it to "Bear Gut," or "Bear Hoel." These names are on the maps of the eighteenth century.

REED RULES DOOMED

Congressmen Are Tired of Being Bossed by the Speaker.

Col. Henderson's Successor Will Be Simply a Presiding Officer and Not the Autocrat of Congress.

[Special Washington Letter.]

"AND now, in accordance with the constitutional duty devolved upon me, I declare this house adjourned without day."

Exactly at noon on March 4, 1903, those words will be pronounced by Speaker Henderson, the heavy gavel will resound and the Fifty-seventh congress will come to a close. Speaker Henderson, who retires to private life, will be the last presiding officer of the national house of representatives who shall wield imperial powers over his colleagues.

The rules of the house of representatives, which have been known as the Reed rules, ever since they were promulgated in December, 1899, have given autocratic power to the speaker. Time and again efforts have been made to change those rules, but to no purpose. The republicans have always pointed with pride to the great advance made in national legislation while Reed was speaker; and both parties have agreed that Reed was right in declaring that "a visible quorum" was the constitutional quorum which could proceed "to do business."

But a majority of the house of representatives has been in favor of changing the rules, in some particulars, for at least six years. Congressman Hepburn, of Iowa, has been the leader in the attack upon the Reed rules, and he will continue to be the leader in the fight. It is well known that Col. Hepburn had a majority of the republicans in caucus assembled, in December, 1899, and he could have then forced important changes in the rules, but he forbore. His colleague and friend, Col. Henderson, had just been selected for the speakership, and it would have seemed exceedingly ungracious in a member from his own state to have insisted on curtailing his powers before he was inducted into his high office. If any other than Col. Henderson had been selected for the speakership in December, 1899, the rules would have been surely changed.

There is a great deal of speculation already concerning the speakership of the next congress, but one thing may as well be regarded as settled, and that is, no matter who secures the prize of that exalted position, he will be simply a presiding officer, as the constitution intended him to be, and not a ruler of representatives selected by sovereign constituencies precisely as he was himself selected. The rules will be carefully amended, the main point to be observed being that each representative shall really be a representative — one whose voice and vote shall command attention and respect.

Speaker Reed was autocratic. Speaker Henderson has not been. No more conservative speaker ever occupied the chair than Mr. Crisp, of Georgia, for he was not autocratic. There is no complaint concerning the man who may have been, or who may be, speaker of the house of representatives. Criticism exists concerning the rules rather than concerning the man who enforces them. Tom Reed not only ruled the house, but rudely ruled it, at times. But his majority was slender, and he had to be a big boss, or no boss at all.

(Iowa Congressman Who Will Lead Attack on Reed Rules).

Whoever shall be chosen for the speakership when the new congress shall have convened on the first Monday of December, 1903, will in all probability be allowed the power of the appointment of the committees and committee chairmen; and that will be power enough for one man to wield over his fellow representatives. But he will not be allowed to command all legislation through the committee on rules. There is where the representatives will check the one-man power of which so many have complained during the past six years.

It is well remembered that Speaker Reed blandly smiled when a petition signed by a majority of the house of representatives was presented to him, praying for consideration of the bill for the Nicaraguan canal. Remember, a majority of the members of the national house of representatives—think of it! That majority had elected, had created the speaker, but under their rules those representatives were obliged to petition their creature, the speaker, and pray for permission to legislate as a majority desired to represent. And what came of it? Speaker Reed said that he would "give it consideration." He was as good as his word. He did give the matter consideration until the close of the congress, but he did not permit the majority to rule. He never allowed the bill to come before the house at all.

Now it does not require a constitutional lawyer to explain that the constitution of this republic of the people never intended that one man should throttle the representatives of the people, and prevent them from legislating. That is the stand which is taken by Col. Hepburn and a majority of the house; and that is the reason that it is easy to fore-

HON. CHAS. E. LITTLEFIELD.
(Maine Congressman Who Wants to Succeed Speaker Henderson).

see that the rules will be changed, so that no man who may occupy the chair of the speaker shall have such imperial power in this republic. It is barely possible that the house will name its own committees, as the senate does; but that reform is not so imminent.

So long as the speaker is permitted to name the committees and dole out the chairmanships there will be deals possible in contests for the speakership. For example, four years ago, a New York man was a candidate for the speakership, and if he had succeeded, a Kansas man would have taken his place as chairman of the committee on Indian affairs. Naturally enough the Kansas man supported the New York man for the speakership, and thereby consulted his own self interests.

Under existing rules no representative of the people is allowed to lift his voice in debate, no matter what outrages (according to his opinion) may be under contemplation. The speaker sits in his exalted position, and never sees nor hears any representative of the people who may clamor for recognition, unless the representative shall have previously called and stated his business and secured permission from the speaker to address the house. In that event, if the speaker fully understands the situation and agrees to "give recognition," as they term it, the representative of the sovereign people may be recognized and heard.

It will be news to a majority of readers that the representatives of the people do not present anything at all under existing rules in the house of representatives. The member of congress is regarded as a great man at home, but as he nears Washington he shrinks. When he gets here, he finds that he is only one of a small herd of individuals who have no rights whatever, except which are accorded charitably by the older members and the speaker.

Under existing rules every bill offered is referred to an appropriate committee for consideration. That looks well on paper. But the presiding officer scans the bills, and informs the chairman of each committee which bills shall be considered and which shall not be considered. To such an autocratic condition have the rules brought the house that not even before a committee of the house does a representative of the people have any chance of success, without the consent of the speaker. For example, you or some friend may have a bill providing for the payment of a claim arising out of the civil war. A bill is introduced and referred to the committee on war claims. Your bill may not amount to more than $1,000, and it may be a just claim. But the speaker tells the chairman of the committee that the claims in all similar bills amount to upwards of $9,000,000, and that none of those bills shall be reported. The chairman, who was appointed by the speaker, does as he is ordered; and your bill dies with all others by that peremptory order—no matter whether right and justice are on your side.

After the damnable outrage of the centuries, the villiany of all cycles of civilization, the explosion of the battleship Maine in Havana harbor, while all of our people were clamoring for vengeance, determined upon war to drive from this continent the nation that had requited our friendly visit with assassination, Speaker Reed refused the petitioners of the house permission to consider resolutions for the declaration of war. On that occasion the people rode over the speaker and all rules, because the provocation was so great.

But, ordinarily, the speaker rules congress, and the time is not far distant when those rules must be changed.

FOR EVENING WEAR.

Soft, Delicate Materials Are the Proper Thing.

Evening toilets are invariably made from soft fabrics, and silks which stand alone are no longer fashionable. Crepe de chine is an ideal material for evening wear and is now produced at quite reasonable prices, with all its softness and much of its silky effect retained. Pale delicate colorings are exquisite in crepe de chine, and either chiffon or lace with touches of colored velvet is lovely for trimming purposes.

A most stylish evening gown can be made from black crepe de chine and if arranged with a short, loose bolero cut low in the neck can be converted into a dinner or day gown by having one transparent slip and another with full tucked sleeves and a yoke.

This type of gown is most useful during the season and can be so arranged that the only expense arises from the slip bodices, which may easily be made at home and which do not take much material.

A dainty gown for a young girl is here shown. The material can be any dotted thin goods. It is made over pale blue silk and ornamented with narrow blue ribbons. JUDIC CHOLLET.

FASHION NOTES.

The New Tailor Made Suits—Accordion Plaited Flounces.

Accordion plaited flounces are being revived or the plaited skirt is set into a fancy yoke covering the hips and made perfectly tight fitting. Tightly shaped skirts of lace finished in deep scallops flow out over underskirts edged with many frills of chiffon or soft satin.

The new tailor made suits are models of daintiness, and none is complete without some trifling touch of embroidery applique.

Stiff costumes have been relegated to the past, together with other mannish styles. The costume of the moment is tucked, bloused and so designed that it shows to the best advantage the curves of a supple figure. Seven, nine and even eleven gored skirts are being used, and perpendicular tuckings and strappings are taking the place of the circular flounces women have grown tired of.

MOIRE BLOUSE.

Fancy collars and odd shaped revers of panne are combined with black broadcloth, and little fancy vests of flowered silk add to the dressiness of such costumes.

The shirt waist in the illustration is of pin dotted moire. The stock is of taffeta. JUDIC CHOLLET.

One of the Intelligent.

THE WORLD OF MILLINERY.

French Combinations of Color—Fur Hats.

The favorite color in Paris is the new cerise in a rather paler shade than of yore. This is mixed with the reddish pinks, which form a beautiful study in color. However, such a shade is not always becoming, and for more general wear there are delightful green and blue mixtures, with dashes of yellow, in beaver made up into large toques or small hats, the only decoration being a glace rosette or some silk tassels.

Smart toques, too, are made of cloth to match frocks, the brim lined with some dark colored velvet. Nearly all women are wise to keep rolls of dark velvet near the face. It is infinitely more becoming in the gray autumn days, and nothing is softer than velvet.

Hats of beaver, threaded through with glace ribbon, are extremely popular.

Fur hats will be more worn this winter than ever. The principal skins used are chinchilla, mink and squirrel.

A pretty chinchilla hat trimmed with two white ostrich plumes is shown in the sketch. JUDIC CHOLLET.

FUR GARMENTS.

They Are Made Up In Very Striking Fashions.

Fur garments are very sumptuous this year, or, rather, sumptuous looking, for the most inexpensive furs are now being made into ideally lovely garments. Women have hitherto looked with contempt upon marmot and squirrel, but these now figure in chic little boleros. Squirrel has to be treated with care and is greatly improved by the addition of some ermine edging and some good lace guipure.

There is a perfect craze for velvet, both plain and spotted, for day and evening wear.

The rough fur coats are mostly three-quarter length for motoring and other purposes. The more sumptuous forms of carriage wraps are full length, which is a wise proceeding, as they can then be used for evening coats.

EVENING GOWN OF BLACK NET.

There is a fancy for brocade linings, but most people remain faithful to the pure white and pearl gray satins.

Furriers are adopting the full picturesque sleeves. Some fall over the wrists into a neat cuff, while the long carriage coats show fascinating ruffles of lace inside the bell sleeves.

The pretty decollete gown shown is of spotted black net over white silk. The skirt is particularly smart.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

Literature as a Trade.

To write successfully means to serve a long and hard apprenticeship. It means to do many things badly in order to learn to do a few things well; to read many authors, and good ones; to live with words till one knows their value, and it means, too, that one must know something about the reality of life. In short, writing is a trade, just like bookbinding or typesetting. It is different, of course; it has a higher side, we believe, but to think only of the higher side and ignore the trade part of it is to prepare oneself for a great disappointment. Decidedly the novice should not expect to earn pin money by setting down her day dreams when successful authors are obliged to slog daytime and nighttime in order to learn the mechanics of the art.—Woman's Home Companion.

A SUCCESSFUL RUSE.

BY WILLIAM P. BROWN.

"Jack," observed the Colonel, letting his hand hover irresolutely over the chessboard, "has it ever occurred to you that it would be an extremely nice arrangement if those two children of ours would fall in love with each other? You and I are getting along in years—eh, old friend?—and I'd like to see Lila settled in a home of her own before the order comes for taps. There is no one in the world I would rather give my daughter to than Billie; the boy is white clear through—he could scarcely be anything different, though, and his fathers' son. I can't imagine why they don't," continued the Colonel, argumentatively; "they like each other all right, and are always together—riding, playing golf or something—but never a thought of building a nest of their own. Just listen to that, will you?" he broke off.

Through the library doorway came the blithe notes of a rollicking duet, sung by two happy, care-free young voices. A tender smile blossomed on Lawyer Reed's clean-shaven lips. "Bless their hearts!" he said, softly. "Nothing would give me greater satisfaction or happiness, Phil, than to have what you mentioned come to pass. I've had the same thought myself, and hinted at something of the same kind to Billie—once."

"Well?" said Colonel Bradlee, tentatively.

"The young rascal laughed at me; said the idea was absurd; that while Lila and he were the best of chums, and all that, there was no thought of any nonsense of that sort between them. Billie hinted," went on the Lawyer, ruefully, "that I had better stick to chess, and let matchmaking alone."

"Lila appears to be of about the same opinion," remarked the Colonel, dryly. "She called me an old goose to be thinking of such things. I call it flying in the face of Providence"—blocking an unexpected onslaught on his queen—"for if ever two people were made for each other, it was those two, and they haven't the sense to see it."

John Reed nodded, then all at once smote his knee softly with his hand. "Phil," he said, lowering his voice, "do you remember that white mule we used to have at headquarters—in '65?"

"Ben Johnson's mule?" replied the Colonel, with a reminiscent grin. "Of course I do. The boys used to say that when Ben wanted that mule to go anywhere he'd head him in the opposite direction, yell 'Git up!' at him, and old Caesar would wheel and run the other way like a deer."

"Young human nature and mule nature are a good similar sometimes," remarked the Lawyer, significantly, leaning back in his chair.

Vague comprehension began to dawn in Colonel Bradlee's countenance. "Do you think we might work something of the sort, Jack?" he queried, eagerly. "I'd do most anything to bring it out, short of putting my girl on bread and water—or not kissing her."

John Reed rose to his feet. "Philip Bradlee," he said, in a serious voice, "prepare to have your innermost feelings outraged. I'm going to insult you—for goodness' sake, Phil," he whispered, as he perceived a look of blank astonishment sweep over his friend's face, "don't look like that; it's only a bluff! Play your part man, and don't give me away."

He swept the chess-board off the table with a bang. "Colonel Bradlee," he cried loudly, angrily, "this is not the first time I have caught you trying to take an unfair advantage, but it's the last game I'll play with a—a—"

Something choked his speech, but the Colonel rose to the situation like a hero. "Leave my house," he roared, "you insulting—er—er—pettifogger!" he wound up, triumphantly.

There was a sudden rush into the library, and a dismayed chorus, "Father!—Colonel Bradlee!"

"You too, sir!" yelled the Colonel. "Don't you dare set foot in my house again! Lila—if I know of your having anything more to do with the son of John Reed, I'll—I'll—disown you! They're a pair of—"

John Reed grasped his father's arm. "Come, father," he said, proudly, "Colonel Bradlee has forgotten that he is a gentleman."

"I'll never consent," said Lila dolefully, as she was dancing with Billie Reed beside the pleasure-harbor in her father's yard a week later, and even a disinterested specta or would have needed no second glance to have shown him that the wondrous light—which never yet was on sea or land—was all around them.

"What if they don't?" replied Billie stoutly. "They ought to be ashamed of themselves, anyway, trying to keep us apart because they've quarreled! I owe them a debt of gratitude for it, though. I've found out how blind I was—and it's given me the right to—"

"Billie!" cried a muffled voice, "somebody'll surely see us!"

"Let 'em!" replied Billie. "Now listen, Mrs. William Reed-to-be—it's no use for us to wait for parental approval, father and Colonel Bradlee won't as much as bow to each other! Let's take matters into our own hands, and get married right now—this afternoon! Then we can tell 'em, and they can storm as much as they like, and they can't alter anything. Besides, I don't believe they would hold out forever. We'll slip out the back gate, and go down to the church-study on Carver street. I saw the Reverend Tisdale going in when I came over." Billie fumbled in his pocket and produced a formidable-looking document. "I got a special license this morning," he announced, in triumphant tones.

Lila Bradlee opened her lips to say no—to expostulate—hesitated, and was lost.

The Colonel was setting up the chessmen as his old friend joined him in the library. "They've gone to the minister's!" he gasped. "Don't that beat all the rapid transit you ever heard of?"

The Colonel crossed to the buffet, and performed sundry mysterious rites with a decanter and glasses. "To the children's future happiness," he said, solemnly.

The newly wedded pair paused on the familiar threshold, and stared in utter bewilderment at the two erstwhile bitter enemies placidly playing chess. "Father," cried Billie, "you here?"

"Howdy do, Billie," remarked the Colonel, rising affably. "Been getting married? Your father just came over to congratulate you, Lila—" The Colonel's voice turned husky all at once, and he opened wide his arms. "Come here, girlie," he cried, "it's all right!" and in a second his daughter's head was resting on his shoulder and her arms were around his neck.—Farm and Fireside.

GOSSIP THAT IS OF INTEREST TO THE SPORTS AND ATHLETES

There are two things in the world of shooters that are being discussed wherever there is a shotgun or rifle—the calling off of the Grand American handicap shoot for 1903 and the crusade of old-time marksmen against the foolish practice of "William Tell shooting." The slaughter of pigeons for the biggest trap shooting event in the world—the Grand American—has resulted in the crystallizing of public sentiment against the continuance of the alleged sport. Reading the handwriting on the wall, the promoters of this big event, which might have had 600 entries next year, gathered in the office of a powder concern and decided to abandon the shoot on its present lines. The bridges were not all burned, however, for if the G. A. H. is to be revived it may be in the nature of a target shoot or an event in which a certain kind of artificial bird is used.

The Grand American handicap was shot at Kansas City last spring, and prominent ministers of the Gospel attended the slaughter to see just how the marksmen killed the birds. And for what? A share in a money purse that might have gone with a clay pigeon or glass ball contest. The east is irretrievably arrayed against any continuance of the shooting events in which pigeons freed from traps are shot down before they really find out their bearings. Conservative men who love the hunt in the forest, on the plains and in the wilderness, refuse to see wherein there is any "sport" in a shoot that results in the wanton destruction of so many pigeons as do these annual "races."

"Cannot a shooter have as much sport out of breaking clay pigeons as he can out of slaughtering live pigeons that are perfectly helpless when they come out of a trap?" That is the query that was asked so generally that men who loved sport and hated needless slaughter gave the "tip" that the public was sick and tired of pigeon shooting. If pigeons were capable of holding a convention they would meet and pass resolutions thanking the friends of the feathered victims for their great part in uplifting shooting for "sport."

It is not unlikely that the police powers given to mayors in all cities will be taken up by the executives when itinerant show people attempt to give "William Tell" exhibitions, more or less skillful. The recent death of a man who held the apple on his head while his partner shot it off has started anew the campaign against this foolish phase of sport. Annie Oakley, whose marksmanship is known in two hemispheres, has come out squarely against the "fool-killing exhibition." The little woman who can shoot almost as well as any man who ever "drew a bead," says the William Tell act is worn out, foolish, should be prevented and will be.

The majority of parents in casting about for good avocations for their boys, never give a thought to the race track and the advantages the life of a jockey afford. They are opposed to the "sport of kings" and its associations because of the gambling element that enters into the life. But it is more apparent now than ever that the business of riding race horses is not over crowded—that there is no business in the world so alluring to the young man seeking a chance to make a lot of money. The premier jockey of 1903 will have a retainer of $30,000, and some exceptionally good rider who is in great demand may make as much as the president of the United States.

The tremendous demand for capable jockeys has never been adequately met: doubtless it never will be. But the openings are there if the bright young boys who love horses and take naturally to riding only will take advantage of them. The law is a profession so crowded that a lad will work his way through college to get a sheepskin that may not bring him in enough in five years to buy his clothes. Yet that same young man would not think of turning his ability to riding race horses. Cannot a young man engage in the business, elect to take mounts for millionaires and remain honest, dignified and unsullied by the breath of betting scandals? Cannot a young man seek preferment in the racing world—make it a business the same as a clerkship, etc—and after earning a snug sum, retire to take up something more to his liking without feeling that he had done wrong?

The sober truth is that not one lad in ten thousand who goes into the riding business, often from the slums of the big cities from which it is a blessing to rescue him, is mentally equipped to make a success of jockeying.

The clear brain, the desire to be honest and absolutely conscientious—all make up the prescription of success in the jockey world. The employer wants merit, and he will pay for it. The road to success in the jockey world is strewed with wrecks, it is true, but the fact remains that the demand for good riders is so great that it is within the bounds of possibility for the schoolboy who is a natural rider to enter the business and in one season rise to such a pinnacle that millionaire racing men will be bidding for his services at $20,000 a season.

In no part of the United States are there so many Virginia deer as in the southwestern part of Texas, in the country bordered by the Rio Grande and covered with a blanket, as it were, of dense mesquite and chaparral growth. Up in Wisconsin's northern woods, where the officers of the law have afforded the deer good protection for years, this game may be about as plentiful as it is in Texas, but the pot hunters who use dogs to trail the deer there have taken the edge off the sport for the few real sportsmen who try to make legitimate kills. Southwestern Texas offers an inducement to the sportsman. He cannot use a modern high-power rifle down in Texas, but with a common magazine rifle of 44 caliber and loaded with black powder and soft bullets, the hunter may get from six to a dozen fine specimens of deer every day he cares to tread the chaparral.

Why can't the Nimrod use a high-power rifle down there? Is there a written law? No is the answer to the latter question. But the shotgun with buckshot or the soft bullet is effective, and the danger of killing a friend who is stalking through the mesquite, perhaps only 50 rods away, is too great to permit of the use of the rifles that kill at a great distance. The city hunter who takes a small caliber, high-power rifle to that country is warned by the natives.

You have to be a real laborer to kill deer there, though. That adds to the sport. It requires earnest effort to fight mesquite growth all day. There are mesquite growth so heavy and thorny that no hunter could penetrate. The deer know these sections, but are rarely shot in them. With the instinct that passes all understanding, these beautiful creatures tread the almost unseen paths in the mesquite and find glades in which succulent grazing may be found. It is the habit at this season of the year for the deer to begin feeding early in the day—at sunrise—and to stop at ten o'clock. Then they begin to seek sequestered spots to wait for the late afternoon. You may hear a deer going through the chaparral, but you might try a hundred times without making a kill.

The favorite glades must be sought out. It is as ticklish work hunting the glades as it is actually stalking in the northern country. The gun has to be carried so carefully that it may not catch one thorn, and each step has to be properly judged that the sportsman will often work harder in going through a few acres of chaparral that he would in climbing a canyon in the Rockies for a goat. A glade of say a quarter of an acre in area is sighted. The glade may be "eaten out." If so, the hunter may at once resume his journey without the fear that deer might visit it soon after his departure. Those who have shot deer in Texas do not worry over the cost of transportation.

The schedule has included more events than usual and the interest in them has increased very much. The active season will close today. No doubt the course will be kept open while the weather remains favorable, thus giving enthusiastic members an opportunity to keep up the fascinating game for awhile longer.

There was an interesting game of golf at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course Tesuday afternoon, when a team of five from Leal's School met a similar team from St. Paul's School. The visiting team was victorious by the score of 20 to 8. Robert Abbott was the only member of the home team to score. The summary:

Leal.		St. Paul.
N. P. Rogers	0	Murphy	3
Robert Abbott	8	Hartwell	0
D. H. Barrows	0	Mallous	7
G. W. Abbott	0	Knowles	0
Leslie Hallock	0	Booth	10
	8		20

Considerable interest is being manifested in the final play for the Golf Committee cup which takes place today on the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course. At present it lies between E. T. Newkirk and H. deP. Wright as to who gets the cup. The former is slightly in the lead and many believe that owing to the strong game Mr. Newkirk has been putting up, he will win out. On the other hand, Mr. Wright is prophesied as the winner. Both of these contestants have their friends who hope that their man will get the cup. It is settled that W. T. Glenney will get the Boys' cup. He has such a lead that no other contestant can beat him out. Today will close the active season at the club.

ON THE GRIDIRON.

Frank Magee, the well-known football player, will play with the I. C. T. team at Elizabeth, today.

Robert Hakes, of the I. C. T. team, will be unable to play today, on account of a sprained ankle, which he received at the game on Thanksgiving Day.

Douglass and Marsh, of Scotch Plains, will play on the Orange Field Club consolidated football eleven, today, in its game with the Long Branch Club.

The I. C. T. football team will play Company C., of Elizabeth, at Elizabeth today. The local players will play with a crippled team and substitutes but they are hopeful of winning the game as they have been paying much attention to team work since their last game with the New Brunswick Y. M. C. A. The local players will leave this city on the 1:30 trolley.

The North Plainfield A. C. will play the last game of football this afternoon, with the North Plainfield Consolidated team on the Crescent Oval. The game will begin at 3 o'clock. The N. P. A. C. has not been scored against this season, and is confident of winning this game. Immediately after the football game, the candidates for the hockey team, will meet at the club rooms for practice.

ROD AND GUN.

J. Lynch, William Callahan and Frank Day went hunting near Long Hill yesterday and returned with a large bag of game including rabbits, and several squirrels.

SCHOLASTIC HOCKEY LEAGUE

SEVERAL JERSEY SCHOOLS ARE WILLING TO JOIN IT.

Game Promises to be Quite Popular Among Schools of This State This Winter.

There has been a movement on foot in New Jersey during the past few months to organize a hockey league among the schools in this State and already there has been approval expressed on every side.

Leal's School, of this city, the Montclair High and the Morristown School have already signified their intention of joining the league if it is started. Hockey has found little favor in New Jersey schools in the past but that the game will be popular this season is assured from the fact that the New York and Brooklyn schools are devoting much time to the sport. The New York schools as a rule are anxious to arrange matches and some of them are the Columbia Grammar, Cutler School, Dwight, Polytechnic Institute, De La Salle, Brooklyn High, Erasmus and Pratt Institute. Now is the time to start a hockey team and once started it will be an easy matter to arrange any number of games with the teams named above and many others besides.

JERSEY SHOALS THAT COULD BE RECLAIMED

Two Places Where Valuable Property Could be Made Close to New York.

ONE IN NEWARK BAY

OTHER IN WESTERN SIDE OF NEW YORK BAY, NEAR COMMUNIPAW.

Some Reasons Why This Work Has Not Been Done, Despite the Fact That the Capitalists Realize it is Very Valuable.

The work of enlarging Governor's Island, by which about eighty acres of water, in the form of a triangle, extending southerly to a blunt point, with Governor's Island as the base, are to be bulkheaded and filled in, has revived interest in similar projects in this State. There are two extensive shoals which many people in New Jersey think might be reclaimed, to the great advantage of commercial, manufacturing and other interests. These are the westerly side of New York Bay, from Communipaw to Constable Hook, and the westerly side of Newark Bay, from the government dike near the mouth of the Passaic river to the Singer works at Elizabethport.

This area, of four and a quarter miles in length by two miles in width, comprising about 5,500 acres, is a shoal having an average depth of not more than six feet. These waters are of no present use except for the anchorage of light draft boats, and there can be no development of commercial and navigation interests under existing conditions except at enormous expense. The only commercial use that has been made of this area within the last forty years is that of a small tract, about 800 feet in width, owned and operated by the National Storage Company. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company is now engaged in filling in a considerable tract of land at Greenville, and the New Jersey Central is doing some filling in at its terminus.

It is only by dredging and filling in that these lands under water can be improved, and the government has made this work burdensome and costly by refusing to extend out to a reasonable distance the solid filling line. It placed back the line for solid filling fixed by the New Jersey riparian commissioners about 2,000 feet, thus making it necessary to dredge through this space on the way out to navigable water. The present Secretary of War, Elihu Root, having had his attention called to the matter, has restored the riparian commissioners' line, and improvements are now being made out to that line. But even this leaves a space of nearly a mile to be dredged through before deep water can be reached. The New York Harbor Line Board opposed the proposition to fill in more of this area, on the ground that it would dangerously diminish the "tidal prism," a reason which it seems to have lost sight of at Governor's Island.

The situation in Newark Bay is somewhat similar. On the westerly side of the bay, extending from the mouth of the Passaic River to the Arthur Kill, is a mud flat, about 3,000 feet in width, a very large part of it bare at low water. It is an almost insuperable barrier to the commercial development of the western shore of the bay. If this flat were reclaimed, bulkheaded and filled in out to navigable water, there is no reason why this shore should not be as desirable for manufacturing and other business purposes as the shore of the Arthur Kill.

As a matter of fact, several great capitalists, business men and corporations stand ready to make great improvements there whenever the government permits this mud flat to be reclaimed. The character of the upland is the same as that on the kill, and the Newark Bay shore has the advantage of proximity to New York.

It also has better railroad facilities. The objections made by the Harbor Line Board to the extension of the solid filling line along this shore seem absurd to those familiar with the situation. They urged that Newark Bay would in the end be reduced to one-third its original proportions if the desired authority were given, and were also asked and granted for the easterly shore. As even this would still leave Newark Bay 600 feet wider than the Hudson River at Weehawken, and 1,000 feet wider than the East River, the obvious and conclusive answer is, What of it? The Harbor Line Board also objected that "The beauty and advantages of the bay and picturesqueness of the bounding shores will be destroyed." These picturesque bounding shores consist of two or three miles of salt marsh. Capital and enterprise are waiting to develop this region, and they cannot long be halted and held in check by such considerations as these.

Tree Mysteries.

Nobody seems to know what cause it is which produces those delicate and beautiful lines in maple, known as bird's-eye. Some people think they come from the hundreds of little branches which shoot out all over the trunk of the tree as soon as a clearing is made around it. Expert timbermen say that is not the case. The only way to tell a bird's-eye maple tree is to cut it. There are no outward signs by which one can judge. The late George M. Pullman many years ago was offered a mahogany log for $3,000 to be cut into veneers. It was supposed to be a very fine piece of wood, but this could only be determined by cutting it. He declined the offer, but agreed to take the log cut into veneers for what it was worth. The owner had it sawed and was paid $7,000 for the veneers. Anyone who can discover the secret of determining the interior nature of wood from the outside will have a fortune.—Railroad Gazette.

Threw Away the Cigar.

"Tom," she said, softly, as she looked trustingly into his eyes.

"What is it, dearest?" he asked, tenderly.

"Don't you think, Tom," she said, slowly, "that you had better throw away that cigar?"

"Do you object to smoke, my dear?" he asked.

"Oh, no, dear Tom; not at all," she replied, quickly. "I rather like the smell of a good cigar, but—but—"

"But what, dearest?"

"But you are so forgetful, Tom, and—and—if you should forget to take the cigar out of your mouth you might—even a slight burn on my cheek, you know, would cause comment."

The cigar was thrown away, and a minute later there was nothing but a blush on the fair cheek to indicate that Tom had taken a broad hint.—N. Y. Herald.

Some High Falutin'.

As a sample of loyal eloquence this effort by an Australian schoolmaster will be hard to beat: "King Edward is now sovereign over a continent, 100 peninsulas, 500 promontories, 100 lakes, 2,000 rivers and 10,000 islands. He waves his hand and 900,000 warriors march to battle to conquer or die; he bends his head, and at the signal 1,000 ships of war and 100,000 sailors perform his bidding on the ocean. He walks upon the earth, and 30,000,000 human beings feel the least pressure of his foot. The Assyrian empire was not so populous. The Persian empire was not so powerful. The Carthaginian empire was not so much dreaded. The Spanish empire was not so widely diffused. The Roman empire was weak in comparison, and Greece was a small village." No wonder the people cheered.—Pearson's Weekly.

Biscuit Was Very Hot.

A citizen invited the pastor to dine with him recently. At the table beside the citizen's wife sat their four-year-old daughter, before whom the host had frequently but thoughtlessly made some profane remarks. The child was given a biscuit, but dropped it quickly, which caused the preacher to ask if it was hot. "Yes," replied the child, innocently, "it's hot as the d—l." "You must get a new nurse for that child," said the host, turning to his wife. The pastor agreed with him.—Chicago Chronicle.
